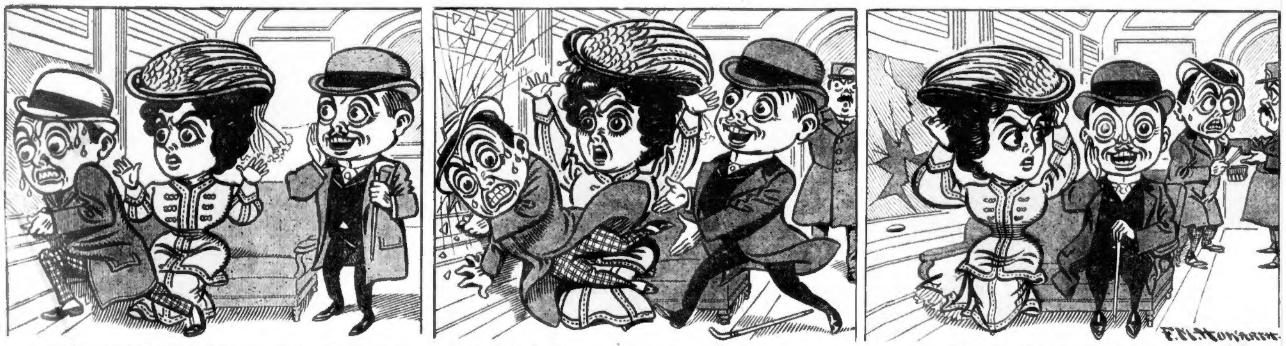
LEANDER: "Lulu, dear, not on your life! ME open that window? Well, I guess not!"

2. LULU: "Oh, here is Charley! How fortunate! Charley, will you please open this window for me? Leander is too lazy to be gallant."
CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "It will give ME the greatest pleasure to serve you, Lulu."

3. LULU: "Oh, Charley, how kind of you. I'm surprised at Leander."
CHARLEY: "I'm your most devoted slave, Lulu. Ah, it's rather tight."
LEANDER (aside): "Go ahead, Smarty. I'll get out of the way."



4. CHARLEY: "Confound this blasted thing! What's the matter with it anyway? It has GOT to come!"
LULU: "Why, Charley, I'm surprised at such temper."
LEANDER (aside): "I can see HIS finish."

5. CHARLEY: "I WILL—— ! ! x x ! ! x x —— —— !"
LULU: "Oh! Oh! Oh! Oh, Leander help me! Charley has gone crazy!"
LEANDER: "Yes, dearest, I am here."

6. LULU: "Oh, Leander, this is awful! To think he would let his fearful temper get the best of him in that manner. I never want to see him again."
CONDUCTOR: "Yes, pay up, or I'll have you arrested for disorderly conduct."
LEANDER (aside): "Ha, that's the time he got it for butting in. I KNEW that window couldn't be raised."

Childrens Dresses BY MRS. OSBORN

Creator of Fashions for the Fashionable
Women of America

New styles for children tend to greater simplicity than ever before.

Richness of handwork and fine materials take the place of the "fussy" little frock mothers were wont to affect.

To be really smart, the child who goes to an entertainment must leave her sash at home.

Artificiality to be avoided in gowning children.

Smart, sweet, little Miss Simplicity the perfect vogue.

A — A smart model for mull or fine lawn party dress, embroidered by hand in raised satin-stitch

B—A fetching frock of mull or fine lawn for a little girl's function made in embroidered and lace outlined panels.

C — A most dainty dress of heavy linen elaborated with featherstitching and Irish lace.

E — A filmy little guimpe, box-pleated and with lace in the neck and cuffs.

F—A beautiful little white cloth coat with its white fur collar, that any mother may make if she has imagination.

SIMPLICITY is the keynote in the make-up of all smart frocks for little girls, but, like the simplicity to be found in clothes for grown up people, it is a quality that costs.

Fine handwork has become a necessity upon the clothing of a well dressed child, and in this connection English smocking—which is the daintiest of its kind—is steadily growing in favor, particularly upon frocks for very little children and babies.

Another form of fine needlework which is in favor for decorating children's clothes is English cut work, in simple, cut out designs, with embroidered or buttonholed edges. Unobtrusive designs and fineness of workmanship are to be sought in preference to patterns that immediately attract the eye by their almost startling richness.

Where lace is employed it is used in narrow widths of fine inserting and edging, preferably Valenciennes, which always seems particularly suitable to children's clothes and which launders well. When heavier laces are used they are employed sparingly and are often relieved—as in the case of the gown illustrated—by embroidery or some other form of dainty needlework.

Clothes.

For little girls of from six to twelve years of age frocks are principally made with belts at the waist line, instead of some distance below that point, as last season. The little skirts are full, and so are the slightly bloused waists, and all belts of fancy frocks are trimmed in some fashion to take the place of the sashes or fancy belts which children were wont to wear.

The present style of dressing a child with as few unnecessary furbelows as possible is not only sensible, but adds much to the attractive appearance of a child and to its sense of comfort.

Under this rule of simple dressing comes the arrangement of a child's hair. It should never be frizzled or curled by artificial means.

Hair that curls naturally is always pretty on a child, but the distorting of straight hair merely makes the little one look unnatural and therefore unattractive.

The hair should be tied at the sides or on top with simple bows of wide satin ribbon, where it needs such confinement to keep it in order.

Little Miss Sweet Simplicity in Her Shoes and Stockings.

Shoes and stockings, too, are worn in the simplest style by children whose mothers know how to dress them in good taste. Plain, fine silk stockings and patent leather shoes with flat black bows are the rule for evening wear at children's parties.

This is the season of the year when children are given quite a number of little parties and the making of frocks for these occasions occupies a good deal of a mother's attention.

The little dresses are invariably made with a low neck and short sleeves and are, just as invariably, worn over a dainty guimpe. This protects the neck and throat from draughts and prevents a child from catching cold.

The short sleeves are made either with puffs or in open, flowing effects. The latter are very pretty either with or without the full sleeve of the guimpe underneath.

Needless to say, white is the prevailing color for children's clothes. Even their little outdoor coats and hats are usually white.

The Beloved Little Ones in Their First Little Going-out Frocks.

School and outdoor frocks for play often depart from this rule where a mother has to consider the difficulty and expense of having quantities of white clothes kept fresh and clean.

For day wear linen, in different weights and degrees of fineness, is a favorite fabric, and for party frocks fine lawns and mulls are very smart.

Tucks and pleats are used to a great extent in adorning small frocks; but embroidery, at the present moment, is much smarter than anything else.

The models illustrated on this page are suitable for lawn, mull and linen frocks.

One of the sweetest little dresses imaginable is shown in Figure A. The material is fine lawn and the top skirt is made in deep embroidered points with embroidered polka dots scattered over the inside of the points. The skirt is gathered full to a belt covered with Irish lace, and the points of the rich upper skirt fall over a wide band of Irish lace which finishes the bottom of the underskirt, which is, of course, of the same material. The "cunning" little short sleeves are edged with a narrow trimming of Irish lace, while the bloused waist has a delicate embroidered design worked over the front in a festoon pattern. Over the sleeves fall deep points embroidered in large solid flowers, which are a continuation of a bertha of the same design that droops from a round-cut neck and decorates the upper part of the bodice. Although the working of these large blossoms is very elaborate and rich, together with the other designs mingled with them and the little irregular scallops upon the edges of the large ones, the dress suggests simplicity rather than elaborateness, and attracts by its artistic beauty more than through its pronounced richness of workmanship and materials.

The Smartest New Hints for Gowning Our Little Girls.

Another fascinating frock which conveys an even greater suggestion of simplicity, while being wrought with just as much care, is shown in Figure B. This dainty creation is also of fine lawn, and has the lower part of the skirt arranged in panel effects with a one-sided plan carried out by lapping the embroidery of one panel over the side of the next and letting each one end in a point. Four of these deep points constitute one panel, which is outlined by insertions of Valenciennes lace that slope in something of the shape of a triangle up on the skirt. The effect is exceedingly odd and original. The little skirt is shirred at the top and gathered full to the belt. The embroidery along the little pointed panels is put on more in the style of a border, with a little open outline above a border of little scallops. At the bottom these fall over a closely knife-pleated ruffle. Both points and ruffle are edged with Valenciennes lace.

The waist and skirt have a panel running up the front, narrowing at the belt and widening at the lower part of the skirt and top of the bodice. These panels are formed of rows of Valenciennes inserting, alternating with groups of tucks and bands of the lawn. The skirt panel is framed by a lace ruffle, and that on the waist by lace-edged embroidered points, which continue from a deep bertha of embroidered panels similar to those on the skirt, only smaller. These diminish in size as they approach the belt, which is of embroidery. The low neck of the dress is embroidered on the edge and across the top of the waist panel.

Wide, short sleeves are formed of embroidered panel points, which flutter open at every moment like the petals of a flower.

The smart little dress shown in Figure C is built on quite a different plan. It is of heavy but rich linen, and has a skirt finished with a deep hem. All the elaboration is upon the waist and cuffs. The top of the hem is featherstitched in heavy embroidery floss, and the belt is trimmed in the same fashion, with the featherstitching forming points in wavy pattern along the centre and with dots embroidered in the plain spaces. To this belt is gathered a full skirt and a moderately full bloused waist. All the little waists are quite full to match the full skirts which little tots are wearing this season, and which fashion demands for them quite as much as for their mothers.

The belt is of ribbed pique, and a band of the same material worked in featherstitching and dots and edged with buttonhole loops is set across the front of the blouse, only reaching to the underarm seams. The round neck is finished with a deep collar of pique, embroidered and inset with heavy lace, and further elaborated with featherstitching and buttonhole loops. Tabs extend down each side the front, with wide Irish lace between the tabs and collar and around the edges of the collar in an irregular design, which deepens over the top of the arm. The little sleeves are full puffs gathered to a band, decorated in the same fashion as that across the front of the waist. The sleeves are short, and the waist buttons in the back with cute little covered buttons of white.

In figure D is illustrated still another style of dress in a heavy quality of white linen. The skirt is gathered full to the belt and is finished with a deep hem. The belt is braided in quite an elaborate design, interspersed with French knots. The little waist is loose and rather full and is decorated with a band of braiding and embroidery, framed in tucks, which passes over the shoulder and extends to the belt in front and back along the sides of the bodice. The tucks are of the same width as the decorated band. A tiny square yoke of braiding and dots is set in the front and back of the neck, merging into a stock of the same sort, finished at the top with a band of very open lace. A piece of open lace is set across the front below the little yoke, and this runs into a deep scallop of embroidery and braid, with irregular points at the bottom, that decorates the front of the blouse in a fashion at once very smart and very original.

Medium wide sleeves are shaped to a little cuff of embroidery and braiding, with shallow points on the edge finished with open lace. This little dress, like the others, is fastened in the back with small white buttons fastened with lace worked loops. The beauty of these dresses lies in the originality of their designs, and in the fine handwork upon them. The handwork enables one to give those little touches of irregularity of outline, preserving a uniformity of detail, which are so smart at present. One can insert a bit of lace into an embroidered design with a few stitches, and so introduce a charming novelty in decoration. There is economy as well as beauty in these little touches, for it enables a woman to make use of all sorts of odd bits of trimming which in times past were wont to be thrown into the waste basket.

That children have dainty little shirt waists made for them is something of a surprise to mothers who have their children's clothes made all in one piece. These dainty little waists are usually worn as a guimpe; hence their decoration is all in the top of the neck and in the lower part of the sleeves. One such pretty creation is illustrated in figure E, a waist of fine lawn, very sheer and soft, made quite simply, and box pleated from the neck part of the way down. From the termination of these box pleats the waist is full and loose and helps to hold out any outer waist under which it may be worn, although it is a perfect garment in itself without the addition of an outer waist.

The stock is of very open Irish crochet lace with a little edge like tatting, and which many term hedebo work. Both hedebo work and tatting give the same effect in these little three-hole points. The full sleeves are gathered to a tiny edge of open Flemish lace, in an inserting, above a box-pleated cuff, edged with a band of Irish crochet lace finished as the collar is, and buttoned at the back with small covered white buttons and buttonhole loops.

Another pretty way in which to make such a guimpe is to pleat or box pleat the blouse from the neck down for a distance of seven or eight inches and gather the blouse to a belt. Make a stock of Valenciennes inserting with an edging of the same lace. The sleeve has a box-pleated top, with two rows of Valenciennes lace forming a cuff, with the addition of three squares of open lace and a band with a design of featherstitching in the middle and a lace edge. This deep cuff is buttoned along the inside seam with tiny white buttons and buttonhole loops. Across the front of the sleeve, just below the elbow, are four short tucks, running off into a point at each end. These cause the back of the sleeve to be very baggy.

A child's clothes should be loose, light and comfortable, and this includes their coats, a good model of which is shown in figure F.

This coat is of white cloth, made in a box cut and double breasted. It has two rows of big white pearl buttons down the front and a large collar of white Siberian fox fur. A muff is worn to match this collar, and with it is worn a large white hat of panne velvet, with a bunch of crumpled velvet in front and two long white plumes curling upon the brim around the crown.

This style of hat is handsome but quite simple, as a child's hat should be.

I would say to mothers who want their children to appear smartly dressed to select good materials, make them up with a bit of fine needlework, and in the simplicity of cut and in all things allow the child to appear as natural as possible.

A LITTLE QUEEN WHO SELLS GOOD BUTTER.

QUEEN WILHELMINA of Holland has gone into the dairy business and is now making money by selling milk and butter. Her first step in this direction was when she induced her husband, Prince Henry, to buy several cows, which were placed on the rich lands surrounding the castle of Loo. The cows prospered exceedingly, and the Queen was so well pleased with the success of the experiment that she instructed the managers of her estates to make a tour of the stock farms and purchase the best animals that could be obtained in Holland. This they did, and sent the herd to the castle of Loo.

A dairy was established in connection with the royal castle, and now butter and milk are sold in large quantities from the Queen's establishment. She herself devotes considerable time to directing and inspecting the work of the dairy, and it has become her most absorbing hobby. She determined that the dairy should be not only self-supporting but profitable, and she is now realizing a neat little sum for pin money from it every month.

HOW THEY SAVED POOR LITTLE CORNELIUS!

“Mike” the Rabbit, Was Sewed ALIVE to the Boy's Injured Leg and Fed and Nursed During One of the Most Remarkable Surgical Operations Ever Known.

CORNELIUS POST, a fifteen-year-old boy, of Passaic, N. J., owes his life to a rabbit. The grafting of the little animal's skin upon the child's leg saved him not only from amputation of the leg, but from blood poisoning that would have ended his life.

The unique operation took place at St. Mary's Hospital, Passaic, and was performed by Dr. H. C. Fox, the house surgeon, assisted by Dr. H. C. Reynolds, of Passaic, and Dr. James Crooks and Dr. F. D. Vreeland, of Paterson, three weeks ago.

For twenty-four hours the live rabbit and the sick boy were joined together, closely as the Siamese twins, the blood from the rabbit's veins flowing into those of the boy, while a large strip of skin from the rabbit's back was slowly fastening itself upon the boy's muscles in what is known as the "healing on" process.

The rabbit lay quite quiet except when for an instant its wild nature would assert itself and the strong hind legs would kick powerfully. But there was always a nurse sitting beside the bed to grasp and hold the unquiet legs, and the meek little animal was quickly patient again.

The boy, looking down at his little bedfellow and companion in suffering, pulled the long ears gently with his fingers.

"Poor Mike," sighed the boy.

"Poor boy," the rabbit would have said if he could.

Administering an Anaesthetic to the Rabbit Before the Operation.

The boy watched interestedly while the rabbit breakfasted on bits of celery, and "Mike" stared with blinking eyes while the boy drank his gruel. When the boy lunched on beef tea the rabbit nibbled raw carrots.

The rabbit was quieter than the boy. Twice when he was coming back into the real world from the world of dreams into which he had been sent by chloroform he squeaked a faint little protest, like the cry of a tame duck. After that the rabbit was silent. Not so the boy. He cried heartily and angrily, as young creatures with powerful lungs do when the pain is greatest. But there was no doubt of the sympathy of the boy for the rabbit and the rabbit for the boy.

When, after a long day and night of companionship, the surgeon came and cut away the rabbit, leaving the strip of rabbit skin firmly attached to the boy's leg, the boy cried pitifully, for "Mike" was dead.

It was one of the most interesting and successful surgical operations ever performed. The grafting of a piece of human skin that has been removed from one living subject to another is one of the triumphs of modern surgery that has been accomplished so often as to be almost commonplace, but this is the first time that a wild animal's blood has been injected into human veins and the flesh and skin of one of the lower animals transferred to a human body. Yet in two weeks the boy was well enough to be up and dressed and go about the hospital at will. He will live and will not be a cripple, all of which, he says, he owes to the rabbit.

The boy was prepared for the operation by a careful bath, and by tonics administered for weeks before the operation. The healthiest rabbit that could be found was chosen. Dr. Fox, the young Philadelphia physician who performed the operation, chose him from among a dozen others. He chose this one because it was the youngest and plumpest and healthiest. The rabbit was shaved all over and wrapped in guaze and the boy dandled it playfully in its wrappings as a little girl plays with a doll.

Dr. Fox believed that neither boy nor rabbit would be nervous during the operation if they were properly introduced before it began. After the rabbit had been presented he was carried into another room and placed on a table, while one of the surgeons quietly administered an anaesthetic. In an instant almost the rabbit was unconscious of what was happening around him. He did not know that a surgeon, the same that carried him away from his little home in the garden, was cutting a long strip of his shaven skin, straight from his neck to his tail, a strip three inches wide and eight inches long.

The strip was flayed away from the tailward end up to the neck. When the surgeon had finished that part of his work all the skin on the rabbit's back was loose except where it was joined to the neck.

The rabbit was then carried into the operating room, and if he had been conscious he would have seen that the boy was lying on the operating table, very pale, but determined looking. A man stood near with a small bottle filled with colorless liquid, and the boy cried out: "No chloroform, doctor, please; no chloroform!"

Cornelius Post's leg was swathed in gauze, just as the rabbit was wrapped in it, except where his eyes and nose and long ears showed above the white folds. The boy smiled a little. It was such a queer little figure, and he watched the doctors eagerly while they unwrapped a part of the folds and the surgeon removed a part of the gauze from the boy's leg. Then he felt the rabbit's warm little body close against his leg. The boy saw something white and shining in the doctor's fingers, and then he gave a little cry of pain, for the doctor was taking swift long stitches and the thread was like a line of fire. The rabbit lay very quiet, and the boy sobbed under his breath, for even brave boys cry at times like these.

In three minutes it was over and the doctors went out talking excitedly about the wonderful operation. Cornelius Post was left alone with a kind, attentive nurse and the sleeping rabbit.

He wished "Mike" would wake up.

After a while there was a quiver in the little white swathed body that was now a part of Cornelius. The nurse leaned over and looked anxious. She seized the lower part of the body with strong fingers.

It was well she did, for when "Mike" woke and found that he was in a hospital he started to run just as he used to do when some one came into the garden where he was feeding on forbidden cabbage leaves. The gauze wrappings and the folds of muslin that tied him to the boy and the nurse herself held him. He could not get away. The boy screamed with pain when the rabbit tried to run, for it wrenched the silk stitches the doctor had taken an hour before. The rabbit kicked helplessly once or twice and decided to make the best of it. He and the boy became friends.

"It was a pity," said the boy, "that we couldn't have been friends longer."

The boy burst into tears when they cut the dead rabbit loose next morning and carried it away.

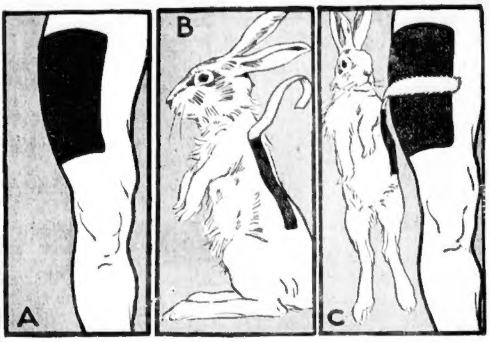
Cornelius Post, Photographed Just Before the Operation, with "Mike," the Rabbit, Wh'ch Gave Its Life to Save the Boy's.



A — Cornelius Post's injured leg, the black patch indicating area of burnt portion over which new flesh and skin had refused to form.

B — How the doctors cut along three sides of the fleshy strip lifted from a living rabbit's side, and prepared it for sewing across the boy's wound.

C — How the strip of rabbit skin, still attached to the living animal, was sewed to the boy's leg to form new flesh and heal the wound.

WHY THE LIVING RABBIT WAS SEWED TO THE BOY'S LEG.

BY DR. H. C. FOX.

THE operation was a successful one, and we are so encouraged by the result that we will repeat it if we can get the consent of Post's relatives. We chose a healthy rabbit, shaved him, and after putting him under the influence of chloroform we cut a flap three inches broad and eight inches long from his back, leaving it attached to his neck. We did not give the boy chloroform because several of his internal organs are affected and we feared the action of the anaesthetic upon him. He held out very well. We stretched the rabbit skin across the middle of the burnt surface and sewed it fast on the underside of the boy's leg. We stitched the sides of the strip to the leg and left the boy and rabbit thus sewed together. The chances for an effectual grafting were tenfold greater than if we had cut the rabbit away, because the contact of the live healthy body and transfusion of blood would be of incalculable aid. We hoped the rabbit would live because we had cut the skin so carefully that it did not bleed. The rabbit ate several times afterward, and if the operation had not required so large a piece of skin I think he would have lived. A rabbit is not quite strong enough for such an operation. A dog is too strong, because he could tear away the stitches. A cat would be the best, if it were not for the danger from the claws.

"MIKE," THE SQUAREST FRIEND I EVER HAD.

BY CORNELIUS POST.

THE doctor told me that if I had a garter of healthy skin grafted on the middle of my leg there would be that many more starting points for the skin to grow from, that instead of four borders for it to grow from there would be six, and he showed me what he meant by drawing a picture. I saw that that was common sense and I said: "Yes, let's try it," and I was glad when they brought in "Mike," the rabbit. I said "Maybe 'Mike' will make me a strong boy again. Maybe he'll save my life." I hugged him hard and laughed at him. He looked so funny bandaged in gauze the way my leg had been for two years. The rabbit and I were friends from the beginning.

I hated to feel the stitches, but I hated the chloroform worse.

The rabbit was still, for they made him take chloroform, and while they were taking the stitches that felt like threads of fire I was glad they weren't hurting him, too.

He was still for most an hour. When he woke up he gave a jerk that hurt worse than the stitches. I hollered and he looked up at me, as much as to say: "Old man, I won't do it again," and he didn't. "Mike" was the squarest friend I ever had. He lay still and watched me, hardly twitching except once or twice when he breathed kind a hard. I petted him and he didnt seem to mind or be afraid of me. He seemed to say to himself: "That fellow and I are in the same boat. I'm going to stand by him."

When I ate soup or gruel he looked as though he thought: "What funny grub for a fellow to eat," and he whisked away a lot of celery leaves and raw carrots as though he didn't see anything to worry about.

But it was lonesome in the night with just the nurse sitting there and the light low, and I felt lonesome and bad and put down my hand and touched him and I felt his ears move, as though he was trying to say: "I know it's tough."

We were pretty restless in the night, for the places where they had taken the stitches ached and stung. They hurt him, too, for once he gave a little squeal, and I petted him and he was quiet again.

In the morning I felt better, for I had slept a little, but when I woke his eyes were staring at me and they were dimmer than the day before.

He couldn't eat much and when I petted him his ears didn't wag so much. His nose was cold.

When the doctor came to see me he sent the nurse for his instrument case quick and she gently turned my head around so that I couldn't see. When I turned my head again the rabbit was gone. I had heard the door close. They didn't tell me he was dead, but I knew it, because he had been so quiet for awhile. I miss that rabbit. He did a lot for me. I wish we could have been friends longer. And I wish it were not unmanly for a boy to cry when he feels bad about something.

What Science Is Up to Now!

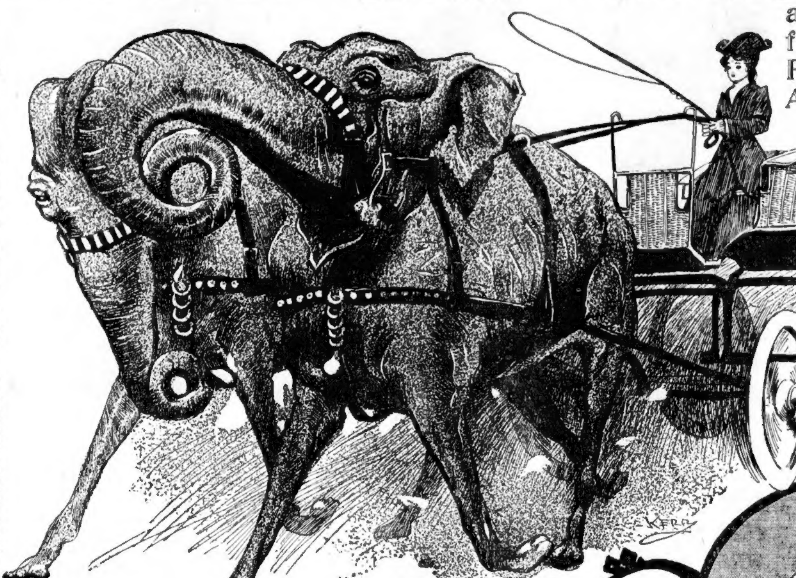
—Prof. Serviss Solemnly Explains the Almost Incredible Recent Success in Cross-Breeding Different Kinds of Plants and Animals and Then Playfully Says That the Crazy Fancies of Children's Books Are Not So Impossible.



By Prof. Garrett P. Serviss

AT last science is transforming the world of living creatures. The long expected miracle of the ages has begun. It is only a beginning, but the vista of evolution by human will that it opens up staggers the imagination.

The order of advance follows that pursued by Nature herself in making the world—first plant life pushed to a maximum of development, then animal life.

Like many things of vast ultimate significance, the beginnings of this transformation have been effected quietly and so suddenly that the world at large has virtually been unaware of what was happening.

Wonderful New Fruits.

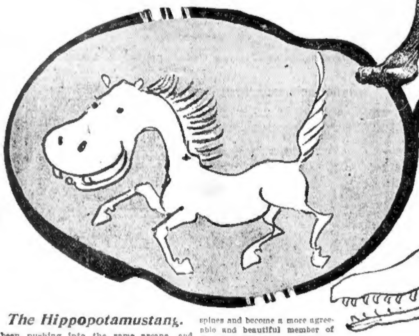
On a farm in California, near Santa Rosa, a New England Yankee, one Luther Burbank, has in the past few years caused new flowers, new fruits, new vegetables to spring up under his hands as if at the touch of a magician's wand. At first the few who knew of his achievements were incredulous. But now the eyes of science have been widely opened, and Luther Burbank has been formally recognized as a modern wizard, and the stamp of the great Carnegie Institution has been put upon his work. He is to receive a subsidy of $10,000 a year for ten years in succession, in order that he may uninterruptedly devote all his skill, knowledge and time to the production of new forms of vegetable life.

And he is not entirely alone in this work, although he is unquestionably the leader. Abroad, particularly in France, men have been pushing into the same arcana, and have succeeded in bringing forth new plant forms, the creation of which a few centuries ago would have caused the man who performed such wonders to be regarded as a supernatural being.



The Hippopotamustang.

And on top of this comes a still greater wonder! The celebrated Professor Jacques Loeb, who two or three years ago astonished everybody by fertilizing the eggs of sea urchins and other creatures by artificial means, thus proclaiming himself in the popular imagination as a prestidigitator who could make life spring forth at his will, announces that he has succeeded in crossing different species of animals, such as starfish and sea urchins, and producing from these creatures entirely new to the living world. This is a thing which has been regarded as utterly beyond the bounds of possibility. Nature seemed to have placed impassable frontiers between the different kind of animals, except in a few instances of closely related forms which were susceptible of crossing.

California Wizard's Discoveries.

The experiments of Professor Loeb are still in the inchoate stage. He seems but to have put his hand upon the secret, and to be feeling cautiously, tentatively and in the dark. He himself cannot yet tell to what he may be led. Restrained by the scientific instinct, he will do nothing hastily, and will make no rash promises—but he will not drop the clew that has been placed in his fingers until he has pursued it to the end, wherever it may lead.

Beginning with the simplest forms of animal existence, it may require years of effort to pass to higher forms. Unexpected obstacles may intervene. But, at any rate, the beginning has been made, and the possibility of putting two unlike creatures together and blending them into a third creature, unlike both the others and yet combining their peculiarities, has been demonstrated.

With the other branch of this thaumaturgic handling of life the case is different simply because it has been pushed further on. Some of the things done by Burbank seem simply and purely incredible, yet the evidences of their reality are before us. Take the huge, sweet, delicious, seedless orange, for instance. It is a contradiction of nature, yet it lies on our breakfast tables and gives us a new idea of the possibilities of fruit. It shows us what our children may know and enjoy through the transforming power of the human mind when directed to the regulation of the products of nature.

Take again the marvellous white blackberry which Burbank has produced. From the rough, sour Lawton berry he has developed a great, juicy fruit as white as snow! It is virtually a new creation, a fresh delight added to our tables, something which nature had refused us, and which could only have been dreamed of until on that California farm suddenly it was brought into actual existence. It is a product of the creative imagination as much as a poem or a fairy tale. Man has said: "Let this thing be!" and lo! it is.

The same is true of the long list of other new kinds of fruits, plants and flowers that Burbank and a few others have produced. He has made the cactus drop its piercing spines and become a more agreeable and beautiful member of the plant kingdom; he has produced many new kinds of apples, peaches, plums and nuts, all larger, sweeter, more delicate and delicious than those made by nature and deprived of many of the objectionable peculiarities of the natural fruit; he has made lilies and roses grow to a gigantic size and improved the splendor of their colors and the fragrance of their perfume; his potatoes are another revelation of the possibilities of development lying hidden in the heart of common vegetables and which nature would only have unfolded in the course of thousands of years, if indeed she would ever have done it. Thus the world is being set forward by a whole geologic epoch, and we are enabled at the present day to enjoy what in the course of nature could only have been enjoyed by our remote descendants, as far removed from us in the future as Adam in Paradise is removed from us in the past.

The Jackalligator.

He lives in the sands of the desert
Or else in the swamps of the South.
He pricks up his ears
At whatever he hears—
What he sees goes into his mouth.

> "Looking ahead, then, we might picture a fashionable belle of a future period driving down the Boulevard with a span of these enormous and curious looking creatures—powerful as our present day elephants and swift as our present day greyhounds."

A French experimenter—for, as remarked at the beginning, the world is catching from this spark and may soon flame with new life—a French experimenter has succeeded in producing a radish as big as a potato, mealy, nutritious, with a novel and delightful flavor and deprived of the tongue-stinging quality of the natural root.

One of Burbank's latest novelties is a flower of magnificent hue which never fades. Left a year in a dry room, its colors are as bright as when it flourished on its stem.

What has just been said about crossing indicates the nature of the seemingly mysterious power by means of which these transformations are produced. Crossing in itself is not a new thing. Crosses have been produced from time immemorial. But the difference between the old and the new in this field is like the difference between the awkward, unpractical velocipede of forty years ago and the smooth-running, magical, space-annihilating bicycle of to-day. The idea is old, but its development is startlingly new. Man has always had his power of transforming living things to please his fancy and suit his needs, lying ready to his hand, but heretofore he has not grasped it, or if he has ventured to touch it it has been done gingerly, hesitatingly and without a sense of mastery. Now he has found out his power and is beginning to use it.

The fact is that the living forms which we see around us are but a small fraction of the vast number of undeveloped forms which slumber in the bosoms of nature, awaiting the magic touch to come forth and take their place in the visible world. Every fruit, every flower, every plant and probably every animal contains within itself the germs of new forms, new powers, new beauties, which are smothered because they have no chance and no room to develop. The act of crossing one variety, or one species, with another releases these springs of being, these slumbering and undeveloped tendencies, and gives them the opportunity for which they have been waiting.

There are unquestionably enough of those slumbering forms of life in the world around us to entirely transform and remake the face of the planet, if we can only find the way to awaken them and give them place and room. Man can make this world what he will. He only needs to become accustomed to the use of his powers and to turn vague guesses and timid attempts into scientific knowledge and bold and confident creative efforts. He can make his gardens and his farms bloom and flourish with flowers, fruits and grains now unknown. And he can do it within a century.

Queer Animals of the Future.

What is true of plant life applies to the animal kingdom as well. Professor Loeb and others are evidently close upon the key that will unlock this mystery. We have only to take nature's hints. The development of the American race is one of these hints. Here, through the gradual amalgamation of English, German, Irish, Italian, French, Dutch, Scandinavian and Slavic elements we see growing up around us an entirely new variety of human beings possessing qualities and energies of body and mind heretofore unmatched in the world's history. All this arises from the releasing and developing of new and better tendencies through the effects of crossing.

We know already what can be done with domestic animals. The highest authorities in the world aver that equal miracles can be effected in the transformation of man himself. In breeding and crossing lies the secret. It took nature untold millions of years to change the world from the aspect it bore in the Age of the Great Reptiles to that which it has to-day. It apparently lies in the power of man, guided by his imagination and working along the laws discovered by science, to produce, perhaps within a few centuries, a change in the face of the world and in its living races as complete as any it has ever known.

How the imagination has actually led the way toward these modern scientific wonders is known to every reader of children's wonder books. Lewis Carroll may not have been so far astray after all when he invented his amusing combinations of animal forms. The professional humorists have been among the prophets always, for humor is a kind of intuition that gives lightning-flash views of things ahead, distorted and dim, but yet resting on reality. The "camelephant," a combination of the elephant and the camel, would not be a more grotesque creature than some of those whose remains are found in the Jurassic and Cretaceous rock beds. We ourselves, walking on our hind limbs, may appear laughably grotesque to an intelligent ant. Bill Nye used to regret that his experiments in hybridization had not yet succeeded in producing his ideal—a cross between the shad and the jellyfish, which would get rid of the bones while preserving the flavor. Since Professor Loeb has crossed a starfish and a sea urchin, we may at least picture in fancy the appearance of a hybrid composed of a whale and a devil-fish, or of a sawfish and a sea-cow, or a shark and a porpoise, or, best of all, a fish without bones.

The Kangarooster.

His tail is remarkably long
And his legs are remarkably strong;
But the strength and the length of his legs and his tail
Are as naught to the strength of his song.

He picks up his food with his bill;
He bounds over valley and hill;
But the height of his bounds can't compare with the sounds
He lets out when he crows with a will.

It is the manifest destiny of all startling advances in science to give birth to these exaggerated conceptions, and there is no occasion to quarrel with them. They make the solemn facts so much the more attractive, and no sensible person is misled. So we may expect with equanimity the appearance from the fertile brains of caricaturists and humorists of men refurnished, by a sort of atavism, with the prehensile powers of their anthropoid ancestors, tall-hatted gentlemen in dress suits swinging comfortably in the moonlit tree tops on a hot Summer evening; or a fortieth century athletic contest in forest racing. The imagination will suggest cows with trunks to enable them to drink out of elevated irrigation conduits; horses with rhinoceros hides to keep off the flies; ostriches with powerfully developed wings to serve as aerial carriers in the coming days of airships; bulls without horns to make pastures safe for picnickers; fish without bones, a la Bill Nye; hunting dogs with wings to make them more speedy, and deer with short legs to make them less so.

Frogs as Big as Sheep.

With all these things possible, it requires no stretch of the imagination to conceive the ultimate cultivation of elephants with long, sinewy legs, and as nimble and swift-footed as dogs. Looking ahead then, we might picture a fashionable belle of a future period driving down the Boulevard with a span of these enormous and curious looking creatures—powerful as our present day elephants and swift as our present day greyhounds.

Frogs' legs weighing ten to fifteen pounds and capable of being divided into delicious joints, steaks and cuts will be possible just as soon as science develops the frog into a giant as big as a sheep. We can also foresee wingless hens as large as ostriches, and laying eggs as big as pumpkins; apple, cherry and peach trees with flat tops, to render picking easy; jackasses with singing voices; pumpkins crossed with oranges to improve the flavor of restaurant pies; thistles without spines and covered with blossoms as big as roses, and gigantic bees deprived of stings, but furnished with honey bags of extraordinary capacity; dwarf alligators and elephants to serve as household pets; cats with sealskin fur, and mosquitoes without bills and with a trained sense of orchestral harmony.

But, in spite of the ridicule to which they may be turned, these new discoveries in the manipulation of living forms have a solid basis, and before many years have passed they will lead to transformations of which nobody has yet dreamed.

The fanciful imagination of the writers and illustrators of popular books is well shown by the illustrations on this page. All but two of the drawings are by Kenyon Cox, and are taken from his curiously interesting volume, "Mixed Beasts," just published and copyrighted by Fox, Duffield & Co., New York. The curious "chimpanzebra" is from still another popular child's volume, "The Merrylinks," by Alice Brown and Louise Clarke, copyrighted by the Century Company and published in book form by McClure, Phillips & Co.

The Camelephant.

This is the ship of the jungle,
Whose form is much of a bungle.
He never is happy except when in bed,
For it takes all his strength to hold up his head.

The Octopussycat.

I love Octopussy, his arms are so long;
There's nothing in nature so sweet as his song.
'Tis true, I'd not touch him—no, not for a farm!
If I keep at a distance he'll do me no harm.

The Pelicantelope

This bird has a funny waddle,
But he's splendid when he flies.
His favorite dish is cold, raw fish,
And he has lovely eyes.

CRUEL AND UNNATURAL DAUGHTER

How the Step-Daughter of Bruce Crane (the Famous Painter) Stole the Artist's Heart, Eloped and Married Her Own Mother's Husband.

"HOW sharper than a serpent's tooth it is, to have a thankless child!"

CHAPTER I.

NO modern instance is comparable to the case of Mrs. Bruce Crane No. 2, who ousted her own mother's affections out of the heart of her own stepfather, whose first wife was Mrs. Crane No. 1—the new bride's own mother—and eloped with him.

Bruce Crane has just married his divorced wife's daughter, co-respondent in this ignoble case.

Where may one find a situation and a complication more heartless!

Mrs. Bruce Crane, who was Mrs. Jeanne Burchard Brainerd before she became Mrs. Bruce Crane, had two daughters when she intrusted herself and her widowhood into the hands of Mr. Bruce Crane, then a struggling—and afterward, while she was his wife—matured into one of the most distinguished, landscape painters in the whole United States.

When the second Mrs. Bruce Crane's own mother was in the slough of despond and was cast into prison, she did not visit her own mother. But she kept on keeping house for her famous stepfather, Bruce Crane.

When, after the first Mrs. Bruce Crane, who had given up all her money, and everything she had in life to give up, and when her daughter took the side of the artist father against her own mother, she did not even visit her own mother in her dire extremity.

When the first Mrs. Bruce Crane was haled before a magistrate in a police court in Greater New York, her own daughter who has succeeded to her own mother's "name and fame," let her be locked up in a cell like any common, ordinary unfortunate without coming to the rescue—and now after all the agony of spirit the first Mrs. Bruce Crane has gone through—goaded so by desperation that she even had to beg—as a final release from all her intense misery—that she must name her own daughter as the co-respondent of her husband, his stepdaughter and natural guardian of the child to whom she had intrusted him, her portion is that of intense shame. She has seen all her hopes blasted, all her life ruined, and all the field of her existence ungarnered by the unnatural conduct of her daughter who has stolen away from her own mother the heart of her mother's husband.

CHAPTER II.

A woman had been found in New York leaning against an iron railing in Eighth avenue, between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh streets, in the evening. It was in December, when it was bleak, cold, dismal. It was just ten days before Christmas, too, when the whole city is supposed to be alive to the most glorious spirit of Christianity: "Peace on earth, good will to men."

She was helpless. She could barely moan out her name and her address.

"Oh Bruce, oh Bruce," she kept on moaning, as if there were an ache in her throat and a break in her heart; "oh, send for Bruce, or my little Annie."

Officer O'Leary, of the West Forty-seventh street police station, found her. With the quick instinct of his profession he knew at once that she was a gentlewoman in a most deplorable situation. He pondered a moment.

"Where is your home, Madame. Do you want to go home?"

"Home, Home—yes, no, oh yes, take me home! No, don't, don't"—

There was a cut over one of her eyes, which might have been the result of a fall, and the officer called for an ambulance and took her to the Roosevelt Hospital. Finally, after her mind had quickened a little bit with warmth after her exposure, she gave her name and address:

"Mrs. Bruce Crane, No. 95 Fifth avenue."

Her husband was notified. She sent for her daughter Annie. The daughter sent no response. The husband made no effort to come to her rescue.

So she had to be taken like any common unfortunate to the station house. Even after another notification Bruce Crane did not bail her out, nor did his stepdaughter hasten to her succor.

Can one imagine a more heartless or crueller ordeal than this, which happened the next morning in the Yorkville Police Court?

She was arraigned in court early before Magistrate Crane, who happened to be sitting. Along with all the ordinary "drunks" and "thugs" and "riff-raff" of a great city Policeman O'Leary produced his prisoner. There was that innate something in her bearing, her carriage, her dignity, that instantly compelled all eyes to focus on her, for Mrs. Bruce Crane has always been a handsome woman. Scarcely anybody could believe his eyes when the conventional charge was made—"a vagrant and intoxicated." Poor woman, what made her so?

Then, and only then, did Bruce Crane appear.

She was gowned in a smart frock of close-fitting gray cloth. Her splendid blond hair under her little toque took all the glints of the sun that stole into the dingy, ill-smelling place .

He and she stood facing each other.

SHE gave him one look. SHE said nothing. HE turned his head away and in answer to the question of the Magistrate, "What do you wish done?" HE said with calm, cold and precise deliberation :

"I think she had better be put under restraint for awhile. I have tried in every way to reform her. I have sent her to various asylums and sanitariums. I have placed her with friends of the family and with private physicians, but it has all been of no avail. I have pleaded with her for the sake of our children"——

Then the storm in the heart of Mrs. Crane broke: "Our children!" she echoed in an impassioned outburst; "why are they not here? Where is my Annie, my child—not yours, not ours, but my own. Oh, my God, why does she not come to help me now—now, when I most need a daughter's love!"

"I think my wife needs a physician's ministration more," broke in Mr. Crane, still with the most steady calm. Mr. Crane trifled with his mustache.

The situation was pitiable; the atmosphere was tense.

"Oh, Bruce, Bruce, what are you doing?" She turned and, throwing her arms about his neck, kissed him again and again.

He tried to break away from her grasp and her passionate appeal.

"Where is my daughter? Don't separate us; for God's sake, don't!"

The answer came as if slit from ice: "You cannot go back to your children."

"Don't say that after all I have done for you. Oh, Bruce, let me go back to my children, my babies. They need their mother. What are you doing?" she suddenly cried out hysterically. "Are you stealing their love from me?"

"Don't separate us for the love of our unborn child: don't do it; don't do it. You used to love me—you know you did. If I have transgressed, you know why and what made me do it. I am distraught, beside myself. Take me back to you, to shield her against herself, and—you.

"Oh, Bruce, Bruce, I plead to you, Bruce," she kept on imploring. "I plead to you as I have never pleaded before and never will plead again. No matter what I have done recently, forgive me for Annie's sake, whom you say you love like your own daughter.

"You know, too," she went on in the anguish of her soul, "that I am weak and worn out with nursing you through typhoid and am not yet over the effects of my own typhoid, which I got during my vigil for your own welfare. You know I have given you all, all my money, all my love, all my hopes, all my life"——

At this crisis even the stolid calm of the brilliant landscape painter seemed to forsake him. Tears stood in his eyes. His immediate emotion overwhelmed him. He was about to gasp out—when in a second's silence in the whole fierce outburst there was an interruption. There fell from the mouth of the Magistrate himself these clear cut words:

"Sir," said Magistrate Crane, addressing Bruce Crane, "you have a stern and, perhaps, a harsh duty to perform. You must face it like a man. You must do it for her sake and for the sake of your children and yourself." Then turning to Mrs. Crane, he said: "I will detain you only temporarily until to-morrow."

Mrs. Crane, weak and exhausted, almost fell to the floor. Bruce Crane sneaked hurriedly away.

It was at this epoch in his life that Bruce Crane created a painting and called it "Sunrise." Imaginative friends have declared that when this strong picture was created they saw in it the motive of an idea to depict his whole soul at that time.

The long stretch of the dreary, wearisome marsh was to typify—to his own, intense self—his own weariness and dreariness with his own wife.

The dull, cold, gray foreground was his own heart; the overlying snow and the bleak hills was his wife's shadow on his life; the rising sun, aglow in the far-away heavens was his wife's daughter—the one bright, hopeful spot.

CHAPTER III.

It was after several most painful episodes that Mrs. Bruce Crane got desperate. She had given Bruce Crane her love, she had given him her money, she was a brilliant art critic herself, and she had impelled him by her own incentive and wifely help on the road to becoming one of the most successful and distinguished painters of American landscape.

Then there came the little rift in the lute that was impossible to be avoided.

Mrs. Crane discovered that HER own child was accepting the attentions of HER own husband.

She was utterly discarded and forced to watch this utmost degeneracy.

It had been uttered in the art world, where Bruce Crane and his wife moved at that time, that Mrs. Bruce Crane murmured:

"I almost wish now that she had died before she was born." Mr. Bruce Crane afterward: "It's everything or suicide for ME."

Mrs. Crane kept up her methodical impulse. "He seems so fond of my own daughter. He does not seem to care for ME, his own wife."

Imagine Mr. Bruce Crane reading into two women's heart at the same time—especially when one belonged to his wife and the other belonged to his own wife's daughter. And then came next, for or against divorce, a most ignoble plea, as one may look at it. It has been said that the mother favored the dissolution, to save her own daughter's name.

Anyway, it was asked by the mother of her own child, against her own husband. The stepdaughter was co-respondent in the piteous case. To-day the daughter is acclaimed Bruce Crane's wife. And her own mother? Well, her own mother—she who brought her into the world—is the outcast, divorced wife of the man who is living with the daughter in the pale of the law as his own, particular spouse.

CHAPTER IV.

"My troubles with my husband began," she has confessed, "when I first discovered his relations with my daughter. I must tell the whole naked truth. I upbraided both of them, but they both denied my charges. I knew what I was talking about, and my own little girl—the little girl I had brought into the world—said to me, 'Why, mamma, you must be mad. You are crazy.'

" 'Yes,' said Mr. Crane, my own husband, chiming in, 'you must be crazy.' I had had enough sorrow to make me so.

"After that my life with Mr. Crane and my little daughter Annie became a veritable inferno on earth for me. He began to persecute and nag me in every way possible to think of. Oh, can't one imagine the torture I was going through—and always! He, aided and abbetted by my own daughter, my own offspring!

"So it went on and on. He began to persecute me in every way. He struck me even and knocked me down when I remonstrated against the awful life we were living among ourselves. There seems to me nothing like it even in the Greek tragedies.

"I was nervous, upset, unstrung, may one wonder?

"So I was cajoled into a sanitarium to forget.

"To forget what?

"That both my husband and my daughter swore that I was willing to go there—and that my husband and my daughter were masquerading as 'Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Warner' and consorting from one hotel and from one home to another home and another hotel.

"I had been mortified, chagrined, struck to the heart as with a dagger. And when I called my daughter to an accounting, as I thought I had the right in motherhood, she again stabbed me by saying: 'Oh, Ma, you're crazy, you know. Why torment Mr. Crane so? He has the real artistic temperament, like I have. You don't understand him. Why not go away again now and have a long rest?'

"It was then, stung to the innermost quick of my soul, that I began my suit for divorce against Bruce Crane, naming my own daughter as co-respondent. May God forgive them, for they knew not what

TO BUILD A REAL "SPOTLESS-TOWN"

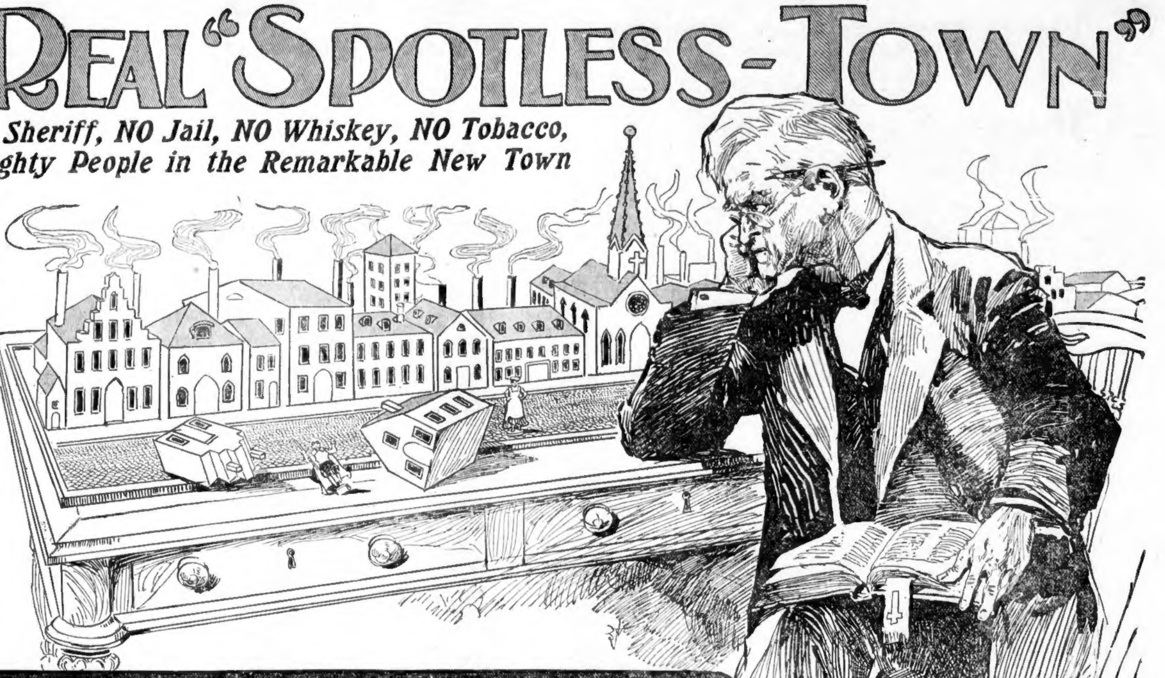
NO Police, NO Sheriff, NO Jail, NO Whiskey, NO Tobacco, NO Naughty People in the Remarkable New Town Mr. Norton Is Building.



"The Golden Rule of the Bible is law enough for any community; the conscience of each citizen shall be policeman, judge and jury."
—Mayor A. F. Norton.

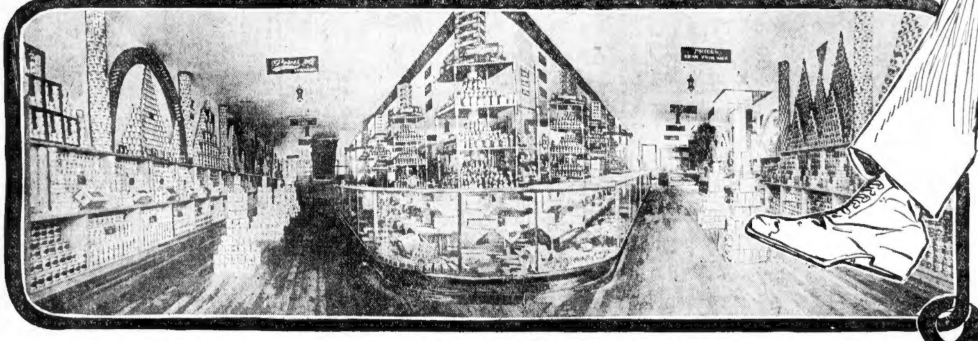
A REAL "Spotless Town" is about to appear on the map of the United States. It will have real spotless houses, real spotless streets, and, so far as possible, real spotless inhabitants. The municipal government is to be conducted "as Christ would conduct it."

Mr. Alfred F. Norton, the proprietor of fifteen "Golden Rule" grocery stores, department stores, meat markets and restaurants in various cities throughout the State of Indiana, is the founder of the new bricks and mortar, flesh and blood "Spotless Town." During the past three years he has successfully demonstrated the complete success of conducting a business "as the Saviour would." He has prospered amazingly. Beginning with one little Christian grocery store at Marion, Ind., five years ago, he has increased his business year after year, opening new stores, extending his trade from city to city, but never deviating one iota from the Golden Rule and his steadfast resolve to conduct his business "as Christ would."

"Spotless Town" has been founded in the State of Washington, where Mr. Norton has been conducting negotiations for the purchase of many thousands of acres of land. Within a few weeks the new town will be completely laid off in broad avenues, lots, parks, promenades, farms and public pastures, and Mr. Norton is now prepared to sell lots at cost price, but to desirable applicants only.



Interior of the Grocery Department of Mr. Norton's "Golden Rule" Store at Marion, Ind.

In "Spotless Town" there are to be no police, no sheriff, no courts, no lawyers, no jail, no whiskey, no tobacco and no naughty people.

Mr. Norton intends to conduct this model town just as the Saviour would. He himself will be the Mayor of Spotless Town, the only municipal office, by the way, in the community.

"The 'Golden Rule' of the Bible is law enough for any community," Mayor Norton has announced; "the conscience of each citizen shall be policeman, judge and jury."

Mr. Norton's "Golden Rule" methods are unusual, but highly successful. He believes that "Spotless Town" will benefit other people just as much as his Christian stores have and that many other communities will soon spring into existence patterned after his own "Spotless Town," and all of them conducted "as Christ would conduct them."

"It ought to be a part of every man's life to help others, and I believe that I will help others without much effort by starting this colony, where people, rich or poor, will be given an opportunity to help themselves," said Mr. Norton. "There is much undeveloped land in Washington, and good homes can be provided for many. Every movement of any kind needs a starter, and I propose to start this new colony, and I believe it will be a success."

"Will you allow anyone to live in 'Spotless Town' who is not a Christian?" Mr. Norton was asked.

A smile came over his face as he replied, "Christians are somewhat scarce, and I am afraid we will not find enough to greatly populate the town. Of course we will allow others than those professing to be Christians to join in the colony. Many Christians are 'backsliders,' and I will just as soon accept a sinner in the colony as a 'backslider.' There is always hope for the sinner, and he will be given an equal chance. I want people for my town who are energetic and ambitious, whether they be poor or rich. The poor man will be given a chance.

"The land will be sold to colonists just as cheaply as possible. I don't wish to make any money out of it. Enough to pay the expenses will satisfy me. I want the other fellow to profit. To help others is my aim in planning the 'Spotless Town.'

"The title to every man's land will be clear and beyond dispute. They will be so perfect in the first place that no lawyers will be needed to search them or complicate matters or institute litigation. The titles will go straight from me to the people who buy property, and without any necessity for the services of lawyers. Lawyers cost money, and we will be better without them in the new colony.

"But a man will receive a title to land under certain conditions. There will be rules to govern the colony and they must be strictly observed. A man will be given a title to a piece of land with the understanding that he must forfeit it if he violates the rules. Nothing will be required which is unreasonable. Those who live as they ought to will submit to the rules, and there will need be no forfeitures of land. When a man persistently violates the laws of the colony, he will forfeit his title and his land will be sold and placed in a fund for the needy.

"There will be no saloons in the colony. A man who is caught selling or drinking whiskey will lose his land. Whiskey and success are bitter enemies. No gambling dens or other immoral places will be tolerated. Wife beaters cannot have a place in 'Spotless Town.' The plan of government will be left to the decision of the residents. I do not believe that we will ever have any use for officers of the law.

"I have thought of a name for the town, but I will not tell it at this time. I will permit the colonists to suggest names before the name is finally agreed upon. At present I like to think of it as 'Spotless Town,' because that is my idea of the kind of a town it must be."

Mr. Norton was asked about the churches which will be established in the new model community.

"There will be a meeting house for all," said Mr. Norton. "There is no special Bible for each different denomination and division of the Lord's people. I will favor a meeting house for all the people, and if one will not hold all, two may be built, or more if necessary, but they will all have the same rights and privileges. There are denominations not any older than I am, and these churches are organized by man. The sub-division of the Lord's people is wrong. To build two churches where only one is needed is not of the Lord. There will be no divisions in heaven, and there ought not to be any divisions here. Love unites, and sin separates. It costs more to serve the devil than the Lord. If people loved one another more we should not require so many meeting houses. Two should not be built where one would do. No one is a Christian who does not do the best he knows how, and to be a Christian one must do the best he knows, and do the best he can to know. The people in my new town must live as they believe Christ would ask them to live."

"Will you invite only married men to join your colony?" Mr. Norton was asked.

"Well, it is the duty of everyone to marry. People should not marry when too young, but they must not put it off too long. People do not save until they marry, and married people will do most in making our colony prosperous. I always give advice to the young, and also to old bachelors and old maids, not to quit courting until married."

While Mr. Norton was speaking, a woman entered the store and asked him to contribute to a treat to be given to the poor children by a missionary society. She explained that the society had everything it needed for the treat except twenty-five pounds of candy.

"Go to the candy counter and take just as much as you think I ought to give," Mr. Norton directed. "You will find sacks there, and if the clerk at that counter is busy, just help yourself." The woman did as directed.

Mr. Norton was never known to refuse a person in need, and he never stops to consider whether they are deserving or not. "It is better to help six unworthy persons," he said, "than to refuse one worthy one."

A woman approached Mr. Norton one day last week and asked for a position in his restaurant as a waitress. It so happened that there were no vacancies, and when Mr. Norton told her this, she was much disappointed. "It takes money to buy food and I have no money and no work," said the despondent young woman.

"Well," replied Mr. Norton, "it wont cost you anything here, and you can eat at my restaurant until you can find something to do." The girl was surprised and overjoyed. She ate at the restaurant for two days without charge and then she obtained employment.

Mr. Norton has been very successful with his business conducted as he believes the Saviour would conduct it. He attributes his success solely to the fact that he has lived up to his belief in the honesty of humankind. Six weeks ago he opened a large department store, which is one of the largest in Marion. The restaurant is on the second floor of the department store building. Articles that are sold in other restaurants for five cents are sold here for three cents. It is said that no day passes on which Mr. Norton does not provide free meals for many hungry persons. Mr. Norton says that he will not sell anything which his family will not eat, and he and his family take all their meals in the restaurant. The employes of the restaurant are not permitted to receive "tips" from patrons. Mr. Norton says he pays his help what he believes is right, and he will not permit his waitresses in the restaurant to receive additional money from his customers. He believes that "tips" are an annoyance to patrons, and he always instructs his employes to render faithful service without receiving these favors.

Mr. Norton gives employment in his various stores to more than one hundred persons, and each of them is paid one day's salary at the close of each day's work. Mr. Norton says that they have earned their pay, and that he has no right to hold it from them until the end of the week or the month. Mr. Norton's department store is one of the largest and busiest stores in the city, but he delivers no goods. His twelve stores represent an investment of several thousand dollars, but he does not carry one cent of insurance on any of the property. He pays cash for all goods received from wholesale houses, and he receives cash from his customers. No books or accounts are kept in any of the Norton stores.

Mr. Norton has received hundreds of letters from all parts of the world, some asking for information as to the manner in which he conducts his business and others asking for money. Many letters have come from England, France and from various other countries in Europe and from every section of the United States. Because he conducts his business as he believes Christ would do, many of his correspondents argue that he should share his money with them. Mr. Norton is not a rich man by any means. He says he only intends to make a good living, and that is the reason why he sells his goods at much less profit than other merchants would care to.

What Very Tall Women May Do to Look Quite Petite.

THERE are certain points which must be studied by every tall woman who would look her best in the eyes of other men and women. Somehow, we do not take very kindly to the tall woman at times. They seem to have a prejudice against her, more particularly if they themselves are of small or middle height. Perhaps it is the thought that she is apt to make a short woman appear insignificant beside her which makes a man turn from the woman of commanding stature to her more petite sister. Or maybe the woman herself is to blame for not combining her height with gracefulness, and a style of dress which makes her least conspicuous.

There is no reason, however, why a tall woman should not make herself quite as charming in the eyes of the male sex as her shorter sister. That a tall woman can be charming no one can deny who has seen such delightfuly clever actresses as Miss Julie Opp, Miss Olive Oliver and Miss Marcia Van Dresser, for instance, who are among the tallest of theatrical celebrities. These ladies not only understand the art of dressing to perfection, but they also understand how to carry themselves as a tall woman should. And that is one of the most important secrets of the tall woman's charms.

It is of little use for a tall woman to take care that she only wears those hats and dresses which produce an appearance of graceful proportion, unless she carries herself well. The fault of nine out of every ten women is that they have a natural inclination to stoop, evidently in order to appear less tall. As a matter of fact, the tall woman who stoops when standing or walking with a shorter person, does not take the fraction of an inch off her height. On the contrary, she emphasizes her inches and makes herself look awkward.

It is necessary that a tall woman should learn not to be conscious of her height. The mere knowledge that you are above the average height makes you feel awkward, which proves that the very first thing for a tall woman to learn is to forget about herself, and help to keep from impressing her height upon others.

While trying to be unconscious of her height, however, the tall woman should not forget the important part which furniture and surroundings play in her appearance. For instance, there are few tall women who pay any attention to what sort of chairs they sit in. Notice the contrast between the tall woman sitting in a tiny seat, and one occupying a high-backed chair. In the first instance, her shoulders probably droop instinctively to be in proportion with her surroundings, her knees assume an awkward angle, while almost invariably you will see her cross her feet or sit with them in some ungraceful position. The impression she gives is that she is far too big for the chair, whereas a high-backed chair permits of graceful poses, and forms a fitting background for the picture.

It would doubtless surprise many women to see how some actresses, measuring five feet ten or eleven inches, make themselves appear five or six inches shorter, and many years younger, in order to impersonate some girlish character. By such simple little devices as flat heels, ankle-length dresses, and hair done low in the neck and perfectly flat on top, it is quite possible for the tallest woman to make herself quite petite.

Brunette or Blonde?

By Belle Blitz,

One of the Most Discerning of Modern Women Critics.

TWO Sundays ago, in a page which discussed the beauty of a young woman who had been discharged from Lillian Russell's dramatic company, Miss Russell remarked that "to be beautiful you must be big and blonde." That remark has brought to this newspaper a curious batch of letters, and raises the question again as to whether the blonde or the brunette is the supreme type of feminine beauty.

It would seem as impossible to settle this question as it is to answer the conundrum of the ancient philosophers—Which came first, the egg or the hen?

Both blonde and brunette have their champions, who are able to furnish convincing living picture proofs of the correctness of their contention, and in the end every man becomes a Paris who awards the prize of beauty not according to the woman's complexion, but his own. Thus we find that if the man is dark he bestows the apple upon the fair woman, while if the man is fair it is the dark woman who gets the fruit.

Women are more of one mind on the matter, and if the concensus of feminine opinion should be taken on the subject there is no doubt that the blonde woman would receive an overwhelming vote as the prize beauty. Indisputable evidence is offered on the first by the fact that it is the blonde and not the brunette that women imitate, and that the motto above every lady's dressing table is, "If you can't be fair, be as fair as you can." Witness the powder-box and the peroxide bottle.

No Manufactured Brunettes.

The strenuous and agonized hours which a woman with hay colored hair and an ashy complexion spends in beautifying herself are invariably devoted to transform herself into a blonde, never a brunette. No one ever heard of a woman trying to make herself look swarthier than nature turned her out, and when one does dye her hair black it is not because she admires the shade, but because she wants to hide the ravages of time. If ten women were given their choice between being Lillian Russell and Maxine Elliott, nine out of the ten would choose to be the fair Lillian.

Indeed, is is to the idea that fairness constitutes beauty in women that we are indebted for the delicacy of the skin of women to-day. For centuries and centuries women have longed to have fair cheeks and snowy shoulders and arms, and this has made them keep out of the sun, and veil themselves from wind and weather; and as the result of all of these ages of inherited care of the skin we have the perfect blonde—beautiful, ravishing, with heaven's own crown of gold on her head. This is the eternal feminine standard of pulchritude. A mother boasts of the fairness of her girl baby, while the dark child is looked upon askance, almost as if she were a changeling. A woman adores being compared to a lily, or peaches and cream, or anything else pink or white; but woe betide the ill-advised flatterer who thinks to please by calling his lady love a sunflower or a tiger lily, or anything that savors of the dark.

They Fear the Blonde One.

Whether women, in their admiration for fairness, overestimate the beauty of the blonde or not, it is impossible to say; but certainly other women—dark women and brown haired women—are possessed of a consuming fear of her. When a fortune teller announces oracularly to a brunette that a "blonde woman will come into your life," the dark woman's teeth begin to chatter with dread. She recalls that the mythological ladies were all blondes; that Lillith—Adam's first wife—is described as of being of surpassing fairness, that Venus Aphrodite is pictured as having the most lovely peroxide locks, and that even in our own day the various young women who figure in the sensation department of the news are described as beauteous blondes.

Probably this is most unjust, and the fair woman is just as good in intention and as far advanced on the higher life as the most raven-haired sister; but it is a most undeniable and ludicrous truth that other women regard a yellow-haired one as a menace to their happiness.

The Blonde—

By Lillian Russell, the Best-Known Blonde in America.

IT seems to me still that brunettes, in spite of this pleasant little rancor, are not the most beautiful of women.

It is idle to reiterate what I have already said on these subjects. The generalities are more easily taken up, and that one, in particular, which refers to the women of Italy and Spain gives my argument an excellent handle.

There are few beautiful women in Italy and Spain.

The reason for this is that the Italian or Spanish creature feminine is at her best so young that she is a pretty girl merely and not a beautiful woman.

At sixteen she is going, at twenty going, at twenty-five gone. Now even allowing for the rapid development of women in the tropics it is out of the question that a slender slip of a girl at sixteen can deserve the application of that very big word, "BEAUTIFUL." Very, very pretty, yes, but with a prettiness which bears the same relation to beauty that a sapling does to an oak, a pretty star-lit sky to a beautiful sunrise.

Brunettes grow gray more quickly than blondes, rarely have the figures of blondes, and never that smoothness of complexion, that tinting of the cheeks, that merging of color vouchsafed the blonde. Mr. Von Kaulbach's model makes much of the superiority of dark eyes, but it is not uncommon for blondes to be blessed with dark eyes, in which case they become surpassingly lovely. Caroline Miskell Hoyt's eyes were brown.

I would not have any one believe that I am crying down the attractiveness of the brunette. I have known many who were wonderfully, marvellously pretty. In my earlier letter I acknowledged that theirs was the compensation of being more lovely, of making a warmer appeal to the sympathies. I have seen brunettes who were quite beautiful. But I still hold that brilliant, blazing beauty is peculiarly the property of the blonde. The brunette's charm is more negative. "Darkness is the absence of light."

The Brunette—

By Rosa Guerrero, the Celebrated Spanish Brunette.

AS a matter of fact, blondes are rarely beautiful, though they are often pretty. Miss Russell in this paper last week reversed this statement, saying: "Brunettes are very often pretty girls; they are almost never beautiful."

The reason that a blonde is rarely beautiful would seem to be perfectly obvious to every one but the blonde herself, of course. Beauty is the superlative of pretty. A blonde, by virtue of the very qualities that characterize her—ashen hair, pale skin, pink cheeks, blue eyes—never stands forth aggressively, brilliantly, dazzlingly, as real beauty must and does.

The blonde is without temperament, without individuality. She is placid, sweet, without fire or force.

Real beauty, in its superlative form, attracts all eyes. It suggests passion, fire, temperament. It dominates and forces the attention. It is aggressive and irresistible. This is not accomplished so much by correct lines or by exquisitely regular features, which the average public may not appreciate, as by brilliant coloring.

The contrast of coal black hair against a white skin, of dazzling teeth between red lips; of brilliantly glowing cheeks, of flashing eyes—these are the things that attract and hold the admiration.

Black eyes remind one of the coals wherein lurk hidden fires. When they are lit, who can resist looking at them?

A blonde may be namby pamby and pretty. In fact she is expected to be namby pamby—we liken her to milk and pink roses. One of her charms is the namby pamby purity of blondness.

A brunette means at once a person full of color and dash, some one forceful and mesmeric.

Miss Russell fails to give proper credit to the value of contrasts when she weighs the charms of the brunette. Beside her the blonde sinks into insignificance, even though she be big, because she is all on one tint.

Yellowish hair, pinkish cheeks, bluish eyes—that's the typical blonde.

A dash of black, a gleam of white, a flash of red—that's the typical brunette.

The only beautiful brunette on the stage, according to Miss Russell, is Maxine Elliott. To dispute this, one would have to cite a dozen others, but let me say that the brunettes on the stage whether beautiful or not, are limited on account of the characteristics that distinguish their type. Vivid, startling, intense—they attract too much attention. Stars object to them as "support" for that reason. They are absolutely valueless for most ingenue parts which suggest characterless youth. They cannot be used for small parts because they cannot make themselves sufficiently insignificant. They are apt to attract the eye when the role demands that they shouldn't.

The insignificant brunette is rare, so that if she isn't a star, like the great Duse, or to descend rapidly in the scale of fame, like Mrs. Patrick Campbell or Viola Allen or Maxine Elliott, she is apt to have a hard time trying to play second fiddle to her blonde sisters.

In extolling her blonde sisters, Miss Russell says that "almost every painting of a beautiful woman known to the world is of a blonde." Has Miss Russell seen Manet's "Olympia," beautiful with black hair and black eyes, one of the most exquisite paintings in the world? Does she know Murillo's "Virgin," or Titian's daughter, or Velasquez's "Infanta?" It is worth a trip abroad to see any of these famous brunettes. They figure always as the models of Titian.

And Cleopatra, why accuse her of being a blonde? Is it because some unauthentic picture on the walls of an ancient temple represents her with red hair. Cleopatra was an Egyptian, dark as Diane de Poitiers or the Queen of Sheba or Katharine de Medici.

If, however, there are more blondes in art than brunettes, it is because the blonde is easier to paint than the brunette, for the reason that she is simpler. Her characteristics are as a rule obvious, all on the surface. She is not mysterious or deep. Her face has no shadows or contrasts. Her hair may have a few dim threads of gold in it, but it is not color in the sunlight and another color [illegible] it. It is always monotonously the [illegible]

In the black hairs of the brunette lurk a thousand tints. It was, in fact, a brunette that gave to Titian the inspiration to paint red hair. His models have the reddish hair of the brunette—the red tints that the sunlight brings out and that the shadows cast into the colors of midnight.

In the day when the blonde was celebrated in art the Madonna type was in vogue. Purity was a fashion, simplicity a fad. That day is past. The simper of the Raphael Madonna is out of fashion. Brilliancy, magnetism, style, passion are admired instead—and these belong to the brunette.

The Reason Why the Brunette Is Probably the Most Popular Type of Beauty the World Over.

By Henry T. Finck—The Distinguished Author of "Romantic Love and Personal Beauty."

IT is not surprising that Lillian Russell should declare that a woman, to be beautiful, must be "big and blonde." She herself is big and blonde, and she owes her remarkable and [illegible] sonal beauty [illegible] remember the time, the early days of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, when I [illegible] about her charms, although my ideal of feminine beauty has always been the petite brunette of the Andalusian type, of which she is [illegible].

I mention this to show that I [illegible] that I can [illegible] over a brunette. [illegible] ing blondes I have known which [illegible] waver in regard to my ideal. I have also [illegible] much less [illegible] form. A blonde with regular, [illegible] a brunette with irregular, coarse features, and vice versa. Yet, after a careful study of the question, extending over more than a quarter of a century, I [illegible] repeat, a brunette [illegible].

Three [illegible] are to be [illegible]—the skin, the eyes, the hair.

When Mark Twain [illegible] that it is endurable only because we are used to it. Nearly all black and brown skins are beautiful, but a beautiful white skin is rare."

Another favorite modern author, the late Lafcadio Hearn, [illegible] in the West Indies [illegible] went to Japan and proved his sincerity by marrying one of its dusky maidens.

The eminent German explorer, Dr. [illegible], after travelling some time in South Africa, went so far as to declare bluntly that a black skin is essential to beauty!

How many of us [illegible] agree with these three writers we cannot tell without visiting the countries that made them fall in love with dark complexions. But of one thing there can be no doubt—that the majority of the men of our time prefer a moderately [illegible] brunettes have to the milk and [illegible] used to rave about.

If [illegible] be so eager [illegible]

We are much more concerned with health—which is [illegible] why the brunette complexion is gaining in favor. It is eloquent of health, suggesting the idea of stored-up sunshine, which [illegible]

[illegible] eyes are almost universally considered beautiful in proportion to their [illegible] and depth—that is, in proportion as they approach [illegible]

"There is a mystery, a fascinating flash in dark eyes that make them pre-eminently the inspirers of romantic love.

A decisive point in favor of brunettes—which no one will [illegible] more beautiful than light-colored ones, and of course brunettes are [illegible] face, [illegible] too, [illegible]

How do I know this? By the fact that, as eminent men of science in America and in all the countries of Europe have shown, the brunettes are gaining steadily on the blondes everywhere. In England, for example, Dr. Beddoe concluded that the [illegible] the men show a decided preference for brunettes. His figures prove that an English brunette has ten chances of marriage to a blonde's [illegible]

In course of a few generations this proved preference of the men for brunettes must produce a decided effect on the aspect of every race. In this country look at any congregation or theatrical audience and you will be surprised at the preponderance of the dark type, genuine blond hair being exceptional. Thus there can be no doubt that the future belongs to the brunettes. But it would be sad, indeed, if we were to have no more Lillian Russell's, for variety is the spice of beauty.

MURDER MYSTERY OF PIKE'S PEAK

Why Did the Unknown Murderer of Mrs. Bessie Bouton Lure His Beautiful Victim Far Up the Colorado Mountain Side Into a Thicket of Woods, Where No One Could Be Summoned By Her Shrieks for Mercy, and Then Shoot Her to Death and Flee?

And Why Did He Creep Back to the Scene, Strip the Body of All Clothing and Jewels, Toss It Across a Fallen Tree, Pour Benzine Over It and Set It Afire? And Where Is the Murderer Now?

"The Girl's Body Was Stripped of Its Clothing, Roughly Thrown Across a Fallen Tree, and Then the Murderer, Having Lighted a Pile of Brush Under the Head, Saturated It with Benzine in Order That No Possible Trace Might Serve to Identify the Victim."

Mrs. Bessie Bouton, the Supposed Victim.

Searching for the Trail of the Murderer Near the Top of Mt. Cutler.

Denver, Col., Jan. 2.

IF Mrs. Bessie Bouton, formerly of Syracuse, N. Y., is alive she can help clear up a deep mystery—the great murder mystery of Pike's Peak—by communicating immediately with Chief of Police Reynolds, of Colorado Springs, Colo.

If Mrs. Bessie Bouton is really the victim of that tragedy it still remains one of the most intricate murder mysteries that ever baffled the skill of ordinary detectives; the skill of a Sherlock Holmes will be needed to unravel the mesh of threads which daily become more tangled.

The murder mystery of Mount Cutler, in the shadow of Pike's Peak, marks one of the most brutal and depraved crimes in the annals of criminology. A beautiful young girl, barely twenty-two years old, cultured and full of the vigor of life, was shot dead. The girl's body was stripped of its clothing, roughly thrown across a fallen tree and then the murderer, having lighted a pile of brush under the head, saturated the body with benzine that no possible trace might serve to identify the victim.

All this was not done at one time. Certain discoveries show that first the woman was shot in the head. The murderer placed the smoking weapon in his victim's stiffening hands and fled down the side of the mountain. He returned soon afterward to see if, possibly, there might not be one spark of life left which might be fanned into activity and the victim saved.

Slunk Through the Gulches.

Remorse and the return of the infatuation the murderer bore for the woman racked his brain and he would [illegible] the terrible crime he had committed. He slunk through the canyons and gulches and by devious paths around the mountain and finally reached the summit, and found the almost frozen remains just as he had left them.

This was probably at night, and then the fear of detection overcame him, and with the desperation of a maniac he tore from the body the rich and costly garments the girl had worn and hurriedly made preparations for the fire that was to consume the remains and obliterate all traces of the once beautiful young girl.

From her ears and fingers he tore gems worth thousands of dollars. A watch set with diamonds and a belt containing money were appropriated, and then the fire was started. Then the murderer fled again down the side of the mountain and back to Colorado Springs, where he slowly destroyed all traces of the clothing and disappeared with the gems.

But the damp frosts on top of Mount Cutler quenched the flames before they could consume the body. The face and most of the lovely hair were obliterated. Day after day the carrion birds from the high peaks hovered over the summit of the mountain and still were afraid to alight on account of the constantly passing stream of tourists. The cold nights froze the remains until they were literally encased in ice and completely preserved, except for the damage done by flames.

Mount Cutler is the end of the "hogback" that separates North and Cheyenne canyons, six miles south of Colorado Springs. At its base is lovely Stratton Park, dedicated by the dead mining millionaire to the use of the people of Colorado Springs. Two trolley car lines run almost to the foot of the mountain. South Cheyenne canyon is a private show place, to which an admission fee is charged. North Cheyenne canyon, by far the more rugged and beautiful, is owned by the city of Colorado Springs, and is free.

A smooth, wide road traverses its entire length and dozens of ideal picnic grounds have been set apart for tourists and residents. At the point of Mount Cutler are several burro stations, where the little beasts may be hired for trips through the wonderful scenery. About a mile in [illegible] North Cheyenne canyon can be viewed from trail [illegible] which winds and twists up the steep sides and past sharp crags and rocks to the summit of Mount Cutler.

It is a ride that tests the nerves of the average tourist but, with the sure footed burros, is quite safe and pleasant. This trail is also free, and from the summit of the mountain all the attractions of South Cheyenne Canyon can be viewed from a thousand feet above—literally a bird's-eye view.

It is here, within the shadow of Pike's Peak, that the foul murder was committed, and up and down this trial it is almost certain the murderer and victim must have walked. But so numerous are the visitors at all times of the year that a hundred persons could easily have gone to the top and disappeared without being noticed.

On December 17 Dr. F. C. Chamberlain, a dentist of Colorado Springs, and several companions were exploring the top of Mount Cutler. What turned their footsteps toward the dense thicket on the north side none can tell, but suddenly the doctor gave a shout and his companions hurried up and were horror-stricken at the sight.

There, on the frozen ground, the naked body of a girl was lying across a tree. The head was blackened and charred, but the rest of the body quite intact. The coroner was summoned, and after the usual formalities the search for the criminal was begun.

Only Gold-Filled Teeth to Identify.

At every step, however, there seemed to be confusing [illegible]. There was [illegible] no clew to the identity of the remains except a set of teeth heavily filled with gold. With only this to start on, the search began. Piece by piece scraps of information were picked up until it was almost certain the victim was formerly Mrs. Bessie Bouton, whose married life in Syracuse had been unfortunate, and who more recently had been in the company of a man known as Milton Franklin, a flashily dressed gambler.

Step by step the wanderings around the country of these two were traced, but after their visit to Colorado Springs and a stop there for almost a month at the Gough Hotel they seem to have completely dropped out of sight. Franklin's gambling friends claimed he had started for England the early part of December. Then the coroner announced that the body might have been on the mountain since late in September, and the search for the gambler continued with renewed vigor.

But while the detectives were running down the various threads they came across conflicting scents. Sam Howe, the veteran detective, who for thirty or more years has captured criminals of all classes in the Rocky Mountains, advanced a new theory.

"This crime," he said, "might not have been done by Franklin. The gambler was thoroughly infatuated with the woman. He quarrelled with her very frequently. He was insanely jealous of her, but the character of the crime does not seem to fit his nature.

"The murder is one of the unusual kind that we find only at very infrequent intervals. It was more likely the work of a degenerate who might pose as a pillar of society, a deacon in a big church and a more or less fanatical person on temperance, religion or some similar 'ism.'

"This person is probably a professional man who stands high in the community, whose weakness for women might be well shielded and who, in a Jekyll-Hyde manner, would fit either character, and in the one be brutal enough to commit such a crime, while in the other he would be the acme of gentleness.

"While I am not, of course, certain of this theory, it seems best to fit my view of the mystery, and I should not overlook working along these lines. If the gambler, Franklin, committed the deed, he will be found to be a more vicious degenerate than the other mythical person and a far greater menace to society. He should be easily found, however, for he is six feet three inches tall, dark complexioned, and has a scar over his right eye.

A Long Chase for the Murderer.

"Like others of his class, he dresses flashily, and usually wears much jewelry. His training at playing a 'waiting game' will make his capture rather a long chase, for he will 'lay low' and be protected for months, if necessary, but eventually he will step out into the light, and then the mystery may be cleared. Even if he is innocent, he will try to keep out of sight for awhile, and if he finally establishes this fact, then the people working on the case had better get on to the other theory as quickly as possible, and they may find that the murdered woman was not Bessie Bouton at all, but a casual visitor to Colorado Springs who, possibly, had been in the city only a few weeks.

"On this theory it seems best to find somebody who started for Colorado and had been putting off having her teeth fixed for some time, for it is barely possible she had the work done there. Some of the dental work had been done quite recently, and on this one clue the police may be compelled to work. Then my theory of the mystery may be found to be correct, and it should not be difficult to find the criminal."

The theory that some man whose name was George was last in the company of Mrs. Bouton, and murdered her, is supported by the statement of an eye-witness to a quarrel between a man and a young woman near the scene of the crime about the time it probably was committed.

Only three persons have been discovered who believe that they saw the mysterious couple shortly before the crime was committed. On December 4 Miss Alberta C. Hadley and Miss Helen Archer, members of a theatrical company, accompanied by a friend, visited Cheyenne canyon and Seven Falls. At the end of the trolley line, where the burro and 'bus line starts, they noticed a strikingly handsome and well dressed couple seated on a bench and engaged in an animated conversation. The young woman had many physical characteristics which correspond with the only remaining features of identification the dead girl bore. The hair was the same, the form seemed perfect and she was evidently wealthy and refined. There was a mole on her left cheek, however, that will be certain to complete the identification.

"At the time," Miss Hadley said, "we did not lay any stress upon the actions of the couple, thinking they were only engaged in a lovers' quarrel. I stood near enough to [illegible], however, to hear some of their conversation. She called him George and was begging him to do something which he said he could not.

"'Don't be crazy,' was his answer. 'You know I can't do it.' Then I couldn't hear what he said further, but occasionally I heard him use the words wife and children."

"The girl was so pretty and stylish," Miss Hadley went on to say, "that I could not help taking her in from head [illegible] she paid no attention to us [illegible] would clutch her [illegible] if imploring him to yield to her [illegible]

How Being Jilted Sometimes Benefits a Girl.

A NORMAL woman should not be soured by being jilted. She would only be a little wiser, a little better able to judge between the true and the false afterward. She would not be so ready to trust all men, but would have just as much faith in the one man as ever should she love again, for faith and hope and love are the natural heritage of the normal woman. These qualities are as much a part of her as life itself.

The wise girl, however, recognizes that it is better to be jilted before marriage than neglected afterward. She may love him dearly, and yet willingly give him up on hearing that his heart has changed toward her. Probably the worst sorrow a girl can know would be hers, with the knowledge that his heart has gone from her to another. But even then, if she truly loves, she would not feel bitter toward him.

The Mauve Envelope.

A Domestic Comedy of High Society.

MRS. MOTORBILE (of last season's batch of brides, fluffily delicious in a resting gown of pink Japanese crepon trimmed with chinchilla, to MR. REGGIE MOTORBILE, of Fifth Avenue, Newport and Asheville, who is smoking the after-luncheon cigarette on the rug, with his irreproachable back-parting on his wife's lap). You acted very well last night, dearest, though I say it. (With possessive pride.) Anybody would have taken you for a real professional.

MOTORBILE ([illegible]). Good Lor', little woman, I hope not! An actor off the stage always seems to me a kind of cross between a monkey and a peacock.

MRS. M. But on the stage, pet, they've the best of you in the way of using their arms and legs as though they belonged, don't you see?

MOTORBILE (blowing rings). You're thinking of Scudamore last night in the [illegible] scene, when he said, "Is this love?" Why do people [illegible] ask themselves such beastly silly conundrums? . . . I felt like answering, "No, old man, it's a dashed sight more like locomotor." Haw, haw!

MRS. M. (with a wifely titter). Bad boy! Oh you've got some wig paste in your ear!

MOTORBILE. It's such thundering stuff to stick. What price your eyebrows and complexion?

MRS. M. (rubbing her cheek with her handkerchief). I put it on too thick. That's the worst of knowing nothing about make-up. (MOTORBILE coughs.) Oh, you've got on the coat you wore in the second act!

MOTORBILE. With the compromising letter still in the inside pocket. (Pulls out a mauve envelope.) What a lark if you hadn't known anything about the Meadowbrooks' amateur theatricals and had found this compromising piece of stage-property lurking in my garments, eh?

MRS. M. (with a quiver of the lip). A lark, you unkind boy! If (she fumbles for her handkerchief) that is your idea!——

MOTORBILE. Oh, dearest, I say, don't cry! (He lumbers up from the rug.)

MRS. M. (nestling in his necktie). Oh what should I do if you—if you ever turned out to be like other men!

MOTORBILE. (who is even more like other men than some). My darling! My own darling! And what should I do if you were as other women are!

MRS. M. (who boasts of no divergence from the type). Dearest! (An osculatory interval, then tea appears). T'ch (MOTORBILE rebounds). Please put it here, near the fire. Tea, dear?

MOTORBILE. Thanks, no; we had salt fish for lunch. Something long, and cool, and fizzy's more my notion. (Going in search of it, encounters a male visitor in the hall). Hullo, Vanguard! Dropped in for tea?

"Moving closer until his mustache tickles her ear."

VANGUARD (being relieved of a motor-coat). If Mrs. Motorbile——

MOTORBILE. She'll be delighted!

MRS. M. (effusively, as VANGUARD appears). How sweet!

VANGUARD (MAJOR ROUGHRIDER EVERARD, veteran of San Juan Hill, Newport, Tuxedo and Palm Beach, thirty-eight. Getting puffy under the eyes, but irresistible still.) How sweet!

MRS. M. (consciously glancing at a mirror). It's one of Mrs. Osborn's. Glad you like it.

VANGUARD (with a brutality which never fails to be effective). I never said I liked it. (He fixes his eyes on MRS. MOTORBILE'S and drops softly into a chair quite near.)

MRS. M. (with a little thrill). Glad you like me in it, then.

VANGUARD (more brutally still). I don't like you. It is not possible to like you. Don't you know?

MRS. M. (with another thrill). I'm sorry!

VANGUARD (who says the same kind of thing to every pretty woman). There is no sorrow in you. A little devil sits in your heart rejoicing over the souls of the men you have sent to——

MRS. M. (hastily). Sugar!

VANGUARD. One lump. What a curious perfume! (Sniffs.) It seems to come in waves at one.

MRS. M. From those violets there, in the jade bowl?

VANGUARD (more brutally than ever). No!

MRS. M. From what, then?

VANGUARD. Your hair. That subtle perfume is one of your lures.

MRS. M. (beginning to enjoy herself). Really, Major Vanguard!

VANGUARD. Really, Mrs. Motorbile! Ha'ah! Now you wrinkle your eyebrows and look innocent. That is another of your lures. New-fallen snow, the breast-feather of an eider-duck, the first snowdrop of the year, could not suggest greater purity, a spotlessness more complete . . . and yet——

MRS. M. (fluttered). I forget if you said cream?

VANGUARD. I never forget anything you say!

MRS. M. Don't you think Reggie is looking well?

VANGUARD (softly). Damn Reggie!

MRS. M. (indignantly). Major Vanguard!

VANGUARD. He ought to be damned. Paradise in this world and Heaven in the next—that would be manifestly unfair. Shall I go before you turn me out? Perhaps it would be wiser to go?

MRS. M. Perhaps!

VANGUARD. Ah! then I shall stay. I never did the wise thing—never in my life. Let me burn my wings a little more, please.

MRS. M. (flushed). How absurd you are!

VANGUARD (coolly). Possibly. You must be inured by this time to the effect you produce on men. Look at your husband. Apart from you, a man of ordinary intelligence. Near you—what?

MRS. M. Do you infer that I make an idiot of my husband?

VANGUARD. He would not be a man if you did not.

MRS. M. (suddenly remembering the mauve envelope). Suppose my husband did not—care about me as much as you?——

VANGUARD (with studied violence). No man will ever care for you as much as I!

MRS. M. (hastily). As much as you think he does, I meant to say. (A pause, during which she mentally arranges the details of a little impromptu comedy of which the mauve envelope is to be the mainspring).

VANGUARD (wondering what the deuce she is driving at). Can he be as original as that?

MRS. M. (showing the mauve envelope, upside down). Do you call this sort of thing original? It tumbled out of one of his pockets to-day?

VANGUARD (beginning to see light). And you've looked inside?

MRS. M. (putting the envelope away). I've looked inside.

VANGUARD. And you know who she is?

MRS. M. I know who she is.

VANGUARD. Then everything's as clear as mud, and I needn't pretend to be astonished?

MRS. M. (puzzled). N—no, I suppose not.

VANGUARD. She's a taking woman, in the rag and bone-and-hank-of-hair style.

MRS. M. (with elevated eyebrows). Is she?

VANGUARD. And the affair has the respectability of age about it—began years before you married him.

"Mrs. Motorbile fluffily delicious in a resting gown of pink Japanese crepon, and Mr. Motorbile smoking his after-luncheon cigarette."

MRS. M. (with a ringing in her ears). Years before——

VANGUARD. And probably he would have broken with her long ago but for habit. Habit means a deuce of a lot in these affairs.

MRS. M. Does—does it?

VANGUARD. So don't be rough on him, Mrs. Motorbile, or make a scene.

MRS. M. (faintly). Make a——

VANGUARD (moving nearer). Keep your discovery until it's likely to be useful. Nothing like a bit of knowledge of that kind for coming in handy.

MRS. M. Why—why handy?

VANGUARD. When you've been having a nibble at the apple yourself! The [illegible] pippin that grows on the Tree of Knowledge. (His mustache tickles her ear). Perhaps you think you wont, but you will. It's nature—human nature. So, with a prophetic eye on the glass house of the future, don't throw stones at Motorbile and Mrs. Lenox, will you?

MRS. M. (suddenly). Mrs. Lenox! Mrs. Lenox! (Choking). She! Is it she? That——

VANGUARD. Didn't you tell me you'd read the letter—didn't you say you knew who she was?

MRS. M. The letter was a stage property—used in amateur theatricals. I was joking. I meant to make a fool of you.

VANGUARD (getting up in a rage). And you have! Oh, hang it, Mrs. Motorbile, you know you have! You've made me give the man away—you've made me play a part in your theatricals with a vengeance! . . . (Grinds his teeth). William Tell! William Tell! Oh! look here, Mrs. Motorbile, this is too raw! (He knocks over a silver table of the tottery miniature kind). No, don't ring; I'll pick them up.

MRS. M. Do be quiet! Leave those things alone, and let me think. Mrs. Lenox! Oh! and she has been so laboriously civil—so studiously—— Ah h! (Clenching her hands). Give me that silver fish with the topaz eyes—quick, please! (VANGUARD obeys, and she hurls it into the fire). It was her wedding present, her—— Ah h! How shall I pay her out—both of them?

VANGUARD (using the psychological moment). You know!

MRS. M. (vacantly). Do I? (She looks at VANGUARD, who, with his back to her, is picking the fish out of the fire with the log tongs). Ah, yes, of course, that way! But I think I had rather keep the right to despise the Mrs. Lenoxes, thank you all the same, Major Vanguard. Do you mind ringing that bell?

VANGUARD (after an embarrassed pause). I'm to go?

MRS. M. I think so, please.

VANGUARD. And you will never speak to me again?

MRS. M. Oh, dear, yes, of course I shall speak to you; it would be awfully awkward not!

VANGUARD (hope rekindling). And—and your revenge?

MRS. M. (slowly). I shall have it! It will be highly original, depend upon that—a revenge quite unique in present-day social history.

VANGUARD. You pique my curiosity.

MRS. M. As you admitted, my husband cares for me a good deal. As I found out just now, thanks to my idiotic ruse with this (She tosses the mauve envelope into the fire), he doesn't care for me enough to give up his—friend. Well, he shall! (With determination). That's all.

VANGUARD (with a sneer). So that will be your revenge?

MRS. M. I told you it would be highly original. (To the servant) Door! (As VANGUARD vanishes) Marie shall put out the Paquin dinner gown. (Surveying herself in the mirror) I mean to look better than my best to-night, and for many days and nights to come, until, until —— (She goes upstairs to dress).

Household Secrets You Perhaps Don't Know.

EVERY housekeeper is constantly on the lookout for [illegible] articles that will add to the comfort and [illegible] of her home. In [illegible] one [illegible] everything [illegible] there are numbers of persons [illegible] willing to make for themselves such novelties as are suggested to them.

One of the most useful of these is what might be termed a "tea strainer" hat box. Such a box may be made to hold from three to five hats, according to its size, but one does not want a box larger than will be necessary to just hold the hats nicely. A light wooden box can be obtained from a grocer or dry goods shop with a lid to fit over the top. The inside is lined with cretonne, sateen or any lining material at hand. One strip does for two sides, and the bottom and two pieces should be cut to exactly fit the ends of the box and then sewed to the strip. The lining is then ready to tack with tiny nails to each corner. Cover the outside in the same fashion with heavy, dark burlaps, if the box is to be used for travelling purposes, and with pretty cretonne if it is only to occupy a place in the bedroom or the wardrobe. Draw the edges of the cretonne [illegible] the inner [illegible] part way [illegible] and then it is made permanently [illegible] by a narrow gimp on the outer side [illegible] the edge, held down by short brass [illegible] tacks. The lid is lined and covered [illegible] fastened on the edges by [illegible] tacks. [illegible] a hardware store a pretty brass handle for the [illegible] and brass corner pieces to strengthen and adorn the corners. [illegible] may be fastened to the front of the box [illegible] with screws, and two hinges to the back. The box illustrated has five wire tea strainers tacked in the centre of the lid, bottom and each side. Each strainer fits into the crown of a hat—sometimes it needs to be [illegible] on the top—and it is the simplest thing in the world to run a hatpin through the wire and so hold the hat securely in place. These may be covered with thin silk.

A shallow box made in the same way, without strainers, is admirable for keeping dress waists smooth, and one fitted inside with pockets serves to keep dainty shoes and slippers free from dust. Cretonne can be had at ten cents a remnant, or the same price by the yard for beautiful qualities.

Another pretty and very useful article is the sewing screen. This may range in height from three to four feet, and in width from two to two and a half feet. The screen consists of two upright pieces of narrow wood connected by three short pieces of the same width—one at the top, one at the bottom, and one in the middle of each panel. Over the back of each panel is stretched a plain piece of denim or a flowered piece of cretonne. Suppose the screen to be painted white and the back pieces [illegible] color [illegible] cretonne flowered in blue poppies, or some such dainty design, and make a large pocket for the top and bottom of one side of the screen by cutting a strip a foot or more longer than the width of the screen and gathering it to a tape an inch below the top. Gather the bottom edge and sew it to the foundation of the screen, tacking the sides to the wood with little brass tacks. Long, almost headless, brass nails are driven in a row into the wooden bar across one panel of the screen, and a few small hooks are screwed into the top of the opposite side. Spools of various sizes are slid over the nails, and the hooks are used to hang up emeries, scissors and little things of that sort during the process of sewing. Smaller bags attached to the screen are for buttons, tapes and the host of small things one requires while sewing, while a small pin cushion hangs on a hook at the top of one corner and a needlebook is conveniently attached to the other. The big pocket on the screen is for the work itself and patterns.

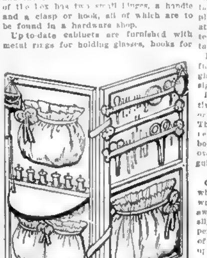
If a carpenter makes the screen it might be curved at the top, and the little shelf attached to one side might also be curved. This little shelf is covered with plain blue, having the edges of the cloth tacked down with little brass tacks. Two little hinges fasten it to the wooden cross bar, and a strap on one side, with a loop at the end, is hung upon a hook to support it when the shelf is in use. Such a screen may have bows of ribbon on the pockets and be made as lovely as it is useful. Its two sides are fastened with hinges, and fold up when not in use; while, if hinges are not accessible, straps of cretonne are tacked at the top and bottom of the woodwork, in contrary directions on the outer and inner sides, and serve the purpose of hinges admirably.

If the sewing screen is a boon to the needlewoman, what may not be said in favor of the little chafing dish cabinets which are brought out in styles to tempt the money out of the pockets of both women and men?

They are tall and short; of glass, mahogany, weathered oak and Flemish oak, but, above all, they are compact while holding a surprising number of articles useful to the manipulator of a chafing dish.

If smooth and well finished, the boxes and posts may be stained or painted a dark color, with white inside the cabinets. If such boxes cannot be had in some out-of-the-way place, a carpenter should finish off the four small uprights, which should then be stained in weathered oak or a dark green. Paint the inside of the boxes white and cover the outside with dark green denim or burlap, finishing off the corners with brass pieces if they can be had and the borders with brass tacks. The lid of the box has two small hinges, a handle and a clasp or hook, all of which are to be found in a hardware shop.

Up-to-date cabinets are furnished with metal rings for holding glasses, hooks for cups and wires to support plates and saucers. These are set in the sides and doors of a cabinet, leaving room upon the shelf for a dish or two.



The Sewing Screen.

The lower box has rings just large enough to hold bottles of condiments, salt, pepper, olives and such sauces as blend deliciously with the delectable dainties served up in a chafing dish. By fitting hooks, rings and wire straps properly it is perfectly wonderful how many things can be crowded into these little cabinets. The upper shelf serves as a place for the chafing dish and the lower one is convenient for placing other things. The college man keeps a decanter and tray of glasses on his or a pitcher of iced water, according to his tastes.

College girls and boys and bachelor men and maids in large cities find the greatest use for these cabinets, which while they economize space, provide many a comfort and can be made very decorative.

* * *

One of the prettiest novelties to interest a housewife is a soft, open-meshed cloth embroidered in stained glass patterns and effects. This material is beautifully imitated in [illegible] which is woven in applique and embroidered effects, and retails at from $1.25 a yard of double width material to $15 a pair and upward for curtains.

In these materials all colors are wonderfully mingled and blended, as in stained glass, with a touch of gold relieving the design in place of the leads used in glass.

Few [illegible] lend themselves so attractively to the fitting up of a hall window or one where a window seat fits in easily. The material is so wide that but little is needed. Where a window is narrow the border, where there is one, can be brought over so skilfully that one cannot distinguish the seam.

* * *

One of those handy little arrangements which women love appears in elaborately wrought scroll work stands to which is swung a square of figured silk, or silkoline slightly ruffled around the edges. A clever person can make a dainty imitation of one of those articles, used for sewing wood upon [illegible] crossed rods hold the corners of the gathered silk square, which droops in a hollow between them and serves the purpose of a holder for mending, darning, fancy work or newspapers and magazines.

* * *

Some of these novelties are being brought out in woven grass and wicker, with a little shelf at the bottom, between four legs, and one or two upright compartments for music or newspapers, made in the shape of large butterfly wings or clover leaves.

Attractive as these are, their price is sometimes prohibitive, and, therefore, the woman who can fashion the uprights of stiff cardboard and cover them with green burlaps or denim is fortunate. She can work the shaded lines of the clover leaf with shaded silk and edge the uprights with a green and gold gimp. If butterfly wings are selected these may be embroidered in large dots upon silk or satin. Watered silk would give the best results. The wings are joined to two narrow side and one bottom piece, and the whole must be mounted upon a small, light stand, about the height of a music rack. A tiny, high-legged bench could do duty, if nothing else was to be had, with the legs wrapped in green silk and a bow at the sides, where the upright stand begins. A well made holder would be decidedly ornamental [illegible] very useful.

* * *

The pompadour fad reigns in home decorations as well as upon clothing, and one of the loveliest dressing tables in this style can be made a perfect dream of prettiness in rose color and white.

A very smart one had the frame and supports of an oval mirror wrapped loosely in mull, embroidered in a small, distinct figure. The mull was held tightly in place by crossed satin ribbons of rose color, finished on the bottom of the supports with rosettes of rose color and at the top of the mirror with an elaborate arrangement of bowknot loops. The ribbon was wired to make the loops stand up, which they did, in the crinkly style associated with the old French dynasties.

Below the mirror the woodwork was covered by pleated, undecorated muslin, very thin, and arranged in fan shape from a large rosette at the bottom. The table might be of finest mahogany or plainest pine, for all one sees of it. It was covered with pink cambric, or sateen, over which was stretched a top of very open white English embroidery, or cut work.

From the edges of the table fell a valance of embroidered mull, over pink, looped up on each side and corner by pink rosettes. The table, or box, was draped by two curtains of mull, lightly embroidered, mounted upon a plain [illegible] with [illegible] open fronts and bottom edges finished with wide ruffles of lace.

This charming little accessory to the bed room or boudoir would look equally lovely in blue or lavender.

* * *

Fads are responsible for some very fetching and [illegible] novelties in the way of house decoration. One of these now exists for mounting little pictures and decorative objects upon glass.

A desk set for a man has its long glass pencil and penholder underlaid with a brightly colored little hunting scene. A similar picture glows through a little glass slab back of the pen rack and the small glass box which holds stamps, while quite an elaborate picture decorates the bottom of the glass tray.

A smoker's set has the tray and glass holders for cigars and matches all decorated underneath with gilt cigar bands. The little brightly colored bands are massed together most effectively. Sometimes picture frames are made up in this style, and a smoker sees, through curls of blue mist, his sweetheart's face and favorite cigar brands delightfully intermingled.

ORIGIN OF THE "BEST MAN."

THE barbaric bridegroom secured his mate by one of two methods—capture or chase. Wooing was a form of girl-stealing. According to the former method, the groom started on the warpath with some chosen companion. This may be the origin of "the best man"—who knows? The best man and the wooer had to go in full uniform and armor, for in those [illegible] times the father-in-law and mother-in-law either succeeded in putting the wooer out of the way the first time he called, or else he made away with the daughter—took to the woods or the plains, as the case [illegible] flints and arrows showering after the retreating party, as we now throw slippers.

POWERFUL STRANGE FORCE

Will This New Discovery Do Away With the Mails and Wireless Telegraphy?

The Dead Brought Back to Life

Would Be but Little More Startling Than the Marvellous Things Done by People Who Have Tried This Wonderful New Force.

How Prominent Men and Women Use It to Influence the Minds of Others—Any One Can Do It—Distance No Barrier—One Person's Control Over Another Now Fully Explained.

Every Man, Woman and Child in the United States Can Have "The Secrets of Magnetic Force, Health and Power" Absolutely Free.

Prof. F. T. McIntyre, New York.

New York Special Correspondence.—Prof. F. T. McIntyre, a well-to-do scientist of this city, has created a sensation in the scientific world. [illegible] delving down in the realms of nature's mysteries he has discovered a delicate but powerful law that seems destined to revolutionize the theories of the most noted authorities on Mind Force. Many people look upon him as a man possessed of divine power, for he has told them how to [illegible] people far and near and to [illegible] and others of all ills as if by magic [illegible] project their thoughts, [illegible] and build up the mechanism [illegible] Doctors and magnetists who have tried the workings of this new discovery admit that it surpasses anything in the history of [illegible] power.

In explaining the method to a reporter Prof. McIntyre said: "I am convinced that everybody can accomplish the things I have done if they understand the system. It would be a grand thing if every man, woman and child in this country learned the use of this wonderful force. There would be no more disease, immorality, drunkenness, poverty or failures in life. There is no reason why [illegible] be able to prevent murders and suicides, separations and insanity, for through the use of my discovery almost any phenomena seem possible. I have sent free illustrated pamphlets to people in many parts of the world which explain the principles of my new discovery, and I find they can do the same wonderful things that I have done, and for which many persons think I possess some special power. I have sent these printed pamphlets out without any charge whatever, as I am anxious to have everyone test the wonders of this new discovery. The letters received from each person who tries it are the same. They all are loud in their exclamations of surprise, and say they never dreamed such things possible. Many [illegible] but I refuse them. I am working for the uplifting of mankind and science. The kind letters received from grateful hearts more than pay for my services. I will send a copy of my free book to every person who writes me without any charge whatever."

Prof. McIntyre handed the reporter a basketful of letters from people in many parts of the world. They were indeed astounding. Mr. James Kuba, a prominent business man of Chicago, living at 5647 [illegible] street, wrote the following:

"I never dreamed such things possible. If I had only known of this sooner. This system has made a different man of me. I shall give up business as I make more money through the use of this system than I can in my business. It has brought back my sight. I can see without glasses, and work without them, too. It has overcome my backwardness, and I can now handle my customers in fine shape. I did not know I was so full of the magnetism. I think your system wonderful."

Mr. Eugene Devenson, Baton Rouge, La., writes: "Having tried your system, I unhesitatingly pronounce it to be and to do all you claim for it."

Rev. H. G. King, pastor Christian Church, Concord, Cal., writes: "I cannot recommend your system too highly and am willing to answer any inquiries in regard to it."

Dr. H. A. Lounsbury, Wheatly, Ont., Can., writes: "I have thoroughly investigated the methods and inventions of Prof. McIntyre, and can say that his system is scientific and surpasses anything in the line of Therapeutics that has come to my notice."

Fred S. Breit, Apartado 285, Guadalajara, Mex., writes: "I have done wonderful things in influencing people with this system. Have had over fifty persons under my control and compelled them to do startling things. I advise everybody to try it. This system is truly marvelous."

Prof. McIntyre then presented the reporter with a copy of his new and finely illustrated treatise, entitled "The Secrets of Magnetic Force, Health and Power," which he intends to send absolutely free to every person who desires to try the powers of his new discovery. This is truly a generous act of this great scientist, and every person who reads this should take advantage of his kindness and liberality. His name will certainly go down in history as one of the greatest benefactors the human race has ever known. Send your name and address to the professor and ask for a copy of this wonderful free treatise. Your request will be kept confidential. If you wish it sent free and at once, write to Prof. F. T. McIntyre, Dept. 170, No. 125 West Thirty-fourth street, New York City, N. Y.

You will be amazed at the workings of this truly wonderful discovery. # WILL YOUR FOOT WIN THE SOLID GOLD SLIPPER?

The Pretty Foot of Mrs. Charles J. Monckton, of Bloomington, Ill.

THE judges who will award the solid gold slipper to the owner of the smallest, prettiest and most perfect foot hope to render their verdict within the next week or so. The verdict is already being eagerly awaited in every city and town in the United States, and when announced it will be the signal for a perfect shower of congratulatory messages upon the winner of the gold slipper trophy.

At this time it is impossible to give even the slightest hint as to who/is most likely to win the slipper. There are very small and pretty and nicely proportioned feet everywhere, as is evident from the entries received in this contest. Even the very last foot of all to be passed upon by the judges may be more perfect in every way that any of the others, thereby snatching the gold slipper from the most likely contestant at the very last moment.

It is suggested by the judges, in order to expedite the awarding of the prize that no more entries be sent in unless by contestants who have exceptionally small and very beautiful feet. By this is meant feet that are not longer than 8½ inches at the very most, and which are nicely proportioned and free from corns, bunions and other disfigurements.

Within the past few days requests have been sent to a few contestants asking them to send in one or two specified additional foot measurements. Contestants who do not receive one of these requests must not feel disappointed, because the additional foot measurements are only asked for in cases where the measurements already received have not been sufficient to enable the judges to determine whether the foot in question is a perfectly proportioned one or not. Contestants who do receive requests for the additional measurements are asked to send them in with as little delay as possible.

The photograph of a very pretty foot, which has been highly commended by the judges, is reproduced herewith. It belongs to Mrs. Charles J. Monckton, of Bloomington, Ill., and is 8¼ inches long. The foot proportions are almost perfect. Mrs. Monckton has never worn tight-fitting or heavily soled shoes.

Contestants who have not yet entered but who desire to do so, should read the instructions regarding the contest published in this paper last Sunday, and mail their entry to

How to Give a "Snow Dinner."

By Mrs. Linda Hull Larned, Author of "The Hostess of To-day."

"Each guest pulled one tree out by the roots, to find a mass of delicious ice cream underneath."

THE city or town in this country that does not have one or more dancing parties for charity during the Winter is far behind the times, or else set apart in an eccentric community.

Philanthropists have found that it is the surest way of making money, if not the easiest, so the public ball for charity is a permanent, annual function almost everywhere, and it will be as long as the people must be cajoled into yielding up that which should now willingly come out of the fulness of one's purse.

One of the most effective of these charity affairs ever attempted was a "Snow Ball," and one of the numerous dinners preceding it was a "Snow Dinner." The large assembly hall lent itself admirably to this scheme of decoration by having a balcony around its two sides and one end. At the other end was a large stage for the supper and the music.

From the railing of the balcony wires were strung from side to side at intervals of two feet, and on these wires were suspended thousands of strings of snow flakes, resulting when put in motion by the waves of air from the floor below when full of dancers, the liveliest and most realistic of snow storms. These strings were fastened to the wires about a foot apart and bits of cotton were tied to the string every six inches. The strings came within about seven feet of the floor, or just to escape the head of the tallest dancer.

The women of the committee had spent hours and hours doing these miles and miles of string so that the snow flake bee, although in secret session, superseded everything—even bridge whist and Christmas shopping—for weeks and weeks before the event took place, which was just after the New Year.

Other women at other secret sessions made bushel basketfuls of paper icicles, and those who did not possess the working spirit furnished funds for the thousands of glass icicles which were the officers—so to speak—of this great army of which the rank and file were of paper. These plebeian ones were made out of silver paper cut into narrow strips and then into short pieces of different lengths and wound cornucopia fashion into points. A lattice-work made of thin strips of wood, covered with cheese cloth, formed the eaves from which these icicles were suspended. These were placed all around the edge of the balcony and were garnished with cotton snow and made beautiful by boughs of evergreen, upon which were sprinkled tufts of cotton snow. The music and supper behind were concealed by a row of evergreen trees along the edge of the stage. These were sprinkled with cotton upon which was a dusting of powdered mica. Electric lights covered with white paper shades or opaque globes were suspended everywhere, so the whole effect was sparkling and dazzling and beautiful—a Winter fairyland.

The White Dinner That May Be Made So Effective.

The table was an oblong square so completely covered with the decorations that only a white margin wide enough for the plates and glasses was visible. The foundation of this covering was a large oblong mirror, bordered with cotton. In the centre of this was a piece of ice, on a silver tray, scooped out in the middle to hold a glass vase filled with white tulips. Cotton concealed the edge of the tray and bits of fine evergreen were placed here and there, furnishing the connecting link between snow and ice. The hole was so deep as to completely conceal the glass vase, so the tulips looked as though they were growing out of the ice.

A big round lamp shade, like half of a huge snowball, covered the electric light immediately over the tulips, and this was also covered with cotton, and from its eaves dripped dozens of icicles of various sizes. These, of course, were of glass. On each corner of the mirror was a crystal candlestick with a shaded candle, and between these and the ice centrepiece were large snowballs. These were ordinary covers for food, which used to be on every farmer's table years ago, and they now only cost five cents each. They were covered with white cotton, a bit of evergreen being fastened to the invisible handle in the top of each. Under these were dishes containing white bonbons in the form of snowballs and snowball cakes. All of the cotton was sprinkled generously with white diamond dust, which, with white china and crystal, lent the necessary sparkle to the occasion.

The Appetising White Menus.

The menu began with grape fruit and rum in ice. The fruit was cut into pieces and served in one of those glasses called "brandy sniff"—a double boiler arrangement in which the inside receptacle rests in an outer one filled with minced ice.

Then there were roasted oysters on the half shell. They were served in plates of hot salt instead of ice. The oysters were roasted in the shell, their upper halves removed and two tiny strips of broiled bacon and a few drops of onion juice being put on each one just as they were served. After this, the soup, a white one with snow balls floating about, made of whipped and salted white of egg poached in spoonfuls in boiling milk; then fried filets of flounder—or it might have been halibut—accompanied by a cold white sauce made of sour cream, mixed with whipped cream flavored with parsley and cucumber.

The salad was made of lettuce hearts, with tiny balls scooped from very white apples. In the middle was a spoonful of creamy white mayonnaise. On each plate was a piece of celery stalk filled with a creamy cheese. There was a suspicion of brandy about this.

The sweets were small earthen flower pots in earthen saucers, both previously dipped in white of egg, then granulated sugar, to resemble frost. Christmas trees were growing from the pots, and on each was some tiny toy as a gift. Each guest pulled one tree out by the roots, to find a mass of delicious ice cream underneath. After this, the finger bowls were placed, and then came a silver dish filled with frosted grapes. They were hothouse grapes cut in small bunches and they had been frosted in dipping them in white egg, then in fine granulated sugar. Just before bringing them in they were given another dusting of the sugar.

The place cards were both amusing and original. They were white cards with frosted edges. Upon each was printed, artistically, quotations from one of the recent jungle books. Of course, they were adapted to the peculiarities of the different guests, and may be changed to fit. For a clubman and bon vivant was something like this:

"John woke on Jan. first and felt queer.
Said, 'Crackers, I'll swear off this year.
But the birds and the wine
Were uncommonly fine,
I think I'll just boycott the beer.'"

LINDA HULL LARNED.

Mr. Edison's Perpetual Hobby

OF all the marvellous achievements of Thos. A. Edison the PHONOGRAPH alone has had his constant care. Its improvement is ever in mind to this day, and the product of his great works shows the genius that first invented it, then developed it to its present perfection, and is carrying it to an end that we do not yet see.

His trade mark name "Phonograph" (applied to none but his product) is an accepted word of our language, found in the dictionary, known to all. During the years of development that are past many obtained unfavorable impressions of its performance, and imitations increased a dislike, perhaps well founded, at that time. This idea is an injustice to the great master, whose years of constant toil have brought it from a crude talking machine to a satisfying musical instrument.

To-day a rich toned Phonograph, free from all mechanical noises, awaits your trial. It will entertain your family and your friends, often when all else fails. It will educate your children. It provides classical selections in orchestra or song. It brings the latest hits to your home, however isolated, and is better than the show itself, for it plays only the things you like and as often as you like.

When you know Mr. Edison's Phonograph of to-day, you will buy one. Go hear it. There are dealers everywhere, but if there is no dealer near you, send to us for the catalogue and a copy of the 28th edition of our Souvenir Booklet, printed in colors.

The High-Hearted, Laughter-Loving and Spirited Fun of the High-Bred Women of Beacon Hill and the Back Bay, Who Can Play Tomboy, Rolick and Frolic and Prove They Are Not 'Prim and Puritanical,' but Blithesome and Smart.

Constance Tippett.

SOMEHOW Boston girls have the reputation of being very prim and staid. Most of them are thought to wear glasses and have an intellectual look that is quite at variance with beauty.

But the real Boston girl of the fashionable blue-blooded families is quite a different creature.

She is as pretty, as rollicking, as winsome, as distinctly feminine and human in all her ways as the girls of any other American city.

Indeed, there are no more high-hearted, fun-loving girls anywhere.

Some recent photographs of the Vincent Club girls show how delightfully unconventional Boston girls can be when they go in for a good time.

Just think of a pretty Beacon street maid dressing up in knee breeches and silk stockings and acting like a tom-boy! But that is precisely what tall, handsome Grace Dabney did.

Not to be outdone, another Beacon street miss, Eleanora Sears, costumed herself like an old English esquire, with close-fitting trousers and top boots, and paced up and down with gallant strides or sat cross-legged on the floor!

These antics and a great many others occurred at the girls' annual frolic, which has come to be known as the Vincent theatricals, for women audiences only.

Just recently the Vincent Club girls have been making money for the costumes and staging of another play this coming Spring.

The rule is that each girl shall either make some article of fancy needlework, or a bit of painted china or a painting, or else contribute $5 toward the club's fund for its annual fair.

Of course $5 is nothing to any of these girls, but they nearly all prefer to make something with their own hands, for they have found that these things nearly always bring a good big price at the fair, especially when their young men admirers or the equally susceptible old Back Bay bachelors and clubmen are the buyers.

The fair itself is a sedate enough function, very much like any society charity affair.

The fun begins when the fair is over and the unsold articles are put up at auction. Then some rollicking society bud leaps upon a table and assumes the role of auctioneer. That is how it is done in Boston nowadays.

Maya Lindsay.
Eleanora Sears.

Eleanor Hyde. Grace Dabney. Eleanora Gray.

Susie Thayer.

Miss Wainwright.

Dorothy Forbes, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Murray Forbes, of Commonwealth avenue, the president of the Vincent Club, is especially clever in knocking things down, or rather up, to the highest bidder.

As each trinket is held up for sale, the merits of the maker are extolled in fulsome praise to the merriment of the audience. If it should chance to be a bit of ne work by Eleanora Sears, the fair auctioneer will dilate on the prowess of the maker, her long-distance swims at Newport, her tennis victories at the Casino—and bring the harangue to a climax by showing how marvellous it is that such an illustrious athlete, between balls and swims and what not, could find time to do such an exquisite piece of art work for sweet charity!

Such a little speech always brings forth cheers, and the bidding starts in with $5 jumps that speedily carry the price of the knick-knack up to $25, $50 or $100.

When Dorothy Forbes's silvery voice begins to tire with the auctioneering strain Kitty Fay usually leaps upon the table and relieves her with a similar string of grandiloquence.

The girls always see that no article is sacrificed. They bid it in themselves if anything is going to be knocked down too cheaply. But their usual method is to prod up their young men friends if the bidding lags.

The Vincent Club girls have never yet been known to come out short of cash after one of these sales.

Every Spring the girls of the Vincent Club give a performance for charity, at which a select audience consisting of women only is allowed to be present.

They are mostly the mothers, elder sisters, aunts and cousins of the fair performers. So the girls feel at liberty to do all the high kicking and indulge in any other rollicking sport that they please.

Indeed, the cultured and conservative Boston matrons seem to enjoy this fun quite as much as do the girls themselves.

Just how these Boston girls of the very best families appear on their annual romp the public at large is now privileged to see for the first time in a set of very unusual photographs at their latest romp.

Those who know Eleanora Sears were not at all surprised that she chose a man's part in "The Tomboy" play. For it is a fad of Miss Sears to try to appear mannish. Her jackets are cut in [illegible] masculine style and she affects a manly swing in her gait. But the bright [illegible] locks and exquisite coloring of her cheeks and the roguish flash of her pretty [illegible] eyes quite give the lie to her assumed role of a mannish girl.

Eleanora Sears is the daughter of the very wealthy Frederick R. Searses, of Beacon street, who have a splendid Summer home at Manchester-by-the-Sea.

Miss Sears is an excellent whip, and drives a pair of high steppers with a dashing grace. She is well known to the smart New York set at Newport, where she has won many a game of tennis at the Casino. During the past Summer she astonished everyone by taking a four mile swim from Bailey's Beach, clear round the point and up to Eastons Beach. Later she won the women's tennis championship at the Casino.

Marion Ladd, one of Boston's prettiest society girls, who comes of a family of beauties, chose the same make-up in the last Vincent Club show as did Eleanora Sears, being an esquire. Very jauntily did she act the part, too, especially in the marches, where her tall, symmetrical figure and dark beauty would have won admiration on any stage.

But, oh, how different in her masculine attire from the conventional bud seen at Copley Hall teas and in Back Bay drawing rooms!

In her "make-up" she could indulge in all the rollicking sport with which she was actually bubbling over just like any jolly good fellow of the other sex. All her friends say she would make a stunning boy.

But the girl who quite took every one's breath away in her [illegible] was "The Evening Fire" was Olivia Thorndike. She was as bewitching as Loie Fuller ever was in her famous serpentine dances.

If Miss Thorndike were to go upon the stage—but what a shocking suggestion! No true-blue Boston girls ever do that. Their Vincent Club vaudeville shows give them a chance to gratify that innate love of acting and being admired in public that burns in every girl's heart.

Another dancer among this talented group of Boston society girls is Laura Wilson, whose "Starry Night" reel was a [illegible] Sweet dainty [illegible] Miss [illegible] esquire [illegible]

Then there was [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Wolcott [illegible] Prince, who, with uplifted arms and [illegible] gyrations, did the premiere of the ballet with startling da[illegible]

Miss Suzanne Merrill [illegible] the Sun, with a crown of flaring [illegible] and clad in a costume of [illegible] a dazzling picture of [illegible] as she whirled round and [illegible] dances.

As light and airy as a fairy Dorothy Jordan seemed as she [illegible] "The Dawn o' Day," clad in [illegible] the color of clouds [illegible] the first rays of the morning sun. It was Miss Jordan's first appearance [illegible] of the Vincent Club [illegible] she was a [illegible] as one of [illegible] brightest spirits of the [illegible]

Then there was [illegible] songs [illegible] "Sisters" [illegible] too, were [illegible] Misses Marion Fenno and Frances Dana, the [illegible] granddaughters of the poet Longfellow.

When [illegible] Boston girls [illegible] into the wayward songs, "Oh [illegible] Be Good," and "Pupils All Are We Full of Deviltry," it seemed quite impossible to believe that these were all [illegible] maids, supposed by all the canons of [illegible] tradition to be [illegible] so good and proper.

The author of all this hilarious nonsense that set pretty toes to tripping and lithe bodies to swaying in a saturnalia of [illegible] [illegible] sport is sweet, bright-eyed Constance Tippett.

But perhaps prettier than the clever play acting were the girls who sat in all sorts of graceful attitudes [illegible] while waiting in the green room and between the [illegible] for their cues.

Shy little Mary Head, with her dark tresses flowing down over her shoulders as she sat on the floor, half reclining upon her chum's shoulder, was a picture of unconscious grace.

The tall, stately beauty, Eleanor Gray, plumped down upon a rug Oriental fashion, in charming abandon, quite oblivious that she had any dignity to uphold.

It seemed natural for sweet, petite Mrs. H. B. Stanton, who used to be Esther Hayden, to sit down cross-legged like a tired schoolgirl, but when the statuesque beauty Eleanor Hyde, the cousin of Mme. [illegible] Eames, did the same thing one could not help laughing at the ludicrousness of the whole situation.

Other girls in odd make-ups who contributed to the picturesqueness of the scene were Miss Edith Rotch and Harriett Robeson, both of whom have been much in evidence at Newport functions during the past Summer. Miss Edith Wainwright, in her white poke bonnet, was a pretty shepherdess.

But it was after the play that the girls [illegible] on the stage [illegible] went [illegible] parties [illegible] the same [illegible] of thing that their brothers would do after a victorious game of college football.

As a wind-up each girl was cheered, called upon to come to the centre of the stage and go through some antic in tribute to the general mirth. Happening to see [illegible] King, the Club's colored janitor, in the wings, the girls led him out upon the stage, danced around him and made him do a cake-walk and [illegible]

When Miss [illegible] Lawrence's brother appeared to take her home at 12.30 the girls [illegible] him and [illegible] wedding.

[illegible] declared they [illegible] games [illegible] themselves where they got good and ready, which was sometime around 2 o'clock, just as their brothers were accustomed to do.

Never again can Boston girls be accused of being prudish. They are just as [illegible] delightfully feminine and [illegible] as any girls could possibly be.

PLAYED WITH PINS

Copyrighted, 1905, by the American-Journal-Examiner

DIRECTIONS.

This game is played by two teams of equal size, the Squares vs. Circles. They first select a piece of lump sugar or any other small cube and mark numbers from 1 to 6 on the sides.

The Squares get the first stroke, the captain of the team kicking off. He tosses the cube and then inserts a pin in the square corresponding to the uppermost number shown on the cube. Suppose the cube indicates 6, then the pin is inserted in square 6.

Then the captain of the Circles has his turn. Suppose he scores 4, he can either insert a pin in circle 4 or deduct 4 from his opponent's 6, thereby forcing the Squares back to square 2. If he does this, the Circles' pin is held in reserve. Then the players continue playing in regular order, each player being privileged to either add to his own team's score or to deduct so many points from the opposing team's score. A total of 10 points means a goal, and the team first scoring three goals wins the game.

TIME CAN WORK EVERY WONDER

No Magic, Just Plain Truth in This Picture. Keep Your Mind OPEN, Deny Nothing. Man Has Conceived Dimly, or Not at All, the REAL Wonders of His Future Existence Here.

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

—I. Thess., v., 21.

WHEN Paul wrote these words wild beasts were tearing human beings in the Coliseum, which now stands a ruin and a monument. It is a ruin because its walls are crumbled, because trees grow and vines tear down the stones of the seats where Emperors, Senators and women with screams of delight watched the blood flow.

It is more a monument—a glorious monument—than a ruin For it reminds every visitor and every child at school of the fact that humanity has progressed beyond voluntary brutality, deliberate torture and horror, as the amusement of the greatest city of the most civilized race

Truly, Paul, the great and brave Christian, was an inspired man He did not say to men that they must believe without understanding or accept without questioning, things as they are—but he said to them, "PROVE all things." And after we have proved FOR OURSELVES all things, he tells us to "Hold fast that which is good "

The trouble with nine in ten men is their narrow-mindedness their lack of capacity to accept new truths—or, at least, to consider them fairly

The ordinary individual PRIDES HIMSELF in an egotism, a self-sufficiency that ought to fill him with humiliation.

Different was the spirit of Paul the Apostle. These words of his are recommended to narrow-minded people, who shut out the new truth:

Quench not the spirit.
Despise not prophesyings.

—I. Thess., v., 19-20.

If these words of Paul could be written in every book and every newspaper, put up before men's eyes, all over the world, if they could be READ INTELLIGENTLY they would do a splendid work in hurrying along the development of backward, slow humanity

Every man who has a plan to help his fellows knows what it is to have his spirit quenched.

Every man who has been able to look into the future to see better conditions and to urge their realization knows how much humanity is in need of the command—"Despise not prophesyings "

The first men that talked against slavery had THEIR spirits quenched, with a vengeance They were beaten and jailed. Their prophesyings were thoroughly despised. But slavery is gone

The first men that talked against superstition, that denounced brutality masquerading in any garb, know what it was to have the spirit quenched

In their case it was quenched very often with fire

Every man who has been capable of seeing the world's future development and who has told about it in advance has been persecuted for his pains.

In the old days he was persecuted vigorously with sticks and stones, imprisonment, the rack, or fire.

To-day, the attacks upon him take the form of ridicule—often as effective in quenching the spirit as the sterner, old-fashioned methods

⁂

This editorial is written to urge upon our millions of readers TO KEEP THEIR MINDS OPEN—TO QUESTION THE NEW IDEA, BUT NOT TO REJECT IT OFFHAND.

The picture which we present, illustrating the wonders that may be performed, IS NOT EXAGGERATED.

When Paul lived and prophesied and especially commanded men not to limit the powers of the mind, even HE would have found it difficult to credit the picture which this page carries to-day. If he had been told then that the great Coliseum would crumble away, and that the brutality which caused its destruction would crumble with it, he would have accepted that statement. For his life work was the tearing down of the brutality represented in that great building devoted to bloodshed.

He would have found it hard, however, to believe in a flying machine, manned by men, sailing above the Coliseum and over the site of Rome

He would have joined, perhaps, with others in mocking the person who should have predicted such a machine or a locomotive, or a machine for making cloth that lets one woman do the work of ten thousand women

Every child now knows and takes as a matter of course the flying machine, the locomotive, the wireless telegraph all the marvels of the last few years, which would have strained the credulity of the open minded Paul himself

Job, in his pile of ashes, would wonder to-day if he could see the Behemoth, "That drinketh up a river and hasteneth not," shut up in a cage, with open mouth to receive buns from children. And he would wonder if he could see the war horse, with his neck clothed with thunder, his neighings and his pawings, replaced very largely by the puffing automobile, a hundred times as powerful, moved by the mysterious explosions of a mysterious liquid force.

⁂

Everything that is around us, we take for granted. Nothing that is done surprises us. And yet, with our unimaginative stupidity, we refuse to realize that the future must and DOES contain possibilities, wonders and changes far greater than those that have been worked in the past

We accept the abolition of slavery—of real slavery, where the master owned the servant's body

But nine out of ten of us sniff with contempt if anybody demands or declares possible THE ABOLITION OF POVERTY

The old slave-owners thought that slavery must always exist because it always had existed

The modern employers of half-paid men believe that a vast class of worried employes and a small class of overfed employers always MUST exist, because they always have existed

We know that of all the inhabitants of the earth an enormous majority face old age with anxiety.

We know that poverty actually existing, or the fear of poverty, is an actual torment to mothers and fathers, TO ALL OF THE HUMAN RACE PRACTICALLY

Yet, we say that this tormenting power of poverty, with its worrying that deadens the mind and destroys one-half of its capacity, must always exist, BECAUSE THEY ALWAYS EXISTED.

A few years ago—only a little more than the life of a very old man—the splendid characters that carried through the French Revolution ABOLISHED THE TORTURE OF WITNESSES.

In their day it was said, naturally, that witnesses always had been tortured, and so they always would be tortured—that was the natural way to make them tell the truth

But we have stopped all over this world, except in a few savage places the torture of men's bodies. Young men and women are no longer fed to lions and panthers. Brothers are no longer forced to butcher each other for the amusement of the crowd. We have outgrown the social system in which men's bodies were systematically tortured as a matter of business or pleasure

Is it not evident that, as the torture of the body has ceased, so the torture of the mind must cease ultimately? Is not poverty, worry, uncertainty as to the future, a torment as great as actual physical suffering?

⁂

Santos Dumont, the wiry little Frenchman, weighing barely a hundred pounds, can climb into his flying machine, sail over the Coliseum, over the Forum, look down on the dungeon where Peter lived in chains for daring to tell the truth about a better future state.

We all take this for granted. We accept all these wonderful changes, but we accept them stupidly, as the bison or the Indian, now nearly extinct, accepts the existence of the rushing express train that has crowded him off the earth

Let us not be content with accepting the truths of the past, let us keep our minds fully open, ready for new ideas, believing in a wonderful future, far eclipsing anything that we can conceive.

"Quench not the spirit
"Despise not prophesyings

LILLIAN RUSSELL GIVES WOMEN A DELIGHTFUL SHOCK

BY Alan Dale.

THERE [illegible] that we [illegible] discover it in our [illegible] of our con[illegible] the happiness of their [illegible]

[illegible] New York on [illegible] the men[illegible]

[illegible] that this was no new beauty [illegible] this picture that took [illegible] was no other than Lillian Russell [illegible] and corsets [illegible] years, who seems to have been [illegible] can remember [illegible]

[illegible] goodness knows [illegible] a grandmother if it were [illegible] considerate nowadays [illegible]

[illegible] that met our eyes in "[illegible]" [illegible] of our own tired [illegible] we were nastur[illegible] after [illegible] and [illegible] kittenish [illegible] could detect [illegible] picture [illegible] no disguise.

[illegible] the discernment, [illegible] there was no [illegible] of sweet sixteen [illegible] She looked at us with [illegible] trust in the world.

[illegible] writhed [illegible] with tiny little curls [illegible] feature of a [illegible]

[illegible] the fact [illegible]

[illegible] at the [illegible] there [illegible] of the fact [illegible]

[illegible] pleasant [illegible] Lillian Russell [illegible]

And then this—this at the Casino! Oddly enough it is not the men who rave over the beauty of Lillian Russell, for men are too busy to waste their enthusiasm upon the unattainable. It is the women who rave. Isn't that strange?

The innate, psychological jealousy that a woman is supposed to feel for a more [illegible] endowed sister has never existed in the case of Lillian Russell.

[illegible] Lillian Russell. She was [illegible] compelled to solid [illegible]

It was the women who kept Lillian Russell at Weber & Fields [illegible] We all know that she sings like a [illegible] better dramatically, at the present time, than she [illegible] are dozens of others who could easily ex[illegible]

The men at Weber & Fields had little use for Miss Lillian Russell as [illegible] gorgeous gowns, and [illegible] that evening star [illegible] In fact, we almost wished that it would come down and [illegible] Certainly if it had come down that is what it would [illegible]

But the women! They loved this picture of beauty, this returning [illegible] that greeted them between music hall flashes. They never tired of seeing Lillian Russell at Weber & Fields. They kept [illegible] till Weber & Fields [illegible] of each other.

[illegible] Perhaps they realized the futility of so doing [illegible] looking at her. She made them feel young. [illegible] felt that perfect ladies never, never, never [illegible]

On the [illegible] it is perfectly safe to say that [illegible] have been young [illegible] she certainly never [illegible] I believe, who are born old, and [illegible] But no stretch of [illegible] Lillian Russell anything but [illegible]

[illegible] she may grow up. I don't believe that she will ever be old. The women in the audience amused me. Their comments, at each succeeding Russell picture, were quite extraordinarily droll.

"How natural!" "How lovely!" "Will there ever be another?" they remarked in rapt tones. They watched every movement—and in justice to Miss Russell it must be said that she never seemed to pose at all. To the practised eye, she even appeared [illegible] as tho [illegible] she didn't [illegible] she should care.

[illegible] at this very Casino, [illegible] "[illegible] Princess Nicotine," with this very Lillian [illegible] in this old [illegible] with the remark "How homely I was."

I turn over the pages [illegible] Lillian in "Olivette"—very thin, to be sure, [illegible] Lillian in "Patience," looking awfully [illegible]; Lillian in "Polly," fat and in tears; Lillian in "[illegible]," with a crown on her head and much abdominal prominence; Lillian in "Dorothy," girlish and pleasing; Lillian in "The Queen's Mate," [illegible] to-day; Lillian in [illegible] "The Brigands," with [illegible] plump arms held up aloft; [illegible] "The Grand Duchess," [illegible] at an [illegible] with those now before us. [illegible] Apollo [illegible] of costume; Lillian in "Poor Jonathan," in "La Cigale," in "The Mountebanks," in "Girofle Girofla"—Lillian, in fact, in all styles.

Lillian in "Lady Teazle" looks younger, handsomer and in every way more picturesque. There is not one of these pictures that she could glance at and say "I wish I looked like that now."

How many of us could do the same as we pick up a photograph and see ourselves as we used to be, because the cares and turmoils of life had laid their impress upon us? How many stage women could do [illegible]

The ordinary actress, if we ask for a picture, gives us one that was taken s'teen years ago and says coyly, "I haven't any other, but I'm going to have some taken to-morrow." But you know that the morrow will never come.

Lillian Russell can rely upon herself as she is, certain that she has never been anything nicer. She can sit in the glare of the calcium and defy every photographer to do his worst.

Naturally this has its effect upon the women. It interests them enormously. It seems to show that youth is not as fleeting as they have been taught to believe. They have seen many beauties and have seen them fade. They have seen wrecks, trading upon old reputations of loveliness. As a rule, it is very sad, not because age is pathetic, but because they attempt to stultify as it [illegible]

Miss Russell is, of course, a long way from age. But she has been continuously before us for so many years that she would pay a heavy penalty if she did not disarm us. We lay aside many charms that are still young, because we have seen them for so long that they seem old. It is a disconcerting little way that we have—a rather cruel way.

But the "new generation" can be taken without a scruple to see Lillian Russell, of whom they have heard. They will not be disappointed. New generations generally are disappointed when they are confronted with old favorites that have declined [illegible] and [illegible] They don't say so, but they think [illegible] are a bit "off"—just [illegible], don't you know.

When they see Lillian Russell in "Lady Teazle" [illegible] will rise in their estimation. For they will see a young [illegible] beauty that apparently nothing can dim. They may hear a voice that makes their [illegible] but they will forget it. One sense at a time, if you please. The eye monopolizes all, and the ear takes a vacation.

Beauty may be skin-deep, even though ugliness goes to the bone, but it is a potent factor, and while some may pretend that they don't care at all about it—the pretence is there and meaningless. The people who profess not to care about beauty are the very blindest sort of bats.

ALAN DALE.

Little Johnny

Why the Lizard is Tired, the Frog's Voice Hoarse and the Beaver's Tail Flat

By Ambrose Bierce

[illegible] Johnny [illegible]

I sed, Wot [illegible] to get a pound of butter [illegible] for brekfas to [illegible] he [illegible] with his brother Billy, wich is a raf[illegible] like the President.

Uncle Ned he sed, No, but he jest lies and pants, all the [illegible] is to say he is all wore out, and this is wy. Wen all the anmals had been created, it only [illegible] was [illegible] Addam for to [illegible] Addam has done it, he sed, [illegible] for to dismis you fellers for [illegible] yure bisnesses, but I want you to under stand that I have dominyun over you. I am the bos and [illegible] it out.

Then the tigger he [illegible], and the shark he [illegible] smiled about a yard wide, and the [illegible] look [illegible] sollem, and the [illegible] he [illegible], and the flee jumpt over the [illegible] but not a wurd was sed. Bime by the lizard he spoke up and sed, You make me tierd.

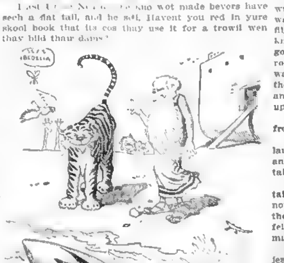
That [illegible] Addam [illegible] and he sed, You [illegible] distresfookle [illegible] romo, Ile make you tierd of yure life for that remark.

That, Johnny, is wy you genly se the lizard a pantin and a tryin for to get a little much needed rest. The moral is, Dont sas the bos, no matter wot [illegible] says.

[illegible] father, wich has come in, he sed, Edard, wot kind of [illegible] are you a usin to that child?

[illegible] him for to lissen [illegible]

Last [illegible] Ned [illegible] wot made bevers have sech a flat tail, and he sed, Havent you red in yure skool book that its cos thay use it for a trowil wen thay bild thair dams?



"I am the boss and y[illegible] find it out!"

I sed, Yes, I have, but Jack Brily, wich is the wicked sailor, he ses thats all dam rot.

Uncle Ned he thot a wile, and then he sed, Wel, it wuld ben better if Mister B[illegible] had [illegible] it a other way, but he is a plain, [illegible] and bein a amfibbious animal his own self, like bevers, I ges he knows. In fack, I remember now wy the bever has got a flat tail. When he was made he had a big round roly poly tail like it was a sossige, and he was mity prowd of it. One day he had come out of the water and was alyin on a rock for to dri his self and the ephalent he come along. The bever he spoke up and sed, Se my nice round tail?

The eph he went up and set down on it and sed, from my stand point it seems mity flat.

The other anmals thay all laughed, all but the laughfin hieny, wich shode he was tickled by sobbin, and wen Addam herd about it he sed, Let the bevers tail stay flat for to punish his prowd.

And now, Johnny, Ile tel you bout the possums tail, wich is bald heded too, jest like the bevers, only not flat. One day Life and Deth was a wolkin thru the wurld and thay met the possum. Deth sed, That feller is too ugly for to live! Ile put him out of his misry.

But Life he sed, No, you shant, for I have only jest now made him out of wot was left after makin the kangaroon and the nite mare. He hasent had a fair chance yet for to sho how long he can pul thrugh with that face.

So thay both grabd the pos and streggled a long time for the mastry, but neether one culd pul him away from the other, so thay agreed on a compmize and let him go. So wen the pos is alone with his conshence he is alive, but wen divine vengence heeves in view he falls ded til it has went away. Yes, Johnny, the possum is ded about haf the time.

I ast Uncle Ned wot about his tail, and he sed, Uncle Ned did, Thats wot Ime comin to, cos it prooves that wot I have tole you [illegible]. The possum's tail is olways freezin cold, cos [illegible] is where he was grasped by the icy hand of Deth.

"Now let me hear you sing some more!"

But if me and Billy was thare we wuld sed, You [illegible] ole man, that poor feller cant help his looks, you let go or we wil make you bite the dust!

Uncle Ned he sed a other time, Johnny, the most interestin thing is wot made the bul frog have sech a hoarce voice. One day Addam he was passin by a pond and he herd a voice singing clear and sweet jest like Patty. He looked a long time for the singster, and bime by he se the bul frogs hed [illegible] of the wotter. Addam he sed, Here, you, [illegible] you playd truant for? You jest come out of that and be give a name, like the others had to.

So the bul he come out on the bank and was named, and then Addam sed, Now let me hear you sing once more, for you have got a nice voice.

The bul he started for to sing, but he couldent utter a note only but jest a hoarse tremio, cos he had come out in the dry and had took cold. Then Addam he sed, I was mistook, I thot it was you wich was singin in the pon. If I had knew the truth I wuldent botherd you, for a feller wich sings like you do isent werth a name, and thare isent any that is bad enuf for him.

So Addam he kicked him clear in to the middle of the pond and went away. But the bul frog hasent never got cured of that cold.

The Frenchy he eats frogs, but a cafs livver, nice fride, with plenty innions, is the king of beests.

AMBROSE BIERCE.

Do Not Despair

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Do not despair, however dark and troubled
The waters are about you; have no fear.
That is the time to lean with faith redoubled
On unseen Forces, who are always near.

Do not despair; though men seem cold and cruel,
They are not so; love dwells within each heart.
Feed that pure spark with optimistic fuel,
And see the flames of sympathy upstart.

Our sorrows should be telescopes, revealing
The beautiful and sure results of prayer;
The universe is charged with tender feeling.
Ask and you shall receive---do not despair.

Look on the world-starred firmaments above you
By God's hand formed; proclaim yourself His heir!
Think of those stars as tender souls who love you
And will sustain your strength. Do not despair.

Pitiful Cogs in the Great Human Machine

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1905, by American Journal Examiner.

A POOR spinster who had lived thirty-eight years in the same two rooms was evicted in New York the other day because she was for the first time in her life a few days late with her rent.

She had been too ill to go out sewing for two weeks and had just started to work again when she came home at night to find her poor little sticks of worn furniture out on the sidewalk.

"Why, I can pay it all off this week," she said in a maze of anxious perplexity. "But then I suppose the agent didn't know me. It's all right."

It turned out to be as she said. Doubtless the agent didn't know her and was blindly carrying out his blind orders. The poor little spinster was just a cog in the great machine of some rich man's business, and when the cog seemed to be out of place and to impede the smooth progress of said machine the agent simply threw the cog out of the way without a second thought.

[illegible] the great danger of life in these complicated days. We're all just a part of the machine, and we never have time to think about the merely human part of things.

The owner of that building may be the kindest man in New York. He didn't know, that's all. Probably he never will know. He didn't take pains to know.

I have a friend who is one of the most charitable women in the world. She spends most of her waking hours at a boys' home which she has established, trying to make the friendless boys she finds on the streets happy.

She made a servant climb step ladders and dust the ceilings of her house when the maid's foot was so swollen that every slight movement was acute pain to her.

When the maid came near to losing her foot through her mistress's thoughtless cruelty the mistress was amazed and conscience stricken. [illegible]

It had come [illegible] routine of house- [illegible]

the possibility of [illegible] [illegible] who was simply [illegible] the house.

One day I was dictating [illegible] [illegible] every time I stopped [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in such [illegible] [illegible] disconcerted.

As I left the stenographer's room I [illegible] man on the threshold.

"How can you dictate to that girl?" said I. "She drives every idea I ought to have out of my head."

"I can't dictate to her, either," said the man. "I thought it was something wrong with me. I'll discharge her to-day." And [illegible]

Six weeks later that man and I found out [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the girl [illegible] [illegible] was all that [illegible] stood between her and [illegible]

[illegible] we were very sorry we had not [illegible] more patient, the man and I, but it was too late then.

All the regret in the world couldn't ease that poor girl's mind then. She was in a [illegible] and didn't know what [illegible] I was trying to talk about [illegible] to see her.

Since that time I try to take time to investigate a little when any part of the great human machine of which we are all a part seems to be a little out of order.

If that poor woman, who was put out of her pitiful little rooms in the cold of a bitter night, serves to draw the attention of the [illegible] building to the fact that it sometimes pays to stop the machine and investigate a little before we throw away the [illegible] which has stopped the wheels, her [illegible] will not have been lived in vain.

The Real Aims of Russian Nihilists

By Herbert Burrows

Copyright, 1905, by American Journal Examiner.

I HAVE noticed since I arrived in America that the American people have an incorrect idea of nihilism in Russia. They consider nihilists as anarchists. As a matter of fact, there is practically no anarchy in Russia.

Nihilism is a condition that has grown out of the despotism of the Russian government. The nihilists are not thoughtless, reckless assassins who seek to wreck the nation. They do not kill without having a definite end in view. They want reforms, and that is all. Their object is to secure a certain amount of freedom and to be governed by intellectual men, to have some room for intellectual activity in their national life. They realize that the despotic Russian government is the greatest danger to freedom in the world.

These people are struggling for almost identically what you Americans sought by force of arms from England and won. They want representation in a national assembly, freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

They have none of these things, and they know that they cannot get justice in any degree unless they secure these rights. If they had half the freedom and liberty that the people of this country have they would throw their hats in the air and shout for joy.

Nihilists are revolutionary reformists. They are revolutionary, for [illegible] have had proved to them that they cannot get the reforms they demand without revolutionary tactics. The hope that if any movement can be started toward gaining their ends intellectual people will take the lead.

It is this very constraint of any intellectual activity that is causing hundreds of members of the nobility to embrace nihilism and join the revolutionists as the only outlet for personal thoughtful ideas.

They do not believe in nihilism or revolution anywhere except in Russia. When your President McKinley was assassinated the nihilists in their official meetings unhesitatingly condemned the outrageous act.

When President Garfield was killed they passed vigorous resolutions condemning the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] They [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in America.

We know through our [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] in Russia [illegible] [illegible] protect [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] guarantee them safety from persecution and prosecution we are [illegible] to show the world the true state of affairs in Russia.

For example we have positive proofs of features of the Kishineff massacre of Jews that have never been [illegible] [illegible] the way such things as the Kishineff massacre are what urge the people of Russia to desperate acts of nihilism.

For generations the Jews have been practically proscribed in Russia. They have been allowed to live only in certain [illegible] and then by [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] like that of sacrificing human beings at festivals are constantly being made against them for no other purpose than to harass them.

[illegible] the Kishineff matter was deliberate. The populace was distinctly incited by an editor named Kroushevan through his [illegible]. The [illegible] Kroushevan is known to be a bitter anti-Semite and was especially under the patronage and protection of Von Plehve.

Almost immediately after the massacre Kroushevan was [illegible] to St. Petersburg and personally introduced to the Czar by his late minister. [illegible] and everybody in St. Petersburg knew that it was in recognition of his [illegible] to the government in stirring up the people to bloodshed.

There are [illegible] [illegible] that could be cited but the time is not yet ripe. Americans may rest assured that as soon as the necessary reforms are granted to the people of Russia [illegible] instead of superstition rules the [illegible] nihilism as a promoter of assassination and death will end.

After the Holidays--A National Look Ahead

By Mrs. John A. Logan

Copyright, 1905, by American Journal Examiner.

CHRISTMAS, with its good cheer, reunions, present giving, holidays and celebration of a Saviour's birth, has passed. "The garlands are dead, the lights are fled and banquet halls are deserted."

The New Year has dawned propitiously, and all the ceremonies of that day have been observed. The routine of every-day life must be resumed whether we would or no. "Life is real, life is earnest," and man who is doomed to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow cannot long dally with idleness and pleasure.

The season for high resolves and brave beginnings is in order. How many that are recorded to-day will survive the first month of the new year will never be known except by Him who knows all things. It is to be hoped, however, that many more than were kept last year will [illegible] this one.

Time with its swift wings is ever bearing us on, and when we reflect that every thought, word and deed is recorded in the Book of Remembrance, how careful we should be that the record does not rise up against us at the last day when every account must be rendered.

Ministers, teachers, writers and speakers are never tired of telling of the onward march of the Twentieth Century. Is it true that in the retrospective we should be as well satisfied with the moral progress of the nation, as we have reason to be with its material success?

In our [illegible] we are giving [illegible] time to the cultivation of higher standards, intellectually, morally and religiously? We are committed irrevocably to peace. Are we doing all we can to advance the cause of peace for all races of people? We have been promoted to the leadership in this holy cause. We have, therefore, the greater reason to be watchful in and out of season lest we fail.

Victory is not always to the strong, but to the wise and the righteous. Upon those who are chosen to represent the interests of the people and shape the destiny of this great Republic rests a grave responsibility that cannot be felt too keenly.

With our vast resources and admitted masterful and most intelligent people among whom are as great leaders as the world has ever known, we can easily imagine what we might become. But what we shall be is quite another proposition. That we shall continue to be capable of sustaining a "government by the people and for the people," no loyal person for one moment doubts. But in that government there are many defects, and it remains to be seen if they can be remedied by those who are elected to represent the people.

On the very threshold of the new year we are confronted with serious problems that may affect the influence of the United States [illegible] [illegible]. We must not allow ourselves to be flattered into assuming so much responsibility in [illegible] [illegible] of arbitrator between nations. It would require almost superhuman wisdom to settle [illegible] [illegible] difficulties. The [illegible] Republic is destined to [illegible] [illegible] criticism, therefore [illegible] [illegible] the United States to act with much discretion and modesty in all international affairs.

It is our hope that 1905 will bring unprecedented prosperity and progress along all lines in the United States, not only in a material sense, but intellectually and religiously. The wonderful impetus that has been given in the past year to all movements for the betterment of the world and its Christianization will [illegible] surely be accelerated by the favorable conditions now existing.

The dawn of peace in the Far East [illegible] unmistakably near at hand, between the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] ment of the onward and upward [illegible] which we are so prominently identified. We must not forget that American money and the generosity of an American citizen [illegible] [illegible] the temple under whose majestic dome the Peace Conferences will be held at The Hague.

In all [illegible] enterprises for the extension of civilization, Christianity, philanthropy and humanity, America is foremost among nations, and there is no reason why she should not [illegible] [illegible]. We have only to pay [illegible] [illegible] to the spiritual and less to the temporal welfare of the whole people.

We have not in a few days acquired our exalted place in the catalogue of nations. It is the result of the labor, wisdom and heroism of the great minds and spirits who built better than they knew before they passed to their reward.

Let the church, as well as the State, pay less attention to pomp and ceremonies. Let there be a [illegible] [illegible] in the land. Let the [illegible] aspiration to higher purposes and to the living of better lives prevail. Let men be as courageous for the right and as fearless in their individual war upon vice as they would be in fighting the battles of the nation against an enemy of the country, and we shall see in this new year universal uplifting and great moral as well as material progress.

Splitting Stars—Causes of the Phenomenon

By Prof. Garrett P. Serviss

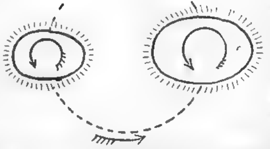
Copyright, 1905, by American Journal Examiner.

ONE of the most astonishing results of recent astronomical observations is the rapid increase in the known number of close binary stars.

Many of these, like several just discovered in the constellation Sagittarius by the Harvard Observatory, are variable in their light. It is becoming evident that a great proportion of all the stars are either double or variable, or both double and variable.

Of the variable doubles many belong to the wonderful Algol type, in which the variability is believed to be due to the fact that two stars closely linked together mutually eclipse one another. In the case of Algol itself one of the two stars concerned is apparently totally dark, while the other is a very brilliant body. In other cases both stars are bright and very close together.

Inasmuch as every star is more or less like the sun in constitution, and inasmuch as the sun is known to be not a solid but a gaseous body, it is evident that a pair of Algol stars, almost in contact, must produce upon one another tremendous tides, each drawing out the body of its companion into an ellipsoidal figure.



The Algol stars revolving around their common centre of gravity and drawing each other into ellipsoidal shapes.

As they whirl round their common centre of gravity in a period which may vary from two or three days up to [illegible] weeks, according to their mass and distance apart, they probably rotate rapidly on their axes, since there is no known heavenly body which does not thus rotate.

The consequence of this must be, as Professor George H. Darwin has shown by elaborate mathematical investigations, that the two stars, however near together they may have been at the beginning, will tend to separate.

Inertia will cause the tidal protuberances to lag behind in such a manner that the longer axes of the ellipsoidal figures will not lie in the same line, and the result will be that the mutual attraction of the two bodies upon one another will hasten both of them onward, so that the couples will separate more and more widely.

In this manner two stars forming a close binary system may slowly draw apart until the effect of their tidal forces becomes nearly insensible, when the recession will practically cease.

It is to be supposed that a pair of stars of this kind originally constituted a single gaseous or nebulous body in very rapid rotation. At length a point was reached where the disruptive effects of rotatory force split the body into two more or less equal masses.

In some cases such a division would be permanent, and the two stars thus formed would slowly move asunder, as described above. In other cases the separated masses might be drawn together and reunited, only probably to split asunder again.

This view of the origin of pairs of stellar bodies by a process somewhat analogous, in superficial appearance, to the process of fission whereby many of the lower forms of protoplasmic life are multiplied, is coming to be widely accepted among astronomers.

It does not necessarily exclude the process of nebular contraction and the formation of new bodies by the leaving off of rings of matter which subsequently break and become satellites of the central body from which they originated, but it rather proves that there are more ways than one pursued by the course of evolution in the universe.

Many Good Shows to Be Seen at the Theatres.

ALL but three of the regular theatres will change their bills to-morrow. Richard Carle will stay on at the Majestic, as will "The County Chairman" at the Tremont and the Rogers brothers at the Hollis.

Rejane will begin a brief engagement at the Boston, Edna May, at the Colonial, will make her first Boston appearance [illegible] "The Belle of New York," and there will be a Rice show at the Park. The Rays come to the Globe in a musical piece, and "A Midnight Marriage" will be seen at the Grand.

Following are details of all the attractions at the local playhouses for the coming week:

Boston Theatre.

One of the most notable events of the theatrical year will be the appearance at the Boston Theatre during the coming two weeks of Mme. Gabrielle Rejane, the famous French actress. Mme. Rejane has won her greatest fame as a comedienne, but she is also an [illegible] power, and will appear here in a repertoire which will display her remarkable versatility to the best advantage. It is just ten years since she made her first visit to the city, [illegible] created a sensation. Her [illegible] "Ma Cousine," which is described as a very clever comedy, and which will also be given at the Wednesday [illegible] a fascinating [illegible] undertakes to bring an errant husband to the feet of his adoring wife, by pretending to be in love with him and [illegible] his affections from another woman. It is a dangerous [illegible] everything comes out right. "Zaza," which was written for Rejane, will be given on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Thursday evening and at the Saturday matinee the bill will be "Camille." "La Passerelle," an English version of which was played here, under the name of "The Marriage of Kitty," by Marie Tempest, will be presented on Friday night. Saturday night will be given over to "Sapho." Mme. Rejane presents the original French version, which differs in many respects from those made familiar here. The repertoire for the second week will include "Amoureuse," "La [illegible] Rouge," "La Petite Marquise," "L'Hirondelle" and "La Douloureuse."

Colonial Theatre.

Edna May, in "The School Girl," will be the attraction at the Colonial Theatre for the next two weeks, and those who remember her as the pretty and demure Salvation Army lassie of "The Belle of New York" will be ready to give her a cordial welcome back to Boston after her long absence. Since she was last seen here she has become a great London favorite, but in nothing in which she appeared did she receive so much praise as for her work in "The School Girl." She also scored a success in this musical piece in New York, which is the only American city that has so far seen it, and in which she has been appearing since the first of September. "The School Girl" is said to be very bright and attractive. The libretto was written by Paul M. Potter and Henry Hamilton, the lyrics by Charles H. Taylor, and the music by Leslie Stuart. The latter is said to comprise a score of tuneful numbers and some of them, especially the "Little Canoe" and "Lonesome" songs sung by Miss May, became famous in New York before the run of the piece had passed its [illegible]. Fred Leslie, Jr., James [illegible] and Fred Wright, Jr., are the [illegible] of the company, and Lakme [illegible], Constance Hyem, W. Talleur Andrews and Robert [illegible] are other prominent members.

Park Theatre.

At the Park Theatre the coming week the attraction will be Edward E. Rice's latest show, which is of the genus musical comedy, and is yclept "Mr. Wix and the Merry Shop Girls." It will be the first show of which Mr. Rice has personally made the production that has been seen here in some time, and it will be a welcome event, for in no city are the results of his indefatigable energies better appreciated. "The Merry Shop Girls" are said to live up to their name and to provide a merry entertainment. If accounts that have heralded its coming may be believed, it is full of the liveliest kind of fun, and the music with which it is punctuated abounds in catchy airs. A good many clever people have been gathered together for its presentation. Among them are Frank Lalor, who is said to be responsible for the major portion of the fun; Carrie E. Perkins, Julian D. Eltinge, who used to be the hit of the local amateur shows and has made his professional debut with this company, Thelma Fair, Winifred Florence, Alice Maude Poole, Sydney De Grey, George E. Mack, David [illegible], Arthur Wooley, Charles Seagrave, Charles Wayte, Ella Blow, Catherine J. Hayes, Frances Wilson and Jessie Thompson. Then, of course, there will be the chorus of beauties without which a Rice show would not be a Rice show.

Keith's Theatre.

For the coming week an unusually strong vaudeville [illegible] at Keith's Theatre, many of the leading entertainers never having before appeared at that playhouse. Among the newcomers are Emmett DeVoy, a well known actor, and his company, who will present a comedy sketch entitled "The Saintly Mr. Billings"; Sugimoto's Japanese acrobats, who are said to compose one of the greatest troupes of the kind that has ever visited this country; Frank Bush, the celebrated Hebrew story teller; the Empire Quartette, one of the best vocal comedy organizations in America; Harry Rochez's ponies and dogs, who are said to give one of the best trained animal acts ever seen in the varieties; Dan Sherman and Mabel De Forest, in an entertaining bit of foolery, which they entitle "The Fall of Poor Arthur"; James F. Burke and Grace La Rue, with their famous "Inky Boys," in singing and dancing specialties, and Joe Flynn, the eccentric comedian and story teller. It should compose one of the strongest bills that has been offered at Keith's this winter, and will be supplemented by entertaining biograph pictures.

Music Hall.

The man who is reputed to have made King Edward laugh made such a hit at Music Hall last week that he will stay there another. In other words, the engagement of George Fuller Golden, the clever American humorist and original and brilliant monologist, has been extended, and for this week only he will continue to evoke mirth by his wit and drollery. Then there will be the Mazzetti troupe, eight in number, a family of acrobats whose work is said to be such as can only be regarded as sensational. There are men and women, boys and girls, in the troupe, and it is asserted that they have no peers in their particular specialty. Edith Helena comes heralded as the possessor of the greatest [illegible] range in the world, which means that she must be a singing phenomenon. Among the other features the coming week will be the Reed Birds in a musical comedy entitled "Dodging the Dodges"; Drawee, the juggler, who has not appeared in this city for two years and now comes with a new and elaborate act; Caron and Herbert, in an acrobatic act; Hoey and Lee, Hebrew comedians, and the [illegible] in a novelty entitled "The Musical Flower Garden."

Globe Theatre.

Beginning to-morrow night at the Globe, Johnny and Emma Ray, the former well-known vaudeville headliners, will introduce their musical farce, "Down the Pike," for the first time in Boston. It is said that Johnny Ray, as McCorkle, the janitor, has more scope for comic possibilities than in any of his previous comedies or vaudeville sketches, and that Emma Ray is also happily suited in her part. The company numbers an even fifty people and comprises a goodly number of clever ones. Considerable attention has been given the musical features and the costuming, while the stage settings, one of which represents the interior of an apartment house and the other the cascades at the St. Louis fair, are massive and rather more pretentious than those of the average musical play. The engagement of the Rays is for one week, and judging by their former efforts in the line of comedy, the Globe is able to offer its patrons the style of laughing show that they like best. The usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given.

Grand Opera House.

The attraction at the Grand Opera House the coming week will be Hal Reid's melodrama, "A Midnight Marriage." It is a play of emotions and heart interest. It tells the story of a poor girl, who is forced to accept employment as a singer in a Bowery resort in order to support herself and a crippled mother. A frequenter of the resort falls in love with the girl and a midnight marriage results. The young couple are denied the shelter of the boy's home through machinations of a designing cousin, who even makes it appear to the young husband that the wife has been guilty of infidelity. There is a separation and the wife is again forced to work for herself. She succeeds in frustrating a plot on the part of the cousin to blow up a subway train, and in the end everything falls out happily. The cast will include Virginia Westbrooke, Mary [illegible]roughs, Harry J. Ingram, J. C. Fenton, C. W. Goodrich, William Shea, Camille Crume, Nina Unguonin, May Maurice and Kitty Edwards.

Majestic Theatre.

Richard Carle begins his third and last week in "The Tenderfoot" at the Majestic Theatre to-morrow night. His engagement here has so far been a very successful one, and a great many people have laughed at the drolleries of the star and the many amusing incidents of this entertaining musical comedy. Mr. Carle is a comedian who obtains his results by legitimate means, and while there are plenty of clever people among his associates, he is the peg on which most of the fun hangs. The production is a handsome one. There are many pretty girls in the company; they are handsomely costumed, and they are backed up by some very effective stage settings.

Tremont Theatre.

George Ade's comedy, "The County Chairman," is still continuing its prosperous run at the Tremont Theatre, and beginning to-morrow night the last two weeks of its season are announced. Although the comedy might remain here for an indefinite time, it has been impossible to change the bookings, and this announcement will no doubt centre interest in the production. "The County Chairman" is full of quaint and diverting humor, yet has many dramatic incidents and stirring scenes, which are interpreted by capable players [illegible], some of them are exceptionally so, and it will be a long time before better character work is seen here than that done by Maclyn Arbuckle and Willis P. Sweatnam.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The Rogers Brothers enter upon their third and last week at the Hollis Street Theatre to-morrow night. They have scored a big success here in their latest show, and the theatre has been crowded to the doors at every performance since the opening night. At no time has the weather been severe enough to deter the laughter lovers from their desire to see the fun dispensed by these two comedians and their merry associates. Their present show is in many respects the best they have ever had, and provides them with unlimited opportunities for the display of their peculiar talents.

Mme. Sembrich to sing Saturday at Symphony Hall.

Steinert Hall.

"Beyond" will be continued at Steinert Hall the coming week and will be seen every evening, except Friday, and matinees will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. This unique and interesting play has been witnessed by large audiences and its poetic beauty has made a strong impression. It abounds in exquisite lines and the music which accompanies the play is of a charming quality.

Howard Athenaeum.

A strong list of entertainers is booked for appearance at the old Howard the coming week. The aggregation is headed by Nora Bayes, the clever little comedienne who made such a great hit on her first appearance at this house earlier in the season. The Florence troupe of tumblers will furnish another big feature, as will Al Fields, the comedian whom they say never says anything without getting a laugh, and who will be seen for the first time as a single entertainer. Other top-liners are the Jackson family, who do fancy bicycle riding; Harris and Walters, in a sketch called "The [illegible] Fed Widow"; Matthews and Ashley, in a singing travesty; the Prentiss trio, a comedy acrobatic team, and the Albora trio, in a novel singing act. Among the others who will appear are Lew Welch, Zara and Stetson, Miaco and Idalene, the Newton brothers, Annie Southard and Connelly and Rowe. The burlesquers will be seen in "The Old Trick."

Castle Square Theatre.

To-morrow at the Castle Square Theatre will be seen the first Boston production of the stage version of Bertha Runkle's novel, "The Helmet of Navarre." The designs for the stage pictures of the original presentation will be closely fol

First Week of New Year Opens With Smart Debutante Dances—Coming Events in Boston Society.

With the first week of the new year the Boston Winter season has [illegible] and society has had an unusual number of smart events [illegible]. Debutantes occupy the centre of the social stage and [illegible] a number of cards that ha[illegible] the [illegible] homes they will be the means of [illegible] for the next few weeks [illegible]. Many of the [illegible] with smart receptions and [illegible].

Most of those who went out of town [illegible] have returned to their homes. A few house parties [illegible] but these will break up the first of the coming [illegible].

The first of the assemblies is over. It was one of the most brilliant events that Boston society has ever witnessed. The most representative of Boston's society families were present, the prettiest women appeared in their most exquisite gowns, and the jewels that were [illegible] a large-sized fortune. Echoes of the affair are still heard [illegible] looking forward to the second, which comes February 10.

The week's festivities open on Monday night with a dance and dinner at the Tuileries. This is a debutante affair given by Mrs. John R. [illegible] for her daughter, Miss [illegible]. [illegible] invitations have been issued. [illegible] the debutante's [illegible] Arthur [illegible].

Wednesday evening [illegible] the largest debutante event of the week, a dance given by Mrs. George P. Gardner, of Beacon street, for her daughter, Miss Catherine Gardner. This will take place in the large ballroom suite at the Somerset. Miss Gardner was given a dance by her great-aunt, Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, two weeks ago.

Somerville society will attend "gentlemen's night" at the Heptorean Club Thursday night. This exclusive organization includes all the smart people of Somerville, and a number of Bostonians will be present.

A smoke talk is to be given by the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company on Thursday evening, the first of a series which the company will give during the Winter.

The third debutante to have a dance during the week is Miss [illegible] Peabody, of Milton, which will take place Friday evening, the Somerset again being the scene of the festivities. Miss Peabody was introduced at a large "at home" the latter part of November.

On Saturday afternoon from 4 until 7 o'clock Mrs. Charles P. [illegible] of Commonwealth avenue will give the second of her at homes [illegible] guests are invited.

DOINGS OF BOSTONIANS TOLD IN PARAGRAPHS

Mrs. Warren B. P. Weeks's reception and tea [illegible] on Tuesday afternoon was one of the handsomest affairs [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] sang and Mrs. [illegible] piano. [illegible] green room and the palm room. Refreshments were served in the green [illegible].

Those who assisted [illegible] Mrs. Karl [illegible], Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. Robert [illegible], Mrs. [illegible] Washburn, Mrs. George [illegible] and Miss Fanny Pratt.

On Tuesday afternoon at the home of her mother, Mrs. S. G. King, No. 475 Commonwealth avenue, Miss [illegible] King was introduced to Boston society with a reception and tea. [illegible] in attendance. [illegible] gown of white [illegible]. A number of [illegible] assisted and served [illegible] Mrs. King will [illegible].

[illegible] Potter Hall [illegible] Miss Marie Nichols, a [illegible] Club Orchestra, was [illegible] Miss Marion Smith and Mrs. W. [illegible] of the prettiest girls at the opera.

Among the recent engagements that have [illegible] Arthur P. [illegible] has been settled upon for the wedding, although it will likely occur in the Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Edward Davis and [illegible] have returned from [illegible] California and will spend the remainder of the Winter and the early Spring at the Breakers, Montecito.

The Wilmot S. Haskells and [illegible] Hamiltons of Magnolia, who came into town [illegible] have returned to their [illegible] the Hamiltons will take a trip [illegible].

The wedding of Miss Annie Louise Johnson of Malden and Edward Iverson of Chicago was at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Johnson of Malden, on Wednesday evening. The wedding was a small affair, only a few [illegible] present. The [illegible] which followed was a much larger [illegible] and was attended by a number of [illegible] No. 4630 Drexel Boulevard [illegible].

[illegible] Gertrude Ashton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Ashton of Newton [illegible] and Roswell Converse Whitmore [illegible].

[illegible] returned from her holiday visit to Philadelphia, and is at the [illegible] will remain until her marriage.

FIRST ASSEMBLY THE WEEK'S SOCIETY EVENT

As was expected, the first of the assemblies given in [illegible] room Friday night was the largest [illegible] event of the Boston [illegible] Hooper [illegible].

The [illegible] garlands of Southern smilax, evergreen, roses and poinsettias. The favors were dainty and pretty and were given [illegible] by little [illegible].

There were [illegible] people present [illegible]. The gowns worn were beautiful [illegible] of the most [illegible] that Boston [illegible].

The Boston American's Thrilling Romance of Present Day Life in Boston

"I made absolute havoc of that room, and I would have completed my work had not the fumes of some pungent acid set me choking."

Chapter CXXXIII—Continued

"PERHAPS it was she who [illegible] with the portraits of [illegible] said [illegible] gypsy artist [illegible] which [illegible] live.

But I [illegible] if that was a portrait [illegible] what [illegible] words Valenski [illegible]

[illegible] Swan [illegible] the [illegible] had [illegible] and did [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] corner of the room, but it was hardly fit for a man to sleep upon. Then there was [illegible] stood a [illegible] with [illegible] retorts and test tubes of all sizes. It was evident that Valenski, though he had not broached the [illegible] chemistry. All round the room were shelves upon which great stoppered, liquid-filled bottles stood [illegible] into small compartments [illegible] chemist's shop. A [illegible]scope was on the table [illegible] and there were many appliances [illegible] of which I did not understand [illegible]. I withdrew [illegible] slowly to undress.

Presently, through the roar of the waterfall I heard my host's footsteps mounting the stairs. He went to his room and shut the door.

I lay down, half dressed, after ascertaining that candle and matches were by my side.

But I could not sleep, and, somehow, the sound of Valenski's footsteps got upon my nerves. That and the roar of the waterfall.

Chapter CXXXIV

The Living Dead.

"I COULD not sleep. The vaunted American bedstead was anything but comfortable, and the ceaseless din of the waterfall kept up a persistent refrain that aggravated me by its [illegible].

I tried to divert my thoughts, but when I did [illegible] it was only to concentrate them [illegible] their sound, the footsteps in [illegible] as it [illegible] me long after the time that Valenski should have been lying down, if he proposed to sleep in that room.

The moon had risen, and its pale light streamed in at the curtainless window. It seemed to me that the air inside my room had become warm, though I knew that it must be [illegible] off some of my coverings, and at last rose to open the window. It was, however, with an effort that I dragged myself from my bed. I had no idea that I should have been so worn out by my journey.

I found it impossible to open the window. It had become wedged, probably from long disuse. I did not dare to break a pane of glass, though I was sorely tempted to do so. Looking down as well as I could, I noticed that the mist lay low upon the valley, while my turret chamber was well above it.

It was a weird scene, and for a few moments I gazed at it, wide awake, and with [illegible] desire to return to my [illegible] by degrees a curious languor stole [illegible] me, a languor that was not a [illegible] but a wish to stretch out [illegible] them to rest. My brain was peculiarly alert. I fell rather [illegible] down from the window. It was [illegible] high in the wall and could only [illegible] by mounting a couple of stairs—[illegible] back to my bed.

As I lay, while the atmosphere of the room seemed to grow heavier and heavier, I noticed, too, a peculiar scent, sweet and spice like, but unlike anything with which I was familiar. I felt a slight sense of suffocation and a desire for air.

I cried to myself that I must have air, that I must open the door as the window was so firmly shut, and then it seemed to me that I did indeed rise and carry out my purpose.

'It will be well now,' I muttered, and it was not for a few moments that I realized I had not stirred from my bed' ——

Lilian could no longer refrain from interruption. She had been listening to the story with the deepest interest, an interest that gave place to excitement as the details were developed.

"Why!" she cried, "it was the same drug as that which overcame Esther and me that night! You were under the influence of the same fumes. The symptoms are precisely similar."

Swan raised his hand as if deprecating the interruption.

"Just so," he said. "You are quite right. It was the same drug." He smiled slightly. "I was the first to experience its effects. Listen, for I shall be able to tell you more about it.

"I knew that at last the conviction came to me that I was being drugged, and I fancied myself struggling, crying out, and fighting against it, yet in reality I was lying all the time helpless and inert.

I do not suppose I had been in this condition very long—though it seemed to me to be ages—when the door opened and Valenski entered the room. He had removed the fashionable clothes which he had worn since I first met him, and was now clad in a more orthodox gypsy garb. His lips were parted in a horrible smile, and his long teeth glimmered white in the moonlight. He stood for a moment looking down at me.

"I had realized by now that I was utterly helpless, nevertheless I struggled to cry out to him, to revile him, to hurl insults at him. I tried to lift my arms and seize him as he stood, but, though I had a momentary sensation of doing so, it was but a delusion, and I knew it. There is a strange kind of double consciousness when one is under the influence of this drug—during the first stages that is to say. One-half of one's being seems to be acting as the brain dictates, the other is fully alive to the helplessness of the body.

"I suppose my lips must have moved, though no sound came from them, for Valenski, when he spoke, answered my thoughts.

"'Your mind is not filled with love for me,' he laughed, 'and that is not right, Mr Policeman, for I have come to tell you all that you wish to know.'

"He drew a chair—the only one in the room—to my bedside and seated himself. Then he examined me critically.

"'Excellent,' he said, 'it is most successful. You should be proud, for it is upon you that I am testing a new discovery. I have long wished to know the effect of certain substances. I will not tell you their names—when compounded together, and I have just succeeded in obtaining the decoction for which I have made numberless experiments. You will notice that the fluid—prepared according to my method—is very volatile, and the fumes, I am happy to see, have the same effect as the liquid itself. I have allowed the fumes to percolate into your room with the happiest result—as far, at least, as I am concerned. You have not yet lost consciousness; you understand all that I am saying to you. But you are quite unable to move, and if I wished to torture you at the present moment you would not be able to resist nor to cry out. I say torture, for you would be sensible to pain.'

"He took my arm and lifted it. When he released it it fell helplessly to my side.

"'That is just as I thought,' he said. 'There is absolutely no power in your limbs. And now you will excuse me if I hurt you a little; it is all in the cause of my science.' He took a long knife from under his coat and, baring my arm, pricked me several times with it.

"I felt the pains," continued Swan, "acutely, perhaps exaggerated in intensity. I suppose I must have shown it by my face, for he laughed again, well pleased.

"'And now, Mr. Swan,' Valenski went on, 'let us come to other matters, for the time is short before you will be sleeping peacefully, and I want you to understand what I am going to say. You may be surprised, by the bye, that I am not affected by the fumes that still hang heavily about this room, but the fact is I came provided with an antidote. As, however, the effect of the antidote wears off rather quickly, there is yet another reason why I should be brief in what I have to tell you.'"

"Valenski drew his chair still nearer to me and leant on the bed, so that he might be sure I heard his words.

"'Presently I shall administer to you a stronger dose of the same poison, a dose sufficient to kill you. To all intents and purposes you are even now a dead man. You will suffer no more—physically, that is to say. Strange, is it not, that I should be talking to a dead man?

"'And now I will tell you why I have done this,' he was saying. 'You come, a policeman in your own country, spying on that which can concern you nothing. You have suspicions in your own mind and you wish to verify them. You say to yourself: "There is an organization, a society, which supplies those who need it with the means of accomplishing their revenge, of ridding themselves of those that stand in their path, of gratifying their own passion for stimulating or narcotic drugs." You travel in Hungary with the intention of finding out if your supposition is correct.

"'Well, I tell you that you were quite right. There is such an organization—and you have found it. But you are a dead man, and so your knowledge is futile to you. You Americans say that dead men tell no tales, and it is a true saying. I can speak to you because you are dead.

"'Know, then, that it is to me and to those who hold their authority from me that those good people come who wish to purchase the means of sending themselves or others to another world, or who desire to learn the fascinating charm that lies in the so-called abuse of certain drugs. That is the secret of the Valenskis; it has been well kept, and it is not you who are going to betray it.

"'There, my friend, my guest—spy that you are—I have told you the truth that you came to learn. And you cannot return and report it to your people.' He laughed exultantly. He seemed desirous of adding to my mental torment. 'Know, too,' he continued, 'that in America we are already established, not only established, but we have those who act with us that the police will not dare suspect.

"'And you who know—you are a dead man.'

"I heard all he said most clearly, though toward the end my comprehension was becoming dazed. Great circles of light, red and yellow, appeared before my eyes, merging one into the other. My last recollection is of Valenski standing over me, his arms extended rigidly; then I saw his hands drop to his side, and he sank back upon his chair. At the same moment I heard a cry. I thought it was an exultant shout, but it sounded dull and distant.

"Then I sank into the sleep from which I thought there would be no awakening."

Chapter CXXXV.

The Awakening.

THE detective had paused in the story to watch his companions who had been listening with breathless interest.

"I need not apologize for the length of my tale," he said, "for it deals with a subject which it is necessary for you to be made acquainted with.

"I do not think that any words could describe it accurately," said Swan, "and the most terrible part of it all was that I never absolutely lost consciousness. That curious double sensibility of which I have spoken persisted throughout. The fear of impending death was on me. It was, as it were, a struggle between two forces. I saw myself lying passive, sensuously content, and in fancy I tore and shook the inert body. I cried to it that this was death. I shouted 'Wake—wake!' but it was all in vain. Then I prepared to wait for death.

And at least it seemed that the supreme moment had actually arrived, for of a sudden there was a great wrench, and my double individuality collapsed. I felt myself as it were lifted up enveloped in a sheet of brilliant white flame, and then there came the sensation of falling through infinite space. Down—down—my brain whirling madly, through air dense as rushing water, a roaring and muttering in my ears, strange flashing lights in my eyes. This, then, was death!

"It was not death, but awakening, as you who have yourself undergone the sensation will have understood. I struggled back to sensibility and control over my limbs. My heart was beating with painful rapidity, and it seemed as if I could feel the pulsing of every artery in my body. My head ached acutely, and for a few minutes my eyes were dim.

"I struggled painfully to a sitting position and saw that Valenski had fallen forward and rigid. After all it had been no dream.

"It was dawn, and the room was filled with a dull gray light. After a struggle I managed to free myself from the weight upon my legs and to crawl from the bed but I could hardly stand upright, and for a few moments I sat upon the edge of my couch, gazing vacantly before me, and wondering stupidly what it all meant, and what I ought to do next. My head was bursting with pain, and I believe that for a little while I was stone deaf. I remember that I was surprised at the absolute silence, and wondered what had happened to the waterfall. My limbs, too, were numb and cold. I could hardly move my fingers.

"But at last full consciousness returned and I knew the reality of all that I had undergone. I turned to examine Valenski. Why had he not carried out his purpose?

"Was he dead or asleep?

"He was breathing heavily. The reason of his failure flashed then across my mind. The antidote of which he had spoken had failed him, and even while talking to me, the dead man, he had succumbed himself to the narcotic fumes of his hateful concoction.

"Why did I not kill him outright?

"What I did do was to secure his knife and to dress myself as best I could, keeping an eye upon him the while lest he should awaken. Then from my portmanteau I took the papers with which I had been intrusted, and, leaving everything else behind, I stole quietly out of the room. There was a key in the lock, and I took the precaution of turning it.

"Outside, at the head of the stairs, a kind of frenzy came upon me. Valenski's door stood open, and I could see the rows of bottles with their abominable contents. I burst into the room and with a sweep of my arms threw them to the floor. They fell and shattered with a horrid din; I could hear plainly enough now.

"The floor ran with many liquids, some clear and innocent looking, some thick and viscid, and some that emitted noxious fumes. Luckily for me my boots were thick. The sight of this destruction only increased my rage. I darted to the table and pulled it bodily over, smashing crucibles, wash bottles and test tubes at the same moment. I made absolute havoc in that room, and I would have completed my work had not the fumes of some pungent acid mounted to my nostrils and set me choking. Then I struggled out to the staircase again. I remember that I was laughing madly as I did so.

The door at the foot of the turret stood open. I darted across the dining hall and to my joy found no obstruction awaiting me. There remained only the massive front door.

"I paused when I reached this and gathered my senses together. Till now my one desire had been to escape, to make my way from the hateful spot, but now I began to see that I must act with caution. Even if I could pass out of the castle, that did not necessarily imply that I was in safety.

I stepped out to the courtyard. The mist was so dense that it was impossible to discern any objects clearly, but I could dimly make out the gypsy carts and tents. There were sounds in the air, too, which told me that the tribe was—in part at least—awake. Should I be allowed to pass them? How else could I gain the exterior of the castle? And beyond the outer wall there was another encampment which I should have to pass before I reached the safety of the plain.

I advanced cautiously in the direction of the gate. Suddenly a dog barked sharply, menacingly. Almost immediately afterwards I found myself confronted by a tall shape.

"Who goes there?" The words were spoken in Magyar, and, receiving no response were presently repeated in German.

"I am the guest of Herr Valenski," I responded. "I slept ill and wish to take a walk."

"It is against the rules," came the surly response. "No one is permitted outside the gates without permission. You will have the goodness to return."

I drew a gold coin from my pocket and proffered it to my almost invisible antagonist. "Herr Valenski sleeps," I said. "I cannot ask his permission. He would, of course not refuse it. Will you not allow me to pass?"

But it was in vain. The gypsy muttered a hoarse refusal. At the same time a great shaggy hound loomed out of the mist by the side of the man and growled at me threateningly. There was nothing for it but to go back.

I returned to the castle, the man and his dog following me to the door. They waited till I was safely inside and then they withdrew. I closed the door behind me and fell helplessly upon my knees, my hands still clutching the antique latch which had fallen back [illegible] into its place.

I was a prisoner, and it seemed as if my fate was sealed.

"I examined the entrance hall. On either side were the doors of the two large rooms with which I was already acquainted. At the further end a few steps led down beneath an arch to a passage branching off to right and left. I must explore one or the other of these, perhaps both. A few paces to the right bore me to the foot of a tower staircase, a way which hardly promised escape. I therefore retraced my steps and took the passage to the left.

I passed the doors of many disused rooms, kitchens evidently in the olden times, but now fallen into absolute ruin. I noticed a stove in one of them, and gathered it was there our dinner had been prepared, but there was no sign of Paul or any other servant.

By degrees the passage took on an aspect of greater ruin, and, turning a corner sharply I saw daylight before me. I ran forward smartly.

Chapter CXXXVI.

On the Brink.

"WAS I indeed about to find a means of escape? I was, I knew, on the east side of the castle, the side which I had faced from the window of my turret chamber, and where, as far as I could then see, the walls of the castle rose sheer from the very edge of the precipice. The road and the gypsy encampments were to the west.

I had been passing through a sort of tunnel, and the dismantled spaces on either side may once have been cellars. They had fallen into absolute ruin, and were choked with debris, as, too, was the dark passage through which I was making my way. But I had seen that the tunnel gave access to the open air, and I sprang forward over the fallen bricks and masonry, inspired with new courage.

"The passage ended abruptly in the face of the cliff. In my haste I had nearly [illegible] and thrown myself into space. It was on the very edge that I drew myself up, horrified, appalled. There was a sheer [illegible] of some couple of hundred feet before me.

"My hopes had been dashed to the ground. What could I do? Return by the route I had come and seek for some other means of escape? It was very evident that there was no other way of reaching the castle but by the road the carriage had travelled the day before.

"After a while my senses became more collected, and I began to reason with myself. It was folly to abandon hope until hope was absolutely lost. At the worst I had a knife, and could sell my life dearly.

"I examined the mouth of the passage. As I have said, it opened abruptly in the sheer face of the cliff. Above it, as I could see by crawling to the edge and peering up, rose the wall of the castle absolutely perpendicular, and supplying no vestige of foothold. It was the same on either side. The passage had evidently been fashioned in the very base of the castle, and its floor was the rock upon which the building had been erected.

"I gazed down over the brink at the dizzy depth below. Luckily, I have done some mountaineering in my time and am not given to losing my head when standing over a precipice. I was asking myself what purpose this tunnel in which I stood could have served. Why was its entrance fashioned in the face of the cliff? I set [illegible] down and examining the rocky surface with greater attention I understood.

"There had once been a path—a path of the roughest and most breakneck description—but it had worn away by long disuse and was no longer practicable. I could not trace it to the foot of the rock, for it sloped to the left and apparently passed behind the huge mass of falling water, that is, between it and the cliff.

"I traced out this path very carefully, wondering if I dared attempt it. To reach it it was necessary to lower oneself from the mouth of the tunnel and drop a foot or two on to a narrow ledge where the path seemed to begin. After that there was foothold for some little way, if one trod on the sides of one's feet and turned one's face to the rock. Then came a niche where grew a solitary shrub which might afford a minute's rest. Below this niche there were some little prominences of stone, badly broken, and at considerable distance one from the other, yet they might possibly serve as steps to another shrub-covered recess lower down.

"Such was the task that I must face if I decided to risk the descent. As I gazed it seemed an impossible one, [illegible] was I to know that there was any path at all.

"Nevertheless, a voice within me kept repeating, 'Go, go!'

"I prepared for the first step. I measured my distance, and turned my face away from the precipice preparatory to letting myself down. My feet were hanging over the edge. And it was at that moment I became aware of a pair of eyes fixed upon me from the depth of the tunnel, and of the sound, dimly heard through the roar of the water, of hurrying footsteps. I had been seen, and my enemies were upon me.

"I drew back from the precipice and awaited my adversary. In a moment he was up with me, a burly gypsy, whose face was unfamiliar.

"'Who are you?' he cried, 'and what were you about to do?' Then he recognized me. 'The cursed police spy!' he muttered. It was clear that Valenski had explained from the first who I was, or that word had been sent on from Ifleitz—perhaps even from the village where Valenski and I had passed the preceding night—announcing my arrival. This explained the black looks with which I had been greeted.

"I was in a state of frenzied excitement. I had worked my nerves up to a point of great tension before I had made up my mind to risk the precipice path. I could not have spoken a word for my life. I panted and choked, and with a spring I hurled myself upon the man.

"My attack took him by surprise. Probably he had suspected nothing of the sort, and had not seen that I held a knife. He swore a loud oath and grappled with me, but I saw the blood spurt from his shoulder where I had struck him. He was a much bigger man than I, and in better condition, but I was able to stab again before his arm circled me and wrenched the knife from my hand.

"He bore me to the ground, and I knew that his fingers were making for my throat. He had dropped the knife after tearing it from me, and was depending upon his hands alone.

"I struggled to the utmost of my power, but he was a much heavier and more powerful man than I, and after a few moments of anguish—moments in which I was conscious that I was being forced to my death—I saw the blue sky above me, and knew that we had reached the mouth of the tunnel. And then—there was no longer any support to my head and shoulders—they were hanging over the side of the cliff, where my body would soon follow—a sheer fall to the vale below.

"'God have mercy!' I cried in anguish, for it seemed that no earthly power could aid me. My face was wet with the spray of the waterfall and with my opponent's blood; the roar of the water in my ears was deafening. I shut my eyes to the sunlight, and because I knew that in another moment the end must come. Slowly my adversary loosened his hold of me, and drew himself together for the last effort. And then he suddenly uttered a cry, and I felt his limbs relax.

Freed for the moment I threw myself back from the brink of the abyss and struck out wildly upward with both fists. The man had been leaning over me, putting all his weight into the endeavor to push me over, and my blow must have reached his head with stunning effect. He fell forward, turning almost a somersault, and before I could fully realize what had happened he had disappeared into the void.

"For a few moments I lay there on the brink of the precipice, and then I recovered myself sufficiently to rise to my feet. I was saved for the time being, though I knew not how. It was not till later that I understood the gypsy had been weakened by the stabs I had inflicted and that his strength had given out at the critical moment when he was about to thrust me over."

Plays and Players to Be Seen at Boston Theatres

lowed, and in order to meet the unusual demands of the cast a large number of extra people have been added to the regular stock company. The play is melodramatic in its tendencies, but is of the romantic order and is full of deeds of daring and [illegible]. Howell Hansel will play the Count de Mar, Lillian Kemble the Lorance de Montine, Frances Starr the Blanche de Tauvannes, A. H. Van Buren the Felix, and there are nearly half a hundred more characters.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"The Still Alarm" is the play that will be presented by the stock company at the Bowdoin Square Theatre the coming week. This is one of the best known of the melodramas that first won popularity a dozen years or so ago, and is full of exciting incident and thrilling situations. It tells a strong and consistent story and the plot is well handled. It will be cast to the full strength and will be given with notable stage effects.

Columbia Music Hall.

The management of the Columbia Music Hall offers the entertainment provided by the Broadway Burlesquers for the enjoyment of its patrons the coming week. This organization is a very large one of its kind, numbering fifty people, and includes some of the best known burlesque comedians and some of the prettiest girls at present engaged in this line of work. Two burlesques will be given, "The Raven's Nest" and "Under the Anheuser Busch." The presenting company is headed by Lotta Austin Davis, who is a striking brunette with a mezzo-soprano voice, who also appears in the olio. The other vaudeville features are Adams and Drew, Daly and Reno, the Three Miltons, the Sisters Bernard, and Arno and Harstin.

Lyceum Theatre.

Rose Sydell's London Belles will constitute the attraction at the Lyceum Theatre the coming week. The organization is a large one and is composed of people clever in their line. A two-act musical comedy is presented. It was written by Barney Gerard and is entitled "Dazzling Nancy, or a Trip to the Bottom of the Sea." Elaborate scenic, electrical and mechanical effects are promised. There are several well-known comedians in the company and of course the usual contingent of pretty girls.

Palace Theatre.

The Moonlight Maids will be the attraction at the Palace Theatre the coming week. This is one of the most popular organizations of its kind on the road and will doubtless receive a hearty welcome from the patrons of this house. The burlesques are entitled "The Man Behind" and "Chili Sauce," and are both lively and entertaining. The olio will include Carr and Burns, the Wilson brothers, Ford and Dot West, Exler and Webb, and the McBanns. There will be a large and handsome chorus and some attractive settings.

Austin & Stone's Museum.

Katrina Schell, the celebrated lion tamer, with her den of performing Nubian lions, comes to Austin & Stone's Museum on Monday for a week's engagement. She comes direct from the Hippodrome, London, and will be seen at the museum for the first time. Her act is said to be sensational. Among the other features of the week will be M. and Mme. Chivalli in an empalement act; White Bear, a Sioux chief; Till's marionettes, and Camille on the rings. A particularly good vaudeville show is promised.

Nickelodeon.

The attractions at the Nickelodeon the coming week will include Captain Sidney Hinman and his life-saving dogs; Fielding, the man fish, Walter Wentworth, the contortionist, and Morrill, the human pincushion. In addition there will be a good stage show.

To-night's Concerts.

At Music Hall to-night Ireland's "Own Band" will make its last Boston appearance, which should insure a big audience. The other features of the concert will include George Fuller Golden, Tommy Russell and his company, the Nichols sisters, the sisters Gausch, the Hacker Lester trio and others.

The concert program at the Globe to-night will present Mr. and Mrs. Buckley in a new travesty, Castle and Cole in a novelty, Robinson and Grant, Doherty's poodles, Carter and Buford, the Wilson trio of German warblers, Mamie Remington, M'Phail, the mechanical marvel, and many others.

Amusement Notes.

Wright Lorimer returns to the Majestic with his sumptuous production of "The Shepherd King" a week from Monday.

John Drew, in his latest success, "The Duke of Killicrankie," will follow "The Rogers Brothers in Paris" at the Hollis.

Thomas W. Ross in the play of racing life entitled "Checkers," will begin a two-weeks' engagement at the Globe a week from to-morrow.

The all-star cast of "The Two Orphans" will return to this city in a couple of weeks, following Rejane at the Boston Theatre.

James K. Hackett in "The Fortunes of the King" will be the next attraction at the Tremont.

"The Manoeuvres of Jane" will be played by the Castle Square stock company a week from Monday.

Musical Notes.

Madame Sembrich's program for her song recital at Symphony Hall next Saturday afternoon, January 14, is itself a work of art. It is divided into three parts, the first or classical section consisting of the aria, "Batti, batti," from Mozart's "Don Giovanni"; ariette, "Caro mio ben," by G. Giordani; aria, "Lusinghe piu care," from Handel's "Alexander," and the Old English song, "Where the Bee Sucks," by Dr Arne. In the second section the floritura and the Italian language are succeeded by the simpler melodic style and deeper harmonies of the German lieder; "Die Forelle," Schubert; "Wie Melodien," Brahms; "Mit Myrthen und Rosen" and "Auftrage," Schumann; "Allerseelen," "All mein Gedanken" and "Heimlich Aufforderung," Richard Strauss. Part III. is devoted to contemporary composers, and is as follows: "Lons deux," R. Hahn; Romance, Debussy; "Printemps Nouveau," P. Vidal; "Mogen Alle bosen Zungen," Hugo Wolf; "Beim Schneewetter," Max Reger, and "Ein Traum," E. Grieg. Isidore Luckstone will be at the piano.

Fritz Kreisler, the Austrian violinist, opened his American tour last week, with a performance in Carnegie Hall, New York, and at the close of the concert there was a demonstration of enthusiasm rarely seen in a concert hall, the great violinist being recalled more than a dozen times. Kreisler's New York triumph was all the more remarkable in view of the fact that his program contained the two heaviest of all concertos—the Brahms and the Beethoven. But nothing seems heavy when played by this wizard of the violin, and the audience applauded those concertos as if they had been popular operatic music sung by a Caruso. Kreisler's appearances in Boston the current week, when he will give two recitals at Jordan Hall, Tuesday evening and Friday afternoon, January 10 and 13, will be eagerly looked forward to. Tickets may be secured at Symphony Hall.

The two concerts of chamber music announced by the Olive Mead String Quartet, at Potter Hall, on the Tuesday evenings of January 17 and March 28, are not the least of the coming musical attractions, as the fine performances by this talented organization of young ladies last season are well remembered. Mrs. H. H. A. Beach will be the assisting artist at one of the concerts. The program for the first concert embraces a quartet in G minor by Haydn, terzetto for two violins and viola, Op. 74, by Dvorak, and quartet in D minor, Op. posth., by Schubert.

Mrs. Avonia Bonney [illegible]'s song recital by her pupils at the [illegible] Street Theatre on the afternoon of Tuesday, January 24, will afford instructive as well as pleasing entertainment. A repetition of the program given so successfully last season and by the same promising young lady singers, will furnish opportunity for interesting comparisons of a year's progress in the development of an artist. Tickets may be had of Mrs. Litchfield, 00 Bay State Road, Boston.

The People's Choral Union is to give its midwinter concert in Jordan Hall on Monday evening, January 30, at popular prices. The program will be announced later.

Nat Goodwin Likes to Act in Boston

It Recognizes Good Work and Sees Fine Points.

By Eleanor Ames.

IT'S the strenuous [illegible] life which Nat Goodwin has been leading for several months past which caused a Boston audience to comment upon his boyish appearance, when he smiled out to a sea of familiar faces across the footlights in the opening act of "The [illegible]."

When he was last here, considered purely from an adipose standpoint, there was a little too much of Nat.

Truly, I grieved much at the [illegible] fact. Even Nat Goodwin could not be the fascinating actor-man he had been if he grew fat, and he was approaching that dread state.

One day he caught a full length view of himself in a regular George Washington type of mirror—one which will never be popular, because it cannot tell a lie.

The reflection was a revelation. He took a longer look. He grew grave, then worried. His effervescent humor deserted him when he faced his own plumpness.

Still he hated to believe that the worst was true. He called a hansom, grabbed his stick and hat and dashed madly away to one who lines his shop with mirrors.

"Have you a mirror which tells the absolute truth?" Nat demanded.

"We have all kinds of mirrors," began the shopkeeper, unctuously. "We have some charming Marie Antoinette mirrors, and some with frames which, believe me, are of the First Empire. Not mere tawdry copies, my dear sir, but"

"Bother the frames," cried Mr. Goodwin, or words to that effect. "I don't give a purple trading stamp for the frames. What I want is the mirror—the looking glass, the reflector, do you understand? I want to see exactly how I look."

You know that Nat Goodwin has played Shakespeare [illegible] dramat[illegible] upon the shopkeeper. He [illegible]

Is Marriage a Get-Rich-Quick Scheme?

By Dorothy Dix

HO! All young men who are torn between love and economy, who long for a wife, yet fear to indulge in such an extravagance, draw near and give ear unto this tale.

A man in Chicago, who has been divorced by his wife, testified the other day in court that the reason why he was not able to pay the alimony awarded to her was because it takes more money to support a single man than it does a married man.

He said that on account of his wife's superior knowledge and experience in buying food supplies and her services as cook, chambermaid and laundress he was enabled to live cheaply as a married man, but that now, being deprived of the [illegible] to economy, it takes all of his wages to provide himself with food and clothes, and [illegible] to contribute to his ex-wife's maintenance.

Thus is refuted the modern heresy that a wife is a luxury that only a rich man can afford. Unfortunately this theory has been gaining [illegible] and there is good [illegible] that the majority of [illegible] look upon getting married as they do upon setting up an [illegible], something they would like to do [illegible] the money, but that is so far beyond their means that there is no use in even pricing it. This tends to the discouragement of matrimony, and so it will be cheering tidings to many an impecunious Romeo to learn that he can not only secure his happiness but actually get rich by leading his dear one to the altar.

DOROTHY DIX

There are many good reasons for this, and why the expense of a wife is more than offset by the perquisites she carries in her train. [illegible] from the gay bachelor [illegible] the married [illegible]. As long as a man has no wife and children to absorb his earnings he is regarded as legitimate prey by his friends and family.

It is the bachelor uncle who is expected to [illegible] wild nephews and provide pretty nieces with party gowns. It is the unmarried man who must pay his way in society with flowers and theatre tickets and little dinners.

"Brother Dick has nobody to save for, so he might as well spend what he makes [illegible] children as not," says his [illegible]. "Old Dick's got no wife and kids [illegible]," concludes his borrowing [illegible] can never afford to pay back [illegible] hundred that I loaned him [illegible]

And so, [illegible] on his purse [illegible] finds that he is expected to make [illegible] treasury of it into which every hand may dip. It [illegible] only to [illegible] help [illegible]

[illegible] Nobody expects him to [illegible] and the [illegible] and an economy [illegible] refuse to support his ill and [illegible] contribute to charitable causes [illegible] wife as an excuse [illegible] perfect impunity.

Nobody questions his [illegible] of heart. But let the bachelor [illegible] can afford it, fail to respond to [illegible] help, and he is at once branded [illegible] and a curmudgeon.

That matrimony, just of [illegible] of thrift is a matter [illegible]. The man who before [illegible] his fashionable [illegible] the marriage passes [illegible] is good enough for him.

The imported Havana is superseded by the humble pipe. He who was addicted to [illegible] takes to street cars, and he opens beer instead of champagne. Whether these economies are voluntary or involuntary nobody knows, but [illegible] coincident with matrimony and [illegible] married man oftener [illegible] than [illegible] in most families.

[illegible] the advantage of [illegible] for nothing [illegible]. A wife is [illegible] in the world who is expected [illegible] for her board and clothes, [illegible]

Of course, single men who are willing to [illegible] with the makeshift existence of boarding houses [illegible] to get along and make the ends [illegible] man who attempts to keep house without a wife needs a pocketbook as long as [illegible]

[illegible] in ordinary circumstances who has to pay the wages of a housekeeper, cook, chambermaid, seamstress, sick nurse, [illegible] nurse, governess and [illegible] bills can be [illegible] and satisfactorily settled by the [illegible] of marriage.

Thus do we [illegible] which is perhaps the reason that women are always so eager to try it.

Trifles Make Perfection—That Is No Trifle

By the Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

Copyright, 1905, by [illegible]

IT is said that one day, as the great Michael Angelo was at work in his studio, a visitor remarked to him: "I cannot see that you have made much progress since I was last in to see you."

"Well," replied the sculptor, "I have retouched this part, polished that, softened this feature, brought out that muscle, given more energy to that limb, and put more expression on the lips."

"But the things you mention are mere trifles," said the visitor.

"It may be that they are," replied Michael Angelo, "but, my friend, you must bear in mind that trifles make perfection, and perfection is no trifle."

It was by attending most carefully to "trifles" that the great artist made his mighty fame. Had he neglected the small things he would have died quite unknown.

Great things are made up of innumerable little things, and given a certain number of trifles we have the masterpieces in nature and art that go to constitute the glory of the world.

Niagara, that wonder of the world, with its splendid beauty and sublimity, with its "hell of waters" below and its eternal rainbow above, is simply the result of the combination of countless billions of drops of water.

The individual drops are quite insignificant; and yet each one of them has its effect in bringing about the majestic thing known all over the world as "Niagara."

What is the human body but the aggregation of innumerable microscopic cells? And what is the great globe itself but a combination of "atoms," or "molecules," too small to be seen even with the finest instrument of man's invention?

Passing from the realm of physics to that of morals, we find the same value of little things.

Just as the body is the result of the aggregation of a countless number of very minute cells so are our characters the result of the aggregation of a great multitude of little thoughts, deeds, tendencies and habits.

THE REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

"Did you ever watch a sculptor slowly fashioning a human countenance?" asks a modern teacher. "It is not moulded at once. It is not struck out at a single blow."

It is painfully and laboriously wrought. It is a work of time and of long, patient toil. But at last the full likeness comes out, and stands fixed and immutable in the solid marble.

So does each one carve out his moral likeness. Every day he adds something to the work.

And in this most serious and important work of character-building everything counts, either for good or for evil, for weal or for woe.

In this life of ours there are no trifles. Everything has its importance and should be treated with the most serious consideration it deserves.

From the viewpoint of its potential influence [illegible] to be successful it is well [illegible] in our experience is [illegible]

Details are component [illegible], and yet there is no successful business man who will not tell you that his prosperity is largely owing to the fact that he always attends carefully to the details.

It is from his knowledge of the thousand and one minutiae of his office and from his strict attention to the same, that he is able to manage his affairs so as to make his business a profitable one.

It is precisely the same in the matter of character.

If you are [illegible] you [illegible] be sure that there is something [illegible] with you.

Your character is not what it ought to be. [illegible] the explanation far to seek. You have been in the habit of [illegible] of the [illegible] mere trifles and I will pay no attention to them."

You don't stop to think [illegible] you should [illegible] the language of Michael Angelo, "trifles make perfection."

If you will take care of the little things, giving them the attention that belongs to them, they will take care of you.

If you scorn them, the success to which you aspire will never be reached.

Take care of the little things, and the great things will look out for themselves.

Several inches of snow fell, and it was driven into the faces of all exposed to its rigors by a fierce southeasterly gale. With the gale came rising temperature and the snow soon melted. WHEN the court [illegible] came into the room where Mr. Tucker [illegible] to tell us that we could go home until Monday morning, I could [illegible] that one week of this trial, which means more to us than any [illegible] was really over.

It has passed [illegible] awful, hideous dream, but not a reality.

At times I [illegible] to make sure that it was really I who was sitting there [illegible] suspicions cast on my son.

It seemed to me [illegible] other woman and that I had gone away somewhere.

The first day [illegible] It was the first meal which his father [illegible] a year, and in spite of [illegible] together, for it seemed as though [illegible] gave us an insight into the reunion when Louis comes [illegible] again.

Louis [illegible] our [illegible]. He [illegible] walk across the yard and the street [illegible] gives him a breath of [illegible] air which he longs for.

The strain of sitting so still and paying such strict attention to everything is great and the walk gives him a little relaxation.

I am satisfied with the progress of the first week.

I cannot see where Louis has been harmed by what has been told.

I think Mr. James Vahey's handling of the case has been splendid. He is so earnest and sincere and courteous.

To-morrow I shall probably go to East Cambridge to see Louis, as I have done every Sunday for the past nine months.

I am anxious to have a quiet talk with him, and there may be things like clean linen which he will need me to get for him.

His appetite is good and his health has not been better since he left home.

Of course it is needless for me to say that my faith is unshaken.

[illegible] the tragedy This was due in a large measure to the cross-examination of Professor Marshall Davis Ewell, of Chicago, the first of the handwriting experts retained by the Com[illegible] York City and [illegible] direct testimony to-day, however, underwent considerable alteration under the cross-examination of Attorney Vahey, who [illegible] knowledge of [illegible] secured from Professor Ewell [illegible] that there was not sufficient [illegible] "Morton" [illegible] murder, with the words "J. L. Morton, [illegible] [writ]ing was natural or disguised. He had previously testified that the handwriting [wa]s disguised, and that the writing was [b]y the author of the sales slips, introduced as Tucker's, and the postal card found in Tucker's pocket.

MR. EWELL ON STAND.

Professor Ewell was called to the stand when court opened and resumed the direct testimony on Friday. He was questioned by District Attorney Sanderson, who asked:

"Are tests of handwriting more accurate when the writing is in ink than with pencil?" "More favorable results can be obtained."

"Are the results more accurate when you have a lot of disputed writing?" "Yes."

"Is your opinion more established when you have a large amount of standards of writing to judge from?" "It is."

"How many specimens of Tucker's writing have you examined?" "One hundred and thirteen."

[illegible] jury [illegible] is for your conclusions, as [illegible] against them, if you have found any." "I should like in the beginning to say what I mean by the word 'habit.' By that I mean, a person's customary or ordinary way of doing a thing. However, there might be three or four ways of a person [illegible]. By the word 'feature' I mean [illegible] characteristics, but not [illegible] to indicate habit. I want to say [illegible] to the probability of the [illegible] conclusions that they may be [illegible]

JURY SEES WRITING

[illegible] ton, Charlestown, Mass." [illegible] expert's test [illegible] No. 1 [illegible] slip was the same person who wrote the Morton note. [illegible] No. 1 was the style of letter used [illegible] in the 113 standards," said Professor Ewell. "Of the [illegible] teen of the other two. The first characteristic runs through all of the admitted writing of Tucker. [illegible] what might be called a general movement, [illegible] started at the beginning and went to the finish without a stop.

"Most of them are straight up and down. I think that in this disputed writing an attempt has been made to disguise the hand."

"How?" asked District-Attorney Sanderson.

"By writing back handed and then afterwards trying to patch it up, although it was not very satisfactory."

AS TO LETTER "M."

"Taking the capital letter M in Morton and Massachusetts, I find in the standard [illegible] number of M's."

[illegible] drew on the blackboard three illustrations of the letter M. One has a large loop at the beginning with the first part M like a fishhook. Number 2 was more round and the last one very sharp in the upper part and all the other loops were small and round.

Taking the abbreviation "Mass." in the Morton note, Dr. Ewell called the attention of the jury to a peculiar mark like a flour[ish] [illegible] the top at the beginning. This peculiarity he had found re[peatedly] on the sales slip.

[illegible] photographs of the slip the mark was so faint that the originals of the sales slips had to be produced and exhibited to the jury.

"It is a characteristic," said the witness, "but not a characteristic of much weight, standing by itself. But in connection with the others it is important."

HABIT OF PEN SHOWN IN WRITING LETTER A

"As regards letter 'A,' an almost universal habit of the writer of the standards (sales slips) was to leave the small letter 'a' open at the top and run the first two strokes together. This is true in the case of the Morton note.

"The double 'ff' at the end of the abbreviation consisted in each instance, on the standards, of one large and one small letter, and in every single instance in the disputed writing the end 'f' terminates with a short horizontal stroke."

You will note these characteristics in the Morton note."

JURY STUDIED WRITING.

The jury had photographs of the writing which was being discussed by the witness, and they made use of them freely. They discussed in whispers the statements of the witness, referred to the photographs by pointing with their fingers, and to all appearances were able to understand the technical testimony.

Two interested men in the courtroom were Messrs. Kinsley and Carvalho, the noted experts from New York. They will [illegible] as witnesses by the State [illegible] with them for a few [illegible]

[illegible] The writer has an almost invari[able habit] of using these two types. In the ab[brevia]tion 'Co.' for company, he has used the small letter style fifty-two times, while he [illegible] the other style nine times. I find in all the standards that Tucker has used the ordinary capital 'C' 138 times and the enlarged small letter 125 times.

LETTERS SIMILAR.

"I expected to find in the disputed 'J. L. Morton' note a 'C' like the first style and I do find it. In the disputed note the 'C' is made very awkwardly. It was an apparent attempt to disguise it, but it has the same characteristics that I find in the admitted writing of Tucker. The initial stroke of the disputed 'C' is not characteristic of Tucker's writing, but is suggestive, or perhaps that word is too strong."

This was an admission upon the part of the State's witness that he could not find characteristics in the handwriting of Tucker that conformed to the initial stroke of the letter "C" in Charlestown on the disputed note.

SIMILARITY IN THE "L."

[illegible] said that the small "l" [illegible] of the same character as the [illegible] have a most striking [c]haracter," said the witness. [illegible] looked very much like a double 'n.'"

HAD A FIXED HABIT OF CROSSING HIS T'S

[illegible] the word 'Morton'," said the [witness], "the crossing of the 't' is peculiar [illegible] of these sales slips (holding up [illegible] of sales slips which [Tucker] is alleged to have written) [illegible] a fairly fixed habit [illegible] either beginning next [to] the down stroke of the letter or at the [illegible] of it. In very few instances do I [find] that the 't' has been crossed through [illegible] part of the letter."

[illegible] referred to the fact [illegible] J. L. Morton, Charlestown [illegible] line which usually [illegible] also found this [illegible] sales slips which it is said [Tucker wrote.]

"But the characteristics to which I want [illegible] is that the line crossing the 't' begins either at the down stroke [illegible] on the right of it. I [have] found a [number] of instances of it, and find that [illegible] the letter is as I have described [illegible] cross."

In closing his examination of the witness, District Attorney Sanderson asked:

POSTIVE IN OPINION.

"Is there anything else you can say with reference to this handwriting?" "I have not the slightest doubt that the 'J. L. Morton' note was written by the same person who wrote these sales slips."

When Tucker heard this his face reddened somewhat and he shifted about in his chair, eyeing the witness critically. He did not appear to be nervous, he seemed to be extremely interested in what the witness had said.

The postal card alleged to have been found in Tucker's coat was shown to the witness. He said he had seen it before and examined it.

"In your opinion is the writing on that postal card in the same hand as the writing on the standards?" asked the district attorney. "I have no doubt it was written by the same person."

Witness explained that he was referring to only one side of the postal card.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

Attorney Vahey [began the cross-examina]tion of the handwriting expert.

"You think the handwriting was disguised in the Morton note?" "I think there was an attempt at it."

"A successful attempt?" "No, a very unsuccessful attempt."

"Is it the disguised writing or natural writing of the writer?" "I should say it was both."

"That is, it is both natural and disguised?" "No, I mean that characteristics of [both] are found."

"Then you mean it is partly disguised and partly natural?" "I mean there are elements of disguised writing and elements of natural."

"What are the elements of the disguised writing?" "Back hand writing, the retracing of letters and patching of the letter 'o.'"

"Do you think there are enough letters in that Morton signature to determine whether the back hand is customary or assumed?" "I think it is assumed, for the reason that most of the writing lapses to the right. For instance, the 'ton' in Morton."

"Is it visible to the naked eye?" "I am sure it is, because I measured it."

WITNESS WAS NERVOUS.

The witness was apparently nervous. He fidgeted and gave his answers in a loud voice, while his face flushed.

"Is it visible to the naked eye?" repeated Mr. Vahey. "It is."

"But you say the change to the right, if any, is very slight?" "Yes, it is slight, but it is measurable."

"Will you say it is extremely slight?" "No, I will not say it is extremely slight."

"How about the word 'Charlestown'?" "Part of the word is inclined to the right."

"And the word 'Mass.'?" "The 'M' is backhand, and the final 's' is inclined to the right."

"How about the other 's'?" "That is also inclined to the right."

"Is there enough of the writing, enough [illegible] Morton [illegible] the back hand writing [illegible] is not natural?" "Yes, I think [so]."

"And you have pointed out [illegible] that there [illegible]" "Yes, but there is [illegible] the writer appears to be un[illegible]"

"Isn't the amount of writing a great help [in] determining whether back hand or not?" "Yes."

AS TO QUANTITY.

"And the more you have the more you are able to determine accurately?" "Yes."

"And in this case you have very little?" "There is not much."

"In any of the cases in which you have testified has there been such a small quantity of writing?" "Oh, yes."

"What case?" "The indorsement of the [illegible] note in the Kennedy case."

"[illegible] case in that case?" "Yes, the writing in the body of the check, but the [illegible] stress was on the indorsement."

"[But] the disputed writing was all there?" "Yes."

"So that there was very much more there than you have here?" "Yes, there was [illegible] very much more."

"How many more letters were there in the Kennedy case?" "I don't know."

[Assis]tant General Parker raised an objection [illegible] to any reference to the issues of any other case except to prove that the witness has made statements inconsistent with his statements here."

VAHEY FOUGHT TO GET IN OTHER EVIDENCE

Attorney Vahey: "I don't intend to go into a discussion and will not refer to any case except where I am to offer evidence."

Mr. Parker: "I object."

Judge Sherman: "That is trying a collateral issue and cannot be allowed."

Mr. Vahey: "I am endeavoring to prove that the witness testified different in other cases."

Judge Sherman: "That can be determined without going into the case."

Mr. Vahey continued the cross-examination.

"Why do you think that an attempt was made to disguise the writing on the 'J. L. Morton' exhibit?" "Because of a tendency in some of the letters to turn to the right."

"How many letters do you find in the J. L. Morton exhibit that turn to the right?" "Well, take the 'ton' in 'Morton.'"

"Do you claim that they turn to the right?" "Yes."

"Do you find any other letters?" "Yes, the two 's's' in 'Mass.'"

IN MOLINEUX CASE.

"Do you remember the address on the poison package in the Molineux case?" "Yes."

"Do you remember the number of letters in it?" "I do not remember."

"Well, were there more letters in that address than there are in this 'Morton' exhibit?" "Yes."

"I read from an answer to a question that was asked you in the Molineux case: 'The poison address and the writings conceded to be Molineux's are not in the same hand. There is not sufficient writing on the poison package to say that they are in the same hand. There is not enough of the poison package address.' Did you make that answer?" "I did."

[illegible]

"Yes, that is just it," said Mr. Vahey emphatically. "There were more letters in the poison address in the Molineux case, and you declared there was not sufficient to tell whether it was in the [illegible] or disguised [illegible] how do you attempt to say [illegible] sufficient on this 'J. L. Morton' exhibit?"

"Why, I haven't said that it was sufficient. I haven't said anything of the kind."

CHANGED TESTIMONY.

In the beginning of his testimony Mr. Ewell declared that there was an apparent attempt to disguise the writing on the 'J. L. Morton' note. He said that this attempt had not been successful. He gave his reason for believing that there was an attempt to disguise [illegible] the testimony [illegible] Mr. Vahey's cross-examination [illegible] never said that there was enough of the address to [illegible] whether or not it was disguised.

"Do you say, now, Professor Ewell, that there is enough writing on the 'J. L. Morton' note for you to determine whether the backhand writing was the natural or disguised writing of the person who wrote it?" "I don't know—I can't say. There is not enough of the writing to determine whether the habits of the person who wrote it was backhanded or forward."

The cross-examination by Mr. Vahey was more [illegible] cross-examination [illegible] of the witness [illegible] had been admitted [illegible] the ruling of the [illegible]

REPROVED BY COURT

"Gentlemen who [illegible] coming to this [illegible] allowed the courtesy of the [illegible] must not manifest [illegible] feeling in this case."

After an interruption of about [illegible] during which [illegible] tion of counsel [illegible] Ewell took the stand and Mr. Vahey resumed his cross-examination.

"I understood you to say [illegible] variation of the J. L. Morton [illegible] What I said is that [illegible] in the handwriting and the uncertainty is what led me to think the original was not backhand."

"And the variation was [illegible] stroke in front of the 'J'?" "Yes. I regard it as the uncertainty."

"Now, with reference to these letters which should you [illegible] what? Did you say that there was an attempt to disguise that?" "It occurred to me that that was the reason."

ATTEMPT TO DISGUISE WAS UNSUCCESSFUL

CHARLES L. TUCKER ON TRIAL FOR LIFE: PEN PICTURE OF DEFENDANT

Charles Louis Tucker is not a man of decided type.

He is slender, under medium height, and is scrupulously particular about his appearance. He is fond of dressing well.

His face is a paradox—weak in the upper part and determined in the projecting jaw and out-hanging under lip. When he walks he swings the upper part of his body from side to side, giving a suggestion of effeminacy.

He is the same type of man one might meet a dozen times a day in any one of a hundred positions.

Hopes the Medical Testimony Is Finished.

I hope that the medical testimony is finished forever. It was dreadful.

The testimony of the handwriting experts, they tell me, is not nearly so terrib[le].

How can it be? The talk of wounds and knives and the sight of blood-stained clothes and skeletons is more dreadful than anything else in the trial can possibly be.

No one can realize how sorry Mr. Tucker and I feel for Mr. Page and his son.

I hope that the murderer of Mabel Page will some day be found. But to accuse my son of having committed the crime is cruel and unjust.

He is innocent.

How I wish the whole world could know that as well as I do!

But one day it will be proven.

Then people will know that it is more than the fond belief a loving mother has in her child that makes me so positive.

guise it was [illegible] because the disguise was another characteristic of the 'J'?" "So it appears to me."

"And the same thing was characteristic of the [illegible]?" [illegible]

"And [illegible] the same thing with reference to the [illegible]" "No. I think there was an attempt to make another type of the [illegible]"

"So that if that [illegible] was on the paper before the note was written the signature of that 'M' would be lost." "Yes."

"Do you think that the [illegible] was voluntary?" "I think that it was voluntary, perhaps for the purpose of disguising."

"I understood you to say that you could determine more accurately concerning pen than pencil writing?" "Yes, because you have the spreading of the pen and the shading which indicates how the pen is held."

"And you would be very much more certain where you had pen than pencil writing?" "[illegible]"

TAKES ALL SAMPLES

"In going through the standards of a person's handwriting in order to [illegible] a person's [illegible] handwriting, which samples do you usually take?" "I take them all."

"Which [illegible] as you [illegible]" [illegible] any [illegible] that produce [illegible]

"I understand you to say that one or two [illegible] would [illegible] suggest a form of habit?" [illegible]

"Do you regard [illegible] writing [illegible]?" "Yes. In a [illegible] characteristics are the [illegible]"

"Do you regard [illegible] as much as you do [illegible]?" [illegible] together.

"And [illegible] that the [illegible] amount of [illegible] frequency [illegible]"

DISGUISE CAPITALS.

"How many [illegible] a capital [illegible]?" [illegible]

"In disguising [illegible] there is a tendency to disguise the capitals rather than the small letters?" "Yes, [illegible] thing."

"And the person has more difficulty in disguising the small letters?" "I think that is probably true [illegible] down any [illegible]"

Mr. Vahey [illegible] to a capital [illegible] the sales slips.

"Is there any similarity between that and the [illegible]?" [illegible] asked. "It is not [illegible] exactly, but it has the same formation."

Witness agreed that [illegible] letter [illegible] pointed out to him [illegible] was not exactly like the [illegible] in the Morton signature, but insisted that it had what he called the same characteristics. Mr. Vahey had the witness point out other dissimilarities between letters in the sales slips [illegible] to have been written by Tucker and the "Morton" signature.

THROUGH MICROSCOPE

"Does not the last part of [illegible] 'M' in the standard fall away more than in the 'Morton' signature." Dr. Ewell examined both exhibits closely, thought a few minutes, and then answered: "Yes, it falls away more."

Mr. Vahey also looked through the microscope. He passed it to the witness, who would from time to time examine the exhibit and pass it back again. This occurred a great many times, and while the jury and the court looked on Mr. Vahey and Dr. Ewell made microscopic examinations, the former asking questions and the latter answering them.

"Don't you see that space?" Mr. Vahey would ask. Taking the microscope Dr. Ewell would reply: "Do you mean between the two points?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Vahey. "Oh, yes," agreed Dr. Ewell.

In the midst of the conversation Dr. Ewell, whose face was flushed, asked one of the court officers for a glass of water.

DIFFERENCE IN M'S NOT STRONG, HE SAID

"I call attention to the 'M' in exhibit 22. Do you see any difference between that and the 'M' in Massachusetts?" "Yes, I see some, but it is not strong."

"You say that you did not find the word 'Charlestown' but once in the one hundred and fifteen sales slips?" "Such is my recollection."

"And that was in Exhibit 24?" "Yes."

"Now I want you to point out to the jury the difference between the word 'Charlestown' in exhibit No. 24 and the word 'Charlestown' in the 'Morton' note?" "The 'C' and 'h' are the same type, but in the admitted writing they are better formed. The 'a' is more inclined. The 'r' is more like an 'n.' The 'l' has a closed loop. I see no difference in the 'e.' The 's' is more irregularly formed and more closed. The [illegible] to the [illegible] is different. The 'o' is a little more nearly closed at the top. The 'w' looks like two 'n's.' The 't' is crossed directly [illegible] after the letter as it is in the 'Morton' note."

In the 113 exhibits admitted as samples of Tucker's writing, the word 'Charlestown' was only found once, and in that word the expert admitted that every letter, except one, was appreciably different from the letters that formed the word 'Charlestown' in the disputed Morton note.

NEARLY ALWAYS JOINED

"When you find the letters 'ch' together in the sales slips, are they not nearly always joined?" "They are."

"Isn't it usual that they are?" "Yes. [illegible] are joined together more often [illegible] are separated?" "Yes, and [illegible] a hand, [illegible] not a universal [illegible]"

[illegible]

In the word "Charles" in exhibit 24 [illegible]

[illegible]

In the word "Charlestown" in the Morton note the witness had pointed out that there was an unusual space between the "s" and "t." He said he had found this characteristic in the sales slips written by Tucker. Mr. Vahey, however, had the witness admit that there were a great many instances in the sales slips where "s" and "t" came together and there was no abnormal space between them.

PICTORIAL EFFECT.

"Are you more influenced on arriving at a decision by the general pictorial effects of handwriting?" "Well, that is one thing [illegible] It is and it is not."

In the first 117 [illegible] [illegible] Martin [illegible] occurred [illegible]

"Do you find any two slips that [illegible]?" "I don't know whether [illegible]"

[illegible] breaks between the [illegible]

"Have you compared the Morton signature with [illegible]?" [illegible] "I have compared it [illegible]"

"Then do you [illegible] breaks?" "Not many."

"Did you find in the standards of handwriting [illegible] to the top of the [illegible] as a general rule [illegible]"

GENERALLY UNIFORM.

"You [illegible] that [illegible] the four letters are [illegible] uniform?" "Yes, that is [illegible]"

[illegible]

"Is there likely to be any peculiar difference when a person [illegible] writing [illegible]?" "I have never investigated."

"In those cases where a person writes on manifold would it not be necessary to bear down harder than at other times?" "Yes, I suppose so."

"Would not that have a tendency to make a person bear down harder on a [illegible]?"

The witness said that [illegible] he had never investigated [illegible] writing [illegible]

Judge Sheehan [illegible] cross-examination [illegible] adjournment until Monday morning [illegible] Professor Ewell will testify then.

WOMEN AT TRIAL TO HEAR GRIM HORRORS

By Eleanor Ames.

Why the steadily increasing attendance of women at the trial of Charles Louis Tucker for the [illegible] killing of Mabel Page?

It is a question which I have asked myself over and over again and I confess I can find no [illegible] for their presence.

They form [illegible] in a trial [illegible] cause [illegible]

In a [illegible] guarded by uniformed officers [illegible] a young man accused of the gravest crime in the criminal category, that of taking, unprovoked and wantonly, a human life.

The State will try to prove his guilt.

The attorneys for the defense will try to prove his innocence.

The jury will render the verdict.

But in the proving and before the verdict can be reached, there must be threshed over in open court a mass of horrible testimony involving knife thrusts, autopsies, motives and incidents from which strong men shrink.

WOMEN IN CROWDS.

Yet women both young and old, wives, mothers, sisters, sweethearts, scramble, crowd and almost fight for positions in the front seats, where apparently they steep morbid natures in the harrowing details with the keenest enjoyment.

If, for lack of room, they cannot gain admittance, they line themselves up in the corridor, craning their necks to catch a glimpse of the defendant, and grasping the opportunity to slip into the first vacant seat, where they settle themselves with an air of exultation, as much as to say: "Well, thank fortune, here I am at last."

Day after day during the past week I have watched those women with mingled emotions in which amazement has been [illegible]

[illegible]

There are women whose [illegible] sad eyes and drooping mouths [illegible]

WEEP FOR TUCKER.

It seems to wrench their very souls with pity to see him there.

"Isn't it awful?" they say. "It breaks my heart to see that young boy in such a terrible predicament."

However, as they go there to see him voluntarily day after day, heartbreaking can not be a painful operation to them.

To balance the frivolity there are matrons, stout and respectable, with their severely parted or softly waved [illegible] glasses shading eyes that are either grave with a motherly light or judicially cold.

And they all [illegible] that they may not miss one word of the testimony that is given while they watch the defendant with an almost breathless concentration.

When he leans forward they are the first to notice his change of position and often they whisper and nudge each other, commenting upon his attitude.

When he enters or leaves the court room there is an involuntary movement toward him and they gaze at him as though he was some tremendous curiosity instead of a slender boy who is passing through the torture of a fight for his life.

The bringing in of the big canvas bag, which contains the murdered girl's blood stained clothing, causes them to breathe hard with excitement, and when some of the garments are passed to the jury or a witness they almost rise to their feet in their anxiety to catch a glimpse of them.

WHY IS IT?

Why is it?

Why are they there?

What can their home lives be?

Any woman who can sit in a courtroom [illegible] unless she has some special [illegible] must have a [illegible]

With the exception of stenographers, reporters [illegible] or close personal friends and relatives of either the deceased or the accused, I can find no [illegible] of any woman in the courtroom, [illegible] she be a [illegible] criminal [illegible] for some special purpose.

I cannot for the life of me see why they want to be there.

It is [illegible] nerve-racking experience [illegible]

Yet to many women [illegible] the opposite [illegible]

[illegible]

One woman told me that she had [illegible]

[illegible]

And I heard one woman explain [illegible] the night [illegible]

To hear [illegible] impression [illegible] room [illegible]

As a matter of [illegible] would be [illegible]

[illegible] to the interest [illegible] of exciting [illegible] then they [illegible] arouse feeling, disappointment.

A young man accused of murder could not [illegible] It is still expected to keep its position on the pedestal [illegible] woman [illegible] been placed.

By Edward Page.

Statement made to the Boston Sunday American.

The most [illegible] theory yet given out [illegible] for the murder of my daughter Mabel was the sworn statement of my son Harold that Tucker knew my daughter and had talked with her at the time he [illegible] at our home to purchase a dog from my son.

[illegible] managed [illegible] the day [illegible] my poor daughter slain.

[illegible] the story [illegible] in the newspapers that the wife of Tucker was drowned in the Charles River my daughter Mabel remarked to Harold and myself:

SHE KNEW HIM.

"Why, that is the young man who called for you one day to buy a dog, and I talked with him for a few moments in the sitting room before you came down stairs."

Harold [illegible] told her that the husband of the woman who was drowned in the Charles River and Charles Louis Tucker were one and the same person.

One thing is certain, and that is that the murderer of my daughter knew of my movements, knew that Harold was at work at the South Station, saw the housekeeper, Amy Roberts, leave the house at 10:45 o'clock, and knew that he had every opportunity to accomplish his purpose.

Whoever committed the murder, it is certain he was known to my daughter, or he never could have entered the house. It has often been commented upon that the murderer had been able to gain so easy an admittance to the house, but it is easily explained when it is known that my daughter had been informed that Harold was injured and learning this from some person who was known to her, she opened the door and admitted her slayer.

DOGS WERE CONFINED.

Whoever committed the crime also knew that my son's dogs were kept in a wing of the barn, save when one of the women of the house were alone at night and had the dogs with them for possible protection. The murderer could easily have entered the house at midday with the permission of my daughter without ever attracting the attention of the dogs.

I also believe that the murderer became frightened after his work was done and made his escape without securing all the money he might have got. A man named Matty [illegible]

It is [illegible] was found and [illegible] that was in a [illegible]

Not at the Trial.

I did not [illegible] the trial [illegible] I was informed [illegible] I would not [illegible] crime upon the [illegible] Morton [illegible] in my doubts [illegible]

[illegible]

It appears certain to me that this note was dropped on purpose by the murderer.

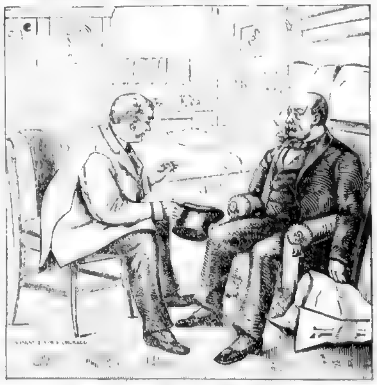
THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND DON'T KNOW IT



To Prove what Swamp-Root, the Great Kidney Remedy, will do for YOU, Every Reader of "The American" May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, fatal results are sure to follow.

Your other organs may need attention—but your kidneys most, because they do most and need attention first.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys begin to get better they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root will set your whole system right, and the best proof of this is a trial.

[illegible]

I know that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable and does not contain any harmful [illegible] Thanking you for my complete recovery and recommending Swamp-Root to all sufferers, I am, Very truly yours,

I. C. RICHARDSON.

[If you] pass your water frequently night and day, smarting or irritation in passing, brickdust or sediment in the urine, headache, backache, lame back, dizziness, poor digestion, sleeplessness, nervousness, heart disturbance due to bad kidney trouble, skin eruptions from bad blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, diabetes, bloating, irritability, wornout feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh, sallow complexion, or Bright's disease.

If your water, when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment or settling, or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is for sale at drug stores the world over in bottles of two sizes and two prices—fifty cents and one dollar. Remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything, but it promptly cures kidney, liver and bladder troubles, the symptoms of which are—obliged to [illegible]

SPECIAL NOTE.—In order to prove the wonderful merits of Swamp-Root you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample bottle. In sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in the Sunday American. The genuineness of this offer is guaranteed.

MABEL WALKER WILL SURELY TESTIFY AT TUCKER TRIAL

MISSING GIRL IS SURE TO GO ON THE STAND.

Mabel Walker, the girl from Damariscotta, Me., by whom [illegible] has been declared Charles L. Tucker can establish his innocence, will positively appear as a witness. This announcement is made on the highest authority. [illegible] been discussed whether or not her appearance is at the [illegible]

Catarrh of the Stomach.

A Pleasant, Simple, but Safe and Effectual Cure for It.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing, headaches, fickle appetite, nervousness and a general played out, languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do, and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanson, the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and not being a patent medicine can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. [illegible] S. Workman, Chicago, Ills., writes: "Catarrh is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed and the poisonous discharge therefrom passing backward into the throat reaches the stomach, thus producing catarrh of the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of stomach without cure, but to-day I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of indigestion, catarrh of stomach, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

TUCKER CALMLY INTERESTED AS OPPOSING SIDES BATTLE FOR HIS LIFE

IN HEALTH NOW, DEATH HANGS OVER HIM.

Charles Louis Tucker, on trial for the murder of Mabel Page, has [illegible] week's ordeal which it would seem would prove so trying to [illegible] er's cage for the first time last Monday morning, had not changed in the slightest degree when adjournment came yesterday afternoon.

During the week he had heard the scathing arraignment of District Attorney Sanderson. He had listened to the dramatic recitals of witnesses connected directly with the tragedy of Mabel Page. He had [illegible]

NO EMOTION OR FEAR.

Not once has he shown [illegible] of fear, apprehension, excitation or resentment [illegible] any of the phases of feeling which have been aroused in other spectators of the tense drama. His general bearing is one of confidence. Beyond that he gives no indication of the impression which the proceedings of a day make upon him [illegible]

Six hours and a half each day are spent in the prisoner's pen in the courtroom. Not once during the entire time that Tucker has spent in that pen during this week has he been seen to turn around in his chair to see those in his rear. He has kept his eyes fixed straight ahead of him, sometimes gazing to the right or left.

Tucker is usually up shortly after 6 o'clock in the morning and takes special care in making his toilet. His clothes are [illegible] and his [illegible] spotless. He [illegible] in his cell and dresses there.

APPETITE IS GOOD.

At 6.30 o'clock one of the [illegible] brings to the [illegible] all his breakfast, consisting of meat, eggs, bread and coffee. His appetite is good. The strain of the trial has not affected [illegible]

Between [illegible] o'clock and 9.30 in the morning [illegible] Tucker sometimes gets restless [illegible] while he is waiting for the deputy sheriffs to come and take him to the courtroom. He is given the morning papers, and takes great interest in the accounts of the trial.

When Tucker returns to his cell in the evening [illegible] he has taken his supper, a copy of the BOSTON AMERICAN is given him, and he is intensely interested in reading the articles which have appeared exclusively in this paper every day written by [illegible]

Since Tucker's mother and father and brother were excluded from the courtroom on Tuesday, the young man has seemed more at ease. It was a source of worry to him that his parents should be [illegible] to the ordeal of hearing the evidence against him, especially his father, who is not well.

HE RARELY SMILES.

There is one very noticeable feature about the prisoner.

He seldom, if ever, smiles while in the courtroom.

A curt bow is his only response to a cheerful "good morning" from his counsel.

When he enters the courtroom in the morning, or after lunch, he is immediately the centre of all eyes. Especially eager are the women, who sometimes stand to get a full view of the young man.

In the street there is always a large crowd of men and boys, women and young girls, who stare at him until he passes into the courthouse or jail.

When the jury was selected he was intensely interested. He leaned forward in his chair, resting his elbows on the bar in front of the prisoner's cage, critically studying each man. Many times when his counsel were about to accept a talesman he would jump to his feet and exclaim, "I challenge."

INTENSELY INTERESTED.

Not once did he show the slightest emotion when District Attorney Sanderson, in opening the case for the prosecution, told the long story of the murder, and of how the Commonwealth would try to prove the defendant guilty of the crime. He shifted about in his chair at times as though slightly uneasy. He was intensely interested.

That his father and [illegible] could see [illegible] side, [illegible] Tucker's [illegible] during the week.

He said that it was a great [illegible] to him as well as [illegible] his mother and father that the ruling of the court [illegible] The result [illegible] during the week would have [illegible]

STUDIES WITNESSES.

To watch Tucker study [illegible] witness [illegible] flipped [illegible]

[illegible] interest is [illegible] forward and folds his [illegible] in front of the pen [illegible] his eyes upon the [illegible] and observes every [illegible]

[illegible] startling explanations by witnesses, have failed to move the prisoner in the least. He is always calm [illegible] a grin may be detected upon his face.

Tucker seldom looks toward the jurymen. He seems perfectly content to rest his fate in their hands. His straight ahead look has characterized him during the week.

There is not a doubt that Charles L. Tucker yesterday looked much better than he did Monday, the first day he was brought into court.

7 OTHER EXPERTS WILL GO ON THE STAND

The fight for the life of Charles L. Tucker, accused of the murder of Mabel Page, will revolve around four men when the trial is resumed to-morrow morning. They are the handwriting experts summoned by the prosecution. Upon these men the State relies to prove that Tucker wrote the words "Charles L. Morton, Charlestown, Mass.," found near the body of the murdered woman. They will occupy the stand for two or three days. Professor Marshall Davis Ewell, of Chicago, is the only one of the four who has been on the stand.

The others for the State who will be heard in the next few days are David N. Carvalho, the noted expert, who figured prominently in the famous Molineux trial in New York; William J. Kinsley of New York and Charles French of Boston.

At the proper time the counsel for [illegible]

HOW EXPERTS TESTIFY

Some idea of the manner in which the [illegible] experts to establish Tucker as the writer of the Morton note and how the defence will attempt to discredit the experts' testimony was obtained from the examination and cross-examination of Dr. Ewell.

[illegible] is furnished with photo[illegible] one of the sales slips, [illegible] The examinations were interesting and in some [illegible]

[illegible] for the defence are [illegible] the efforts of the prosecution to [illegible] connection between the two [illegible] are doing so without [illegible]

COUNTY ENGINEER KENDALL testified that the distance from Tucker's home to the Page home and back is more than three miles.

EDWARD PAGE told of having found the body of his daughter on March 31.

MEDICAL EXAMINER JULIAN A. MEAD swore that the Tucker knife could have made all the wounds in Mabel Page's body.

DR. HORACE B. FROST swore to the same thing.

DR. HENRY A. WOOD corroborated the two other physicians.

UNDERTAKER JOHN D. BRUCE told of finding the wounds in Miss Page's breast and back, about her belt buckle being broken and the hooks and eyes of her skirt pulled off.

CHIEF DARIUS P. VITTUM testified that he saw no signs of blood outside Miss Page's room.

HAROLD PAGE testified that Tucker had once called at the Page house and had seen Mabel Page.

MARSHALL DAVIS EWELL, of Chicago, swore that in his opinion Tucker wrote the "J. L. Morton, Charlestown, Mass." note found in Miss Page's room, but admitted that he did not know whether the writing was disguised or natural.

Catarrh of bladder.
Catarrh of pelvis.

Urgent Need for Pe-ru-na in Every State.

CATARRH is a prevalent disease throughout the United States. Catarrhal diseases are the cause of at least one-half of the deaths. A careful compilation made from the United States mortal statistics shows the relative frequency of catarrhal diseases in the various states and territories.

This map has been prepared at great expense and care, and indicates by the light shading those sections of the United States least subject to catarrh, and the darker shadings those localities most subject.

Catarrhal diseases are the persistent bane of our climate. It is the one disease which prevails winter and summer, east and west, north and south.

To devise a remedy which should meet the perpetual plague has been the lifelong ambition of Dr. Hartman.

His fame in the treatment of catarrhal diseases is known everywhere throughout the civilized world.

The compound, Peruna, was not devised in a moment, nor hastily contrived. It is the result of years of experience and study. It is the greatest medicinal achievement of the age.

Peruna checks a cold instantly.

Peruna stops a cough by removing the cause.

Peruna cures catarrh by eradicating it from the system.

Peruna cures catarrhal diseases of the stomach and bowels by cleansing the mucous membranes.

Peruna is the greatest of American remedies because it successfully combats the greatest of American diseases.

Frank Cobb, of Deering, Maine, Writes: "I took Peruna and feel better than I have for years."

Geo. S. Chandler, of Portsmouth, N. H., Writes: "I recommend Peruna as a remedy for catarrh and nervousness."

Warren Ellis, of Worcester, Vermont, Writes: "I was troubled with catarrh six years. Since taking Peruna I am relieved."

F. E. Brackett, of Medford, Massachusetts, Writes: "Have used many different medicines. Since using Peruna, I find it far superior."

Mrs. Pauline Antelman, of Taftville, Conn., Writes: "I have Peruna always on hand."

Mrs. W. H. Cottrell, of Westerly, R. I., Writes: "Peruna has been a sure cure."

Jas. J. Conway, of Brooklyn, New York, Writes from 127 Atlantic Ave.: "I used Peruna and have been restored."

Alfred DeMaio, of Vineland, New Jersey, Writes: "My friends are surprised to see my improvement after taking Peruna."

Bella Eggleton, of Philadelphia, Pa., Writes from 461 Moyer St.: "After taking Peruna, I can recommend it."

Mrs. Mattie Smith, of Wilmington, Del., Writes: "By the use of Peruna I am cured. We keep it in the house."

C. P. Bertholomew, of Baltimore, Md., Writes: "I used several bottles of Peruna and recommend it to all."

Hon. E. H. Fitch, of Washington, D. C., Writes: "Peruna is a cure for catarrh."

W. H. Armistead, of Cumberland, Virginia, Writes: "Peruna has cured me of chronic catarrh."

G. W. Taylor, of Charleston, W. Va., Writes: "Peruna is the greatest tonic on the market."

Harry Skinner, of Greenville, N. C., Writes: "Peruna as a tonic and cure for catarrh has been used with success."

W. E. Bain, of Dillon, South Carolina, Writes: "I tried doctors and remedies. All failed until I took Peruna."

Mrs. H. D. Amoss, of Greensboro, Georgia, Writes: "When I commenced taking Peruna I could hardly walk across my room. Am now able to do my work."

J. Ed. O'Brien, of Pensacola, Florida, Writes: "I endorse Peruna as a cure for catarrh and bronchitis."

Decision of the Supreme Court.

"'In short, we are of the opinion that the asserted immunity (i.e., from regulation of rates) did not extend to [illegible] system [illegible] passed to the consolidated company from companies not possessing such immunity in their own right, that under this bill relief could not be accorded in respect of part of the system; that no contract that the price of gas should not be reduced below $1 a thousand feet was created, nor was the alleged original exemption merely modified or extended; and that the decree dismissing the bill because there were no such contract right as alleged impaired or destroyed by the ordinance was right.'

"This upheld our every point.

"The decision of the Court took up the [illegible]

[illegible]

"In the fighting of gas price cases the Supreme Court of the United States has fixed the method of determining a reasonable rate. If the gas commission of [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] plant, the cost of production is taken up with testimony from experts to discuss the cost of production in the locality affected. Now this cost has decreased greatly within the last ten years or so. In the first place the cost of [illegible] the coal is cheapened by the methods used in the furnaces. The value of the by-products that are obtained is greatly increased, which cuts down the net cost. The government reports show this very clearly.

"Now having fixed the value of the plant and the cost of producing the gas itself, the net cost, of course, the court determines what is a fair return upon the investment. It used the new cost of the plant in making this calculation. Having all these elements, the cost per thousand cubic feet is a comparatively easy thing to determine.

"On this basis of calculation, the cost of gas will be cheaper than most cities are paying. The fact that the present cost of the plant if built new is taken as the basis of investment, cuts out water and cuts out all past transactions. Take out the water and the whole cost, and you get the gas down to a bed rock basis.

"The Supreme Court of the United States has decided this point absolutely. There is no controverting it, and if the question goes to that highest tribunal, it is bound to end in cheaper gas."

$20,000 LEGACIES FOR MAINE WOMEN

Special to the Sunday American.

Rumford, Me., Jan. 7.—Mrs. Lucy [illegible] Tufts and Miss Columbia Kimball of Rumford, Me., [illegible] by their brother, the late W. W. Kimball of Chicago, whose will was probated yesterday. Mr. Kimball left an estate of more than $2,000,000.

HE HAD FAITH

And It was Justified

"In reply to your letter of recent date, will say that I am cured as sound as a dollar. I used about three of the fifty cent packages. I was going to write you but was holding up to see if the piles would give me any further trouble. I feel no signs of the piles and believe I am cured entirely. I had faith in Pyramid Pile Cure at the start and stuck right to the treatment. You can refer anyone to me you like. I can soon tell what Pyramid Pile Cure has done for me. Wishing you much success, I remain, J. C. Kinkaid, Mgr. for Fleischman & Co. Agency at Knoxville, Tenn."

It is a well recognized fact that the best advertising an article can have is that which is known as "word of mouth"; this rightfully carries more weight than all the claims which can be set forth. It follows that Mr. Kinkaid with his wide acquaintance, will largely promote the sale and use of Pyramid Pile Cure because—and here is the vital point—he knows whereof he speaks, and not only advocates its use but does so with enthusiasm; this is not to be wondered at and in point of fact can anyone, after reading his letter doubt that this remedy cures?

Pyramid Pile Cure is sold by druggists for the low price of fifty cents a package; it is in suppository form, is applied directly to the parts affected, and does its work quickly and painlessly; there is no other remedy "just as good."

A little book describing the causes and cure of piles is published by Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and will be sent free to any address for the asking.

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband should be a woman's constant study. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Potts tell their stories for the benefit of all wives and mothers.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will make every mother well, strong, healthy and happy. I dragged through nine years of miserable existence, worn out with pain and weariness. I then noticed a statement of a woman troubled as I was, and the wonderful results she had had from your Vegetable Compound, and decided to try what it would do for me, and used it for three months. At the end of that time I was a different woman, the neighbors remarked it, and my husband fell in love with me all over again. It seemed like a new existence. I had been suffering with inflammation and falling of the womb, but your medicine cured that and built up my entire system, till I was indeed like a new woman.—Sincerely yours, Mrs. Chas. F. Brown, 21 Cedar Terrace, Hot Springs, Ark., Vice President Mothers' Club."

Suffering women should not fail to profit by Mrs. Brown's experiences; just as surely as she was cured of the troubles enumerated in her letter, just so surely will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure other women who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration. Read the story of Mrs. Potts to all mothers:—

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—During the early part of my married life I was very delicate in health. I had two miscarriages, and both my husband and I felt very badly as we were anxious to have children. A neighbor who had been using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advised me to try it, and I decided to do so. I soon felt that my appetite was increasing, the headaches gradually decreased and finally disappeared, and my general health improved. I felt as if new blood coursed through my veins, the sluggish tired feeling disappeared, and I became strong and well.

"Within a year after I became the mother of a strong healthy child, the joy of our home. You certainly have a splendid remedy, and I wish every mother knew of it.—Sincerely yours, Mrs. Anna Potts, 510 Park Ave., Hot Springs, Ark."

If you feel that there is anything at all unusual or puzzling about your case, or if you wish confidential advice of the most experienced, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and you will be advised free of charge. Lydia E. # CONFESSION MAY CLEAR DODGE MYSTERY.

Jerome Is Confident of Case Despite the Flight of Mrs. Gelshenen, Who Would Have Been an Important Witness

JURY TO HEAR ABOUT ALLEGED CONSPIRACY

Lawyers Had Bitter Quarrel When Woman's Departure for Europe by the Kaiser Wilhelm Was Announced

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Jan. 7.—Despite the fact that Mrs. William R. Gelshenen, a friend of Charles W. Morse, who was considered an important witness and who was wanted to testify before the Grand Jury in the Dodge Morse alleged conspiracy, has eluded all process-servers and sailed for Europe, District Attorney Jerome is confident that he will lay bare before the Grand Jury to-morrow all the negotiations that led up to the attempt to annul the marriage of Charles W. Morse to Clemence Dodge by the confession of a man who is fully cognizant of all the facts in the case.

This man, according to Mr. Jerome, knows who was to be benefited by it, and he will tell all to the Grand Jury. Whether this confession, without corroboration, will result in the finding of indictments, is problematical, but one thing is certain, and that is that the flight of Mrs. Gelshenen, despite her importance as a witness, will not seriously hinder Mr. Jerome in proceeding with the case.

Wants to Find Conspirators.

The points that Mr. Jerome wishes to clear up are the identity of the conspirators, the name of the person against whom the conspiracy was directed, the lawyers [illegible] identity of the person who [illegible]

[illegible] that Mrs. Gelshenen [illegible] and was [illegible] of the New York [illegible] her son, W. [illegible] before the [illegible] mother had sailed [illegible] last Tuesday. When [illegible] this testimony hot words [illegible] between Mr. Jerome and Attorney Beck, Mrs. Gelshenen's counsel, Mr. [illegible] accusing Mr. Beck of having [illegible] Mrs. Gelshenen to go abroad so that she would not be called upon to testify.

The District Attorney's office believed that Mrs. Gelshenen intended to sail today on the Deutschland from Hoboken. She eluded the District Attorney's detectives, however, and sailed Tuesday, and the staterooms on the Deutschland were supposed to be occupied by her son and her two daughters, who, it is expected, will join her in Naples.

Mr. Beck said that Mrs. Gelshenen intended to spend the Winter in Egypt, and that he would communicate to her the contents of Mr. Jerome's letter and ascertain if she wished to return to testify.

When young Gelshenen and the servants who were subpoenaed appeared before the Grand Jury and Mr. Jerome learned positively that Mrs. Gelshenen was out of his reach, he was very angry, and his anger was directed against Mr. Beck. He said:

"The legal fraternity of New York had better get it thoroughly into their minds that the so-called Dodge-Morse case is a live wire. Several very distinguished members of the fraternity have picked up the wire and have been short circuited. The latest one to pick it up is Mr. James M. Beck, and I wish to assure him that the voltage is very high and the amperage sufficient to make any one dance who may handle it."

Mr. Beck's criticism of Mr. Jerome for making public his letter to Mrs. Gelshenen, which Mr. Beck says she never received, angered Mr. Jerome, as did the surprise at the methods of the District Attorney's office, expressed by Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Mr. Morse.

"When all information about the whereabouts of an important witness is refused both at her home and by her counsel, and when such a witness plans to leave the country on January 7, and then, by advice of counsel, leaves on Tuesday, allegations of impropriety come with little grace from her legal representative.

"Then this surprise of Mr. Untermyer's [illegible] District Attorney. How did he know [illegible] Mrs. Gelshenen's plans, as he says? Mr. Untermyer [illegible] for her trip and [illegible] Why is Mr. Untermyer [illegible] I thought Mr. Beck was Mrs. Gelshenen's counsel."

Although the investigation before the Grand Jury will go on to-morrow, Charles F. Drake, who is expected to be a star witness, will not be called for some time. He is not, it is said, mentally responsible for what he says at present.

JUMPS WITH HER BABE TO ESCAPE TRAIN ON BRIDGE

MRS JAMES A. BROTHERTON AND CHILD.

Heroic mother and baby she saved by jump from railroad trestle to river bed to escape oncoming train.

Mother's Heroic Leap to River Below Saves Four From Horrible Death on Railroad Trestle.

Providence, Jan. 7.—Caught upon a long trestle by a railroad train, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Brotherton of Olneyville had a thrilling escape [illegible] presence of mind of Mrs. Brotherton saved the party from being ground to pieces.

Grasping her two-and-a-half year old son James in her arms, Mrs. Brotherton [illegible] from the trestle into the Woonasquatucket River, and her example was quickly followed by the husband and Mrs. James Mitchell of Manton. All landed on the rocks in the bed of the shallow river and were cruelly torn and bruised, but no bones were broken. Before they had struck the rocks, however, the train had thundered by. All are now out of danger.

Mrs. Brotherton was asked how she managed to think and act so quickly, and said: "I don't know. It was just instinct, I suppose, as there was no time to think. [illegible] taking a short cut which led over the trestle that crosses the river close to the Dyer [illegible] of the passenger train that is due at Merino at [illegible] flashed in our faces, almost blinding us so close was it.

"I had my boy's hand, but grasped him firmly in my arms and leaped into the river in order to save our lives, calling on my husband and Mrs. Mitchell to follow. You see me here now, and I do not believe you would have seen any of us alive if we had not jumped immediately."

POLICE STATION WORCESTER'S NEED.

Mayor Blodget's Inaugural Is Strongly in Favor of New Headquarters to Supplant the Present Old Building

ASKS 6 YEARS' TERM FOR LICENSE BOARD

Special to the Sunday American.

Worcester, Jan. 7.—Mayor Blodget's inaugural has stirred a deal of comment. He suggested that two members of the License Commission be appointed for six year term, the third to be appointed annually. He thinks this will dispose of a yearly nuisance for each incoming Mayor. The appointment of the license board is the hardest task on the Mayor's calendar.

Opinion is divided regarding the feasibility of Mayor Blodget's suggestion. Some consider it an ideal scheme and something that will greatly assist the general welfare of the city, while others believe six years is too long a term to grant two men with such power as the License Commissioners have. The liquor dealers, almost to a man, are opposed to the plan.

Another thing in Mayor Blodget's inaugural address which is of interest is the suggestion that a new central police station be built. This is something that Worcester has needed for years. The present police headquarters are a disgrace to the city, and since being appointed to the [illegible] Chief W. [illegible] has tried persistently to get a new building.

Station 1, which is headquarters, containing also the Central District Court, was used by the militia as an armory until it was condemned as unsafe. When the new State Armory was erected on Salisbury street, the building was turned over to the police. There are only nineteen cells, foul smelling and with no ventilation.

At the first meeting of the City Government Alderman Theodore H. Day was elected President of the Board of Aldermen and Daniel F. Denny of the Common Council. Day's election was brought about by clever politics, in which the Democratic members played prominent parts.

The scene in the Common Council chamber after President Denny had read his list of committees has never been duplicated in Worcester. Republican members of the board went up in arms and accused Denny of being a rank partisan. Councilman Willie E. Higgins accused Denny of being false to his promises. Things became so warm that the newly elected president was forced to flee.

At the meeting of the school committee several members expressed themselves freely. Mayor Walter H. Blodget was handled without gloves for not attending to the sanitary condition of the schools. [illegible] If it is decided to close the school nearly 500 students will be affected.

According to appropriation estimates filed with City Auditor John B. Bowker, the heads of the different municipal departments ask for $2,007,970.51.

The appropriations last year reached $1,523,150, the amount of the available tax levy. As there is to be no large increase in the amount available this year, the new appropriations will be subjected to the pruning knife, in the hands of Mayor Blodget.

City Treasurer F. W. White has received the first payment of the excise tax imposed by the new law on merchants who give trading stamps, coupons or anything in the [illegible] to pay a tax of three per cent on the amount of goods with which the stamps are given. Nearly one hundred merchants have made their returns, the payments being from $2.65 to $300.

There is some misunderstanding among the merchants, some considering that the returns should be made of sales beginning December 1, when the law went into effect, while others believe that the returns date from July of the past year. City Solicitor A. P. Rugg understands that the law calls for the sales from July 1.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

MISS MARIAN H. LADD TO BE "JACK" HALLOWELL'S BRIDE

MISS MARION H. LADD.

Bride-to-Be of "Jack" Hallowell, Former Famous Harvard Athlete.

The engagement, just announced, of Miss Marian H. Ladd and John W. Hallowell again brings into prominence "Jack" Hallowell, who was one of Harvard's best known athletes. The announcement comes from Miss Ladd's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Ladd, No. 100 Marlboro street, and is the cause of numberless congratulations.

Miss Ladd is an only daughter. She has a brother, Alden E. Ladd, a Harvard 1902 man. She is one of the most popular girls in Boston society. She is a tall, striking blonde. She is an expert horsewoman, a clever tennis player, a golf [illegible] part in all the sports of the Country Club.

Young Mr. Hallowell is a son of Norwood Penrose Hallowell, president of the National Bank of Commerce. He was captain of his freshman football team and played on the varsity eleven in '98, '99 and 1900. He was also a member of the varsity track team during his four years in college and served as captain his last year. He ran the 120-yard hurdles in the games with Oxford in Cambridge, England. # TO HEAR CHARGES AGAINST SANTA FE

Washington, Jan. 7.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has wired President Ripley, of the Santa Fe Railway, that, in accordance with his request, the commission will take additional testimony in the case involving charges of secret rebates by the Santa Fe to the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, in Chicago, on Friday or Saturday of next week.

The commission has no official knowledge that Secretary of the Navy Morton, former vice-president of the Santa Fe, desires to testify, but he will be heard if he wishes it.

drowned. Others of the crew were rescued in an exhausted condition. Owen Lombard, a railroad employe, blinded by snow while walking on the Fitchburg tracks in East Cambridge, was run down by a locomotive and killed.

SHIPS ARE IN PERIL IN BIG GALE AT SEA

Mate Frank Treen of the schooner Lizzie Carr, of Thomaston, Me., bound from Calais to New York, was the only man lost when the vessel went ashore on Sunken Ledge, off Wallis sands, near Portsmouth, N. H. Had he stuck to the ship until a surf boat manned by life savers arrived he would have been saved with Captain Fred Merchant and five others of the crew.

The vessel refused aid from a tugboat on Friday, the captain saying he had good anchors, but began to drag anchors yesterday. Life savers were watching from the shore, and when the vessel struck, a surf boat manned by a picked crew of the [illegible] Jaffrey Point, Wallis Sands and Rye Beach life-saving stations [illegible] after a vain attempt [illegible] the shipwrecked men with a breeches buoy.

The [illegible] Theodore Roosevelt [illegible] the crew of the [illegible] which was [illegible] of a terrible [illegible] about 160 miles east of Thacher Island. The Ohio was [illegible] laden [illegible] from Kingsport, N. S., for New York. Her cargo shifted during the gale, was swept the deck, smashing the [illegible] The crew [illegible] Captain Wry's [illegible] of [illegible] of Captain James W[illegible] of the Roosevelt, while her husband and his crew are in a hospital. Several of the sailors were badly injured when the cargo shifted.

When the fishermen sighted the Ohio they launched dories and braved a terrible sea to reach the disabled craft.

They not only saved the Ohio's crew, but after putting the sailors and Captain Wry and wife aboard the Roosevelt returned to the brigantine and took her safely into Gloucester. Salvage money will net each a large sum.

The three-masted schooner A. P. Emerson, of New York, bound for Wickford, R. I., is ashore off Bonnet Point, in that State. Her anchors dragged under the strain of floating ice and the gale. Captain Maxwell [illegible] and says his vessel is resting easily. He will lighter his schooner and get her afloat as soon as the weather permits.

A four-masted schooner was in danger in the tremendous sea off Price's Neck Life-Saving Station, Rhode Island, but managed to reach a safe anchorage.

The Fall River liner Pilgrim, from New York, found [illegible] tremendous sea running in Long Island Sound that no attempt was made to pass Bartlett Point [illegible] She put into New London Harbor and her 300 passengers were sent to Fall River, Boston and other points east on a special train.

SHIPS ARE IN PERIL IN BIG GALE; RESCUES

Inland towns and cities suffered greatly from the storm. Not only were streets rendered [illegible] by sleet and [illegible] damage to many buildings. Factories had to run short handed or shut down entirely because operatives could not reach them. In some places the water in the streets was so high that they were [illegible] small rivers.

At [illegible] the Sudbury river overflowed its banks and several [illegible] buildings were swept away; in [illegible] the hurricane blew down signs and tore slates from house roofs. Trees were blown down at North Andover, blocking a Boston & Maine railroad track, and in Lawrence business was practically at a standstill because of the storm. Reports of damage to property and interference with trade also come from Haverhill, Lynn, Middleboro, Leominster and other places. In Gloucester people were awakened by the gale rocking their homes. Two church steeples were damaged.

At Portland, Me., it is termed the worst storm ever known there. Only the ice [illegible] saved the docks. Waves broke over the wharves and buried the great granite breakwater. All through Maine the blast wrought havoc. Wire communication was difficult and many trains belated. The snow fall was heavy. The same condition prevailed in New Hampshire, according to all reports.

In Connecticut all streams were at the flood point, and tracks were overflowed and trains stalled.

In Providence, Newport and all through Rhode Island weather conditions were as bad as around Boston.

But two steamships entered Boston harbor and four European bound craft left it. The gale blew here at a velocity of forty miles an hour and the ferry boat Gov. Hancock on one trip from East Boston was blown so far off her course that she had to sound a distress signal. A tug towed her to her Boston slip. She was three-quarters of an hour in making this trip.

Spirit of Confidence Has Yet to Recover from Shock of De[illegible] Doubt [illegible] Prevails

The stock market remains in the hands of the smaller professionals and the movement of prices has become dependent upon the momentary whims of the smaller pools and cliques. So far as the public has been concerned, they have been reluctant to participate in the daily routine of speculation ever [illegible] December. The larger interests remain notably inactive, but it is a question whether [illegible] adopted because it is felt that the time is hazardous for large operations or because the favorable features outlined for the future were sufficiently discounted by the rise in prices [illegible]

There is less apprehension at the moment than existed one week ago, yet there is an undercurrent of doubt and a feeling of uncertainty that is fatal to the serenity of mind of the general body of stock market traders.

Cleaning Wall Street Stables.

The scandal in flotation of curb stocks which is agitating the underworld of Wall Street threatens to alarm the investing public as much as the Lawson episode. High finance has had its baptism of limelight, and it is not likely that the public will be led into any more traps through circulars O. K.'d by bankers.

But a new and more insidious danger has been pointed out. Investors finally realize that the fulsome praises bestowed on many stocks are paid for at so much a line, even though printed in the news columns. The country is on [illegible] situation is sound. High finance will try to be good for a few years to win back the respect of the public. All that Wall Street needs now is a cleaning out of the stables. So desperate are some of the stableboys, that when one appears with clean hands there is a [illegible] and cry that being without stain he must be without knowledge.

[illegible] financial [illegible]

Just as the great majority of bankers are honorable, so are the great majority of financial writers. But there are others so deep in the betrayal of their duty that they dare not touch a lighted match to dry flax of fact without hoping to escape unseen in the smoke. It is fortunate that the Lawson [illegible] brought before the public at the same time. The field will be cleared for honest prices in an honest market, honestly reported. London has had its fumigation several years ago and is all the better for it.

[illegible] very likely some time during the present year. The fulfillment of plans will depend very largely upon the final adjudication of the Northern Securities matter.

The output of the Dominion Coal Company for 1904 [illegible] 3,078,000 tons, [illegible] 1903, and with 3,100,700 tons during 1902.

The opposition of New England stockholders of the Atchison to the proposed is[illegible] improvement bonds has not as yet made much headway.

State Street had the "tip" yesterday that the directors of the United States Cast Iron Pipe Company will meet this week and increase the dividend rate on the preferred stock from 5 to 7 per cent.

Aggregate earnings of thirty-two roads for the fourth week of December increased $101,856. Clearing house exchanges of the country increased 15.8 per cent for the past week.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every Spring and Fall.

It was the universal Spring and Fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintainig bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver and excretory organs, and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every Spring and Fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers" will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

Lawson Answered.

On January 19th Public Opinion will print the first of a series of important articles on Mr. Lawson and his "Frenzied Finance."

These articles, twelve in number, will be the work of a well-known financial writer, who knows his subject thoroughly, who can write with vigor and clearness, and who is accustomed to call things by their right names. Mr. Lawson will be shown [illegible] The career of this skillful stock-juggler will be traced for twenty-five years through all its devious routes, until the present time, when he is busy in his self-appointed job as gratuitous financial adviser to the American people and general stock-market prophet.

It will be shown what the real motive is behind "Frenzied Finance," [illegible] will be printed some absorbingly interesting facts about Mr. Lawson's past and present that he probably would not care to write himself, or have the public read at this time, when he is posing as a financial Moses.

The series of articles that we are going to publish is not written in defense of Wall Street, or its methods, or in defense of any institution or person. It is based upon the right of the American people to know both sides of every public question. There is some truth beneath Mr. Lawson's towering structure of imagination—but it is hidden by an avalanche of reckless and misleading statements. Public Opinion has no enmity against Mr. Lawson personally. It has arranged for these articles simply in the interest of truth and fair play.

The Truth About "Frenzied Finance."

It has been estimated that Mr. Lawson's attacks upon [illegible] institutions have had the immediate effect of depreciating securities to the amount of several hundreds of millions of dollars, with the more remote tendency to destroy confidence in the commercial integrity of the nation—a baneful influence extending to the smallest country bank and the most secluded hamlet. Have these attacks been justified by facts? That question [illegible] answered.

"Frenzied Finance" was written for a purpose, but a very different purpose from the high-sounding one proclaimed by Mr. Lawson.

Public Opinion.

Public Opinion has no connection in any manner, shape or form with any person or institution attacked by Mr. Lawson in his story of "Frenzied Finance." Public Opinion is a weekly magazine, established for eighteen years, and devoted to current events of vital importance. Its traditional policy is to give both sides of every question. In analyzing Mr. Lawson's story the essential features of his side of the case will be presented.

The first chapter of this series of articles will appear in the issue of January 19th. The name of the author will be printed at the head of this article. There will be eleven additional articles—one each week.

GENERAL NELSON A. MILES
Tells of Russia's Loss in
PORT ARTHUR'S SURRENDER

Allows Union of Japanese Naval Forces, and of Besieging Armies in Manchuria.

Stoessel Is Immortalized By His Remarkable Defence

BY NELSON A. MILES,
Lieutenant-General, U. S. A., Retired.

'Mid the severities of a New England Winter, where all nature is wrapped in its frozen garb, we receive the information from the antipodes of the fall of Port Arthur.

When I visited that stronghold two years ago last month I regarded it as one of the strongest military positions that I had ever seen—a close land-locked harbor, surrounded by high bluffs and hills, admirably adapted to defence, but, at that time, inadequately fortified. It is such a position, however, as would require a very large garrison or body of men to hold it successfully.

In sailing out of the harbor we immediately encountered one of the most tempestuous seas that we found during the whole of our journey around the globe, and this, I was informed, was not unusual. Not only the severity of the winds and the continuous action of the billows, but the severity of the climate subjected every one exposed to it to great hardship and suffering, and on such a sea and such a cheerless spot of earth [illegible] of the greatest tragedies in all the annals of [illegible] history.

Some other sieges, like Troy, Jerusalem, Rhodes, Constantinople, Gibraltar, Sebastopol, Vicksburg, Metz and Paris, have consumed as much time, or some have involved larger armies, but none has been comparable in the destruction of life or the ferocity of attack and defence. Men armed with bows and arrows, spears and battering rams had but mere toys compared with the modern destructive engines of war. Nearly a year ago that port was blockaded, and a bombardment from the fleet has been continued up to the present time. From the landing of the Japanese army and the commencement of the siege from the land side two hundred and thirty [illegible] days ago, there has been a scientific siege conducted by General Nogi, in which he and his army have encountered and overcome every obstacle used in modern warfare and have been finally crowned with success.

Stoessel's Name Immortalized.

The difficulties of not only meeting the destructive fire from the Russian lines but being constantly prepared to meet counter-assaults and sorties from the besieged garrison, have required the utmost vigilance and skill in the disposition of his besieging army. The difficulty of moving up siege guns and planting mortar batteries, as well as the skilful engineering in running trenches and planting mines under the different outposts and principal forts, has occupied months of most difficult engineering and military skill in execution.

While this incessant attack has been made from a powerful army on land, the fleet has [illegible] its bombardments to harass and destroy the defending forces. Yet, notwithstanding the assaults from the land and sea forces, the Russian garrison, under its lion-hearted leader and commander, General Stoessel, has maintained a defence that will ever immortalize his name and crown his brave command with imperishable military fame. No one except those who have been under those conditions or that kind of fire can realize the strain upon one's nerve and fortitude.

In a single encounter or a battle lasting a few hours, the results are quickly decided, yet in a siege when there is no hour of the day or night when troops [illegible] to be called upon for immediate service or subjected to [illegible] of the enemy, the effect is most exhausting and [illegible] all [illegible] horrors of war. Not only [illegible] garrison [illegible] but he has [illegible] skilful [illegible] against an overwhelming army as to [illegible]. His tenacity and courage [illegible] never [illegible] human endurance seems also to have been almost inexhaustible. A most remarkable feature of the siege is that he has been able to husband his supply of food and ammunition to enable that large command to maintain itself while surrounded by lines of hostile guns. [illegible] that for many weeks the garrison subsisted on short rations and inadequate food, that their ammunition was so much reduced that many of the assaults were repelled with the bayonet, and it appears that the long struggle terminated only when food and ammunition were practically exhausted.

Japanese Soldiers of Highest Efficiency.

The result appears to have been the loss of that portion of the Russian fleet in Russia's most important port on the Pacific and one of the two strongholds of the Russian Empire on that coast. She has lost something like twenty-five thousand men and one of the ablest military commanders that has ever worn her uniform. Japan has lost six ships of her fleet, and, according to the reports, an estimated loss of from sixty thousand to one hundred thousand men. The losses in killed, wounded and missing at each of the battles of Waterloo and Gettysburg were less than fifty thousand [illegible].

It has been demonstrated that the troops of the Island Kingdom are of the first order in organization, efficiency and modern armament and equipment, and that their devotion and sacrifice has but few parallels in the annals of military history. The troops of the Russian Empire have fully maintained their former reputation in military prowess. The effect, however, is not decisive. Port Arthur was doomed when the Japanese army landed in the Yalu Valley, and had the Japanese army occupied a position near Dalny or on any strategic position on the peninsula Port Arthur would have been compelled to surrender when its supplies of food were exhausted without the loss of one thousand men. The siege, however, would have required the same rigid blockade that has been maintained on the part of the fleet. Still there would have been less military glory. But one hundred thousand more young men would be living. Russia has lost a brave body of troops. Japan will now be enabled to move that portion of its fleet to join the opposing forces that will soon encounter the formidable Baltic fleet, and her besieging army will now be enabled to join the forces in Manchuria.

The indications now are that there will be overtures looking to a peaceful solution of the problem, or that the other powers of Europe will soon become involved.

RUSSIANS BOMBARD JAPS AT SAKHE

London, Jan. 7.—The heaviest artillery fire since the Sakhe river fight, was opened by the Russians yesterday against the Japanese lines.

The Russians in celebrating their Christmas Eve began a heavy rifle fire at 10 o'clock (January 6) opposite Linshinpu. Their artillery joined in at 11 o'clock and kept up two hours of the hardest firing known since the Sakhe River was reached, spreading along the whole front of General Oku's army. The Japanese sustained no damage, and refused to reply. They simply moved into the trenches, preparing to repulse an expected attack, which was not attempted. There were no casualties among the Japanese troops.

Field Marshal Oyama has sent a letter to General Kuropatkin, communicating the news of the capitulation of Port Arthur and praising the bravery of its defenders. The effect of the news was especially [illegible] following last reports [illegible]. It is believed [illegible] immediately [illegible] the situation on the Sakhe River. # FUSE EXPLODES; NEW YORK TRAVEL STOPS

New York, Jan. 7.—With every car choked with passengers from platform to platform, every train on every elevated line in New York city stopped running at 5 o'clock this evening, and before ten minutes were passed a number of the typical rush stations had become so crowded with men and women who were refused tickets that several police [illegible] sent out their reserves in order to make sure that no riots would develop.

The blockade lasted the better part of an hour. It was caused by the blowing out of a fuse in the main power house at Seventy-fourth street and the East River, which in turn caused an explosion and a blaze.

Many small riots occurred at the stations and several minor accidents occurred. The congestion lasted two hours.

Archibald G. Loomis, the second vice-president of the bank, is alleged to be the head of the copper syndicate. This syndicate, by "wash" sales through Munroe & Munroe, it is said, deliberately started to run the price of 700,000 shares of copper from $1 to $3 a share in order to unload it on the public and gather in $3,500,000 gross profit.

Wash sales are fake sales. To carry [illegible] the Standard Oil Bank furnished $80,000 each day on an unsecured note. Three days before the Munroe Bros. failed President James Stillman, of the bank, learned of the transactions, by his own admission, yet the loan was made as usual on each of three days.

There was a report to-day that Archibald G. Loomis might resign as the bank's second vice-president. No confirmation of this report could be had. Mr. Loomis had a long conference with James Stillman, president of the bank, yesterday.

Fanned by the wind, the curtain swayed back and forth, now showing, now hiding the light. The wall is painted red. Under the action of the wind the fanning back and forth of the curtain reproduced a succession of flashes that gave a perfect illusion of fire.

Evidence That Mill Men Are Holding Out to Make "Open Shop" Supreme

Decrease in Price of Cotton Knocks Out Chief Argument Advanced When Wages Were Cut.

The great textile strike at Fall River takes on a sinister meaning in the light of the statement made to-day to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN by one of the highest officials of the United Textile Workers of America.

If the evidence he has secured is to be believed, the struggle in the Massachusetts Spindle City is something more than a desperate fight over living wages between 25,000 cotton operatives and a half-hundred or more [illegible].

[illegible] tremendous as it has been and is, is nothing in importance [illegible] Secretary Hibbert of the [illegible] Workers has been informed [illegible] of the conflict.

[illegible] showing that the contention of the manufacturers at the beginning of the strike, that the reduction in wages was due to the condition of the [illegible] was true, there is still [illegible] the mills not being opened [illegible] at the old wages [illegible] in the past [illegible] that it is [illegible] the simple "rule of three" that the prices of cotton and of cloth have [illegible] sufficiently to pay five-eighths of all the wages of the strikers in Fall River.

There must be a different reason, says [illegible], for failure to reopen the mills. The evidence in the hands of [illegible] officers of the United Textile Workers of America suggests a most [illegible]. It is this:

That the fight is [illegible] "open shop" and trades unionism in America.

"Parryism" Behind Mill Men.

Mr. Hibert has in his possession documentary evidence to prove that at least seven manufacturers in [illegible] are members of one of the Parry associations, recognized as [illegible] organizations, with their object the death of organized labor.

One of the manufacturers named has replied to the evidence that he is a member of an association of which Mr. Parry was formerly president, but that the Indianapolis carriage manufacturer, who is recognized as the most bitter enemy of organized labor in the United States, is not now president of it. Further than this he refuses to [illegible].

It is current [illegible] Fall River that the manufacturers are a party to some agreement [illegible] the National Association of Manufacturers or the [illegible] Association of America, the two societies of which David MacLean Parry has been or is the guiding spirit, by which strikes shall be fought until the manufacturers win and labor unionism is crushed.

"Death to Organized Labor."

"Death to organized labor" is the [illegible] Samuel Gompers calls "Parryism." [illegible] victory over the great United Textile Workers of America would [illegible] and fight bitterly other [illegible] of the country, with a possibility, because of its organ[illegible], of [illegible] the dealing of a death blow to the [illegible].

If this accusation against the manufacturers of Fall River can be proven, it will mean a fight in which the forces of capital and labor in the whole country will array themselves.

It is believed that it is to meet this contingency that the Fall River strikers are to ask the trades unionists of Great Britain to send financial aid at once to this country.

The motto of the strikers is to-day as it was on the first day of the strike: "We may [illegible], but we'll never give up."

Berlin, Jan. 7.—Is the Kaiser turning Socialist? is a question which many of those personally acquainted with Germany's ruler have been asking themselves of late.

We Offer $1,000

For a Disease Germ That Liquozone Can't Kill

On every bottle of Liquozone we offer $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. We do this to assure you that Liquozone does kill germs.

And it is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact which gives Liquozone its worth to humanity, a worth so great that, after testing the product for two years through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights. And we have spent over one million dollars, in one year, to buy the first bottle and give it free to each sick one who would try it.

Acts Like Oxygen

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there any alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is an absolutely certain germicide. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

Liquozone goes into the stomach, into the bowels and into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. No germ can escape it and none can resist it. The results are inevitable, for a germ disease must end when the germs are killed. Then Liquozone, acting as a wonderful tonic, quickly restores a condition of perfect health. Diseases which have resisted medicine for years yield at once to Liquozone, and it cures diseases which medicine never cure. Half the people you meet—wherever you are—can tell you of cures that were made by it.

Germ Diseases

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

To Hire No More Girls.

It is a misfortune to a large number of working girls that Singer's Manufacturing Company at Clydebank have decided to employ no more. The managers have given as their reason that [illegible] girls are being constantly taken from them.

"No sooner is a girl, after [illegible] training, made efficient for her special work," they say, "than some Clydebank or Glasgow young man bears her off, and the training process has to be commenced anew."

There is, no doubt, a considerable amount of truth in this statement, and it is at the bottom of much of the underpayment of young women. Whereas a man can continue his vocation after marriage, many a woman cannot, and consequently the training given to her is lost. This disability must be taken into account when we deal with the employment of girls and must always to some extent account for the poorer wages received by women.

Famous Author's New Drama of "Peter Pan" Advertised by the Clever Drawing of an Artist's Little Son of Seven

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, Jan 7.—J. M. Barrie's new play, "Peter Pan," which is about a boy who wouldn't grow up, is playing to good business at the Duke of York's Theatre.

The billboards of London are placarded with huge lithographed posters advertising the play. The poster was personally chosen by Mr. Barrie. It is the work of a boy of seven, [illegible] son of William Nicholson, the artist. When Mr. Barrie saw the poster which Mr. Nicholson showed him [illegible] he was so struck with it that he [illegible] it was just the thing to advertise [illegible] about a boy. Accordingly, the [illegible] drawing was enlarged and done into [illegible]

It probably is the first time in the history of the theatre that an important play by a famous dramatist was advertised by a poster from the pen of a boy of seven.

$50,000,000 SPENT EACH YEAR ON GOLF

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, Jan. 7.—Acording to the year's statistics of the game of golf, it appears that no less than $50,000,000 is yearly spent on the invigorating pursuit. To begin with, there are 879 golf clubs in England, 769 in the United States, 632 in Scotland, 134 in Ireland, 43 in Wales and 268 in different parts of the Continent.

There are, all told, probably no fewer than 8,000 organizations devoted to golf playing. These clubs, counting their grounds, buildings and preliminary expenses, represent a permanent investment of $40,000,000 or $50,000,000, and comparatively few of them can be run at a yearly expense of less than $5,000. The average membership is about 200, or a total of 1,600,000 members.

Two Sensational Explanations, Each Involving Domestic Scandal, of French Deputy's Death.

BY MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Paris, Jan. 7.—You can take my word for it that M. Syveton, the politician who struck General Andre, Minister of War, during a sitting of the Chamber, was driven to suicide. It was the examining magistrate, M. Bertulus, who virtually condemned Syveton to suicide, giving him the choice of "disappearing," either by flight or death, as the only means of escaping from a shameful arrest.

The dead man was on the eve of a striking political triumph; the Assize Court before which he was to appear for having struck Andre would certainly have acquitted him—to the great embarrassment of M. [illegible] What then [illegible] M. Bertulus [illegible] [illegible] Syveton [illegible] and said [illegible] to-morrow [illegible] has been made against you [illegible] arrested in open court as soon as the jury has acquitted you for having struck Andre."

Now, as a matter of fact, no charge (save, of course, [illegible] against Syveton. [illegible] created "bluff" on the part of the magistrate. The victim, however, was caught in the meshes, he unhappily knew that this disgraceful charge was possible. But being a man naturally proud of his courage he did not wish to have the appearance of running way from a condemnation which, despite appearances, might have been pronounced. He preferred suicide.

And that is all there is to this famous mystery. The moral responsibility for the suicide must rest with the magistrate, who has certainly shown an excessive zeal for the government of which he is a servant.

"POISON BAND" OF WOMEN BLAMED FOR DEATH OF SYVETON

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Paris, Jan. [illegible] a sensation in [illegible] been excelled since the [illegible] The Circle of Ten [illegible] is given to this terrible organization. Rumor of its existence started soon after the death of Gabriel Syveton, the Nationalist deputy who was found apparently suffocated by charcoal fumes. Mme. Syveton told the press and police her husband took his own life from fear of exposure of alleged scandalous domestic conduct. His death occurred on the eve of his trial for slapping the face of M. Andre, Minister of War, during a heated debate in the Chamber of Deputies.

Accused Dead Husband.

The Syveton family consisted of Gabriel Syveton, Mme. Syveton, formerly the widow of M. de Bruyn, an Antwerp merchant; her daughter Mme. Menard and her son-in-law, M. Menard. Mme. Syveton has accused the dead deputy of wrecking the happiness of [illegible]

The Republicans [illegible] had embezzled funds of the League of Patriots, of which he was treasurer, and so killed himself on the eve of the trial, fearing exposure of financial misconduct. The Nationalists said he was murdered by Republican conspirators.

But all this political storm has subsided in face of the present talk that Syveton was the victim of a plot more outrageous even than political intrigue. It is asked in clubs, along the boulevards and in the salons: "Is it true that he was a victim of this Circle of Ten?"

Mme. Syveton Accused.

Le Matin has published what it calls the past of Mme. Syveton, the widow. It identifies her with a circle of ten women, wives of rich men, who have all been suspected, and mostly all [illegible] of husband [illegible]

Paris, Jan. 7.—A most interesting letter by the famed Field Marshal Blucher has been discovered in the private archives of a noble Polish family here. The letter is dated from Compiegne, June 17, 1815, and addressed to Blucher's wife.

"Here I am sitting in the room where Marie Louise celebrated her wedding night," writes the general. "There can be nothing more beautiful and pleasant to behold. Too bad I must be off to-morrow, for I am due at Paris within three days. I still hope to catch Bonaparte, and will surely hang the scoundrel to the nearest tree, with weights on his boots.'

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE

To those who gave me their support in the last Presidential election I hereby return my heartfelt thanks. They could not have been actuated by any motive other than the desire to vote their honest conviction.

Those who cast their ballots for me were brave enough to stand with the minority, and conscientious enough to think that a ballot is prostituted which does violence to one's sense of right.

The campaign of 1904 was but a prelude to the campaign of 1908. The start had to be made, and it seemed to me a vital necessity to start at the time when both the old parties were openly pledged to Plutocracy and Class Legislation. The Republicans stood pat for every evil of the present system which builds colossal fortunes upon the false basis of Special Privilege. The Democrats, led by place-hunters and time-servers ravenous for the spoils of office, shamelessly abandoned every democratic principle and transferred their standard to the hands of the gambler, the monopolist and the Wall Street corporation.

At such a time, when both the old parties were down on their knees to the pampered beneficiaries of Class Legislation, it seemed a high duty that someone should preach the gospel of "Equal rights to all."

As well as I could I made the fight for Jeffersonian principles. All things considered, the support I received was encouraging. Therefore, I am resolved to devote the next four years to a campaign of education, in which all governmental questions will be discussed and the citizen brought to realize how ruinous to the masses are the present tendencies of Municipal, State and National legislation.

By law, one man's business has been fostered at the expense of another's; by law, one class has been given special privileges not enjoyed by others; by law, certain forms of wealth have been entirely exempted from national taxation, to the vast injury of the non-exempt; by law, the artificial persons called corporations have been clothed with powers, immunities and privileges not exercised by individuals; by law, the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer and more enslaved. Thus the enormous forces of law and government [illegible] to concentrate wealth, power and opportunity in the hands of a few.

Already one per cent. of our population own more than the other ninety-nine per cent. combined. Already you can count upon [illegible] hand the trusts that annually absorb more than one-half of the entire increase in wealth. Already you can name four railroad kings who, by agreement among themselves, can levy heavier taxes upon the people of this country than Congress itself can impose; the Trust invades every market, dictates where you buy and where you sell; fixes the price when you sell, and fixes it when you buy. You are nothing; the law is nothing; the Trust is all in all.

Meanwhile, the expenses of government grow larger and larger; the cost of living mounts higher and higher; the ragged legions of poverty multiply day by day; the rich swagger more and more with offensive bluster and display, and the storm-cloud of class-hatred blackens the future as never before. Nine-tenths of the sufferings of our people are due to bad laws and bad government. The situation has become so desperately intolerable that we are nearer the danger-line than we ourselves know.

It is my purpose to discuss all economic and governmental questions, to point out abuses and advocate practical remedies.

I believe that equal and exact justice between man and man should be the object of law. I believe that special privileges can never be granted to one class without gross injustice to others.

Instead of the Hamiltonian theory of the Divine Right of the Few to govern and monopolize, I believe, as Jefferson and Lincoln did, in the rule of all for the benefit of all.

I invoke the co-operation of all who believe, as I do, that present conditions are wrong; that they can be and must be improved. I wish this magazine to penetrate every city, town, village and country precinct with my monthly message. If you are in sympathy with me, lend your aid, not only by promptly forwarding your own subscription, but by going among your neighbors and enlisting their support.

The political purpose which is herein proclaimed is but one feature of this new magazine; it will interest every member of the family with reading matter that will appeal to and benefit all.

The first number will be issued in February. Subscription one dollar per year. Send it in at once. I want my friends first, and with their aid we will have no lack of converts to our cause. To The Sick A Dollar's Worth Free

You deposit nothing. You risk nothing. You promise nothing. There is nothing to pay either now or later. I want everyone, everywhere, who has not used my remedy to make this test.

For mine is no ordinary remedy. It represents thirty years of experiment—thirty years at bedsides—in laboratories—at hospitals. Thirty years of the richest experience a physician can have. I tell below wherein Dr. Shoop's Restorative differs, radically, from other medicines.

My offer is as broad as humanity itself. For sickness knows no distinction in its ravages. And the restless patient on a downy couch is no more welcome than the wasting sufferer who frets through the lagging hours in a dismal hovel.

I want no reference—no security. The poor have the same opportunity as the rich. To one and all I say, "Merely write and ask." Simply say that you have never tried my remedy—for I must limit my offer to strangers—those who have used Dr. Shoop's Restorative need no additional evidence of its worth. I will send you an order on your druggist. He will give you free, the full dollar package.

Inside Nerves!

[illegible] strip medicine of its MYSTERY. For most all forms of sickness start in the same way. The nerves are weak. Not the nerves that govern your movements and your thoughts.

But the nerves [illegible] control [illegible] your kidneys.

These are the nerves that wear out and break down.

It does no good to treat the ailing organ—the irregular heart—the disordered liver—the rebellious stomach—the deranged kidneys. They are not to blame. But go back to the nerves that control them. There you will find the seat of the trouble.

There is nothing new about this—nothing any physician would dispute. But it remained for Dr. Shoop to apply this knowledge—to put it to practical use. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is the result of a quarter century of endeavor along this very line. It does not dose the organ or deaden the pain—but it does go at once to the nerve—the inside nerve—the power nerve—and builds it up, and strengthens it and makes it well.

Simply Write Me

I do not ask [illegible] a single statement of mine—I do not ask you to believe a word I say until you have tried my medicine in your own home at my expense absolutely.

The offer is open to everyone, everywhere, who has not tried my remedy.

[illegible] ME for the free dollar bottle order [illegible] your dollar laid before him. I am risking my business—my life work—my reputation. I am depending on your own honest opinion after your own test in your own home. I cannot profit unless my medicine succeeds. Could I afford this if I were not sure? Write for the order to-day. The offer may not remain open. I will send you the book you ask for beside. It is free. It will help you to understand your case. What more can I do to convince you of my interest—of my sincerity?

NEIL AND MURPHY BOUT THIS MONTH'S FEATURE

Little Fellows to Go Twenty Rounds Before the San Francisco Athletic Club.

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

San Francisco, Jan. 7.—As near as can be judged at this writing the main event in pugilism this month will be a twenty-round contest between Frankie Neil, the San Francisco bantam, and Tommy Murphy, the Eastern manikin. The match was decided upon by the San Francisco Athletic Club after others had been considered and abandoned.

The affair the San Francisco people would have liked to have presented to its patrons above all others was a Young Corbett-Battling Nelson bout. Neither of the pugilists cared to sign, however. Nelson is grumpy because there is no immediate prospect of a return battle with Jimmy Britt and will not talk shop to anyone for another month. Corbett feels that his only chance of redemption lies in a strict physical culture course of at least seven weeks duration, and he has signified that his date book is closed until February.

Bout Should Draw Well.

As a rule contests between little men are not the best of drawing cards in this [illegible], but now that good boxing [illegible] is [illegible] scarce it is highly probable that the public will warm up to the Neil-Murphy go.

One thing in its favor is that the little fellows are considered to be on a par so far as fighting ability is concerned. [illegible] Murphy [illegible] the better, and it isn't supposed that he will [illegible] Whichever way it goes the [illegible] for a bantam battle as the [illegible] event of 1905.

Is Jimmy Gardner just a wee bit timid about exchanging upper jabs with the [illegible] specialist Joe Gans? If he is not it must be said that circumstances have conspired to place him in a rather unfavorable light in the particular example referred to.

Some time ago Gans and Gardner were all signed up and the negro came on to San Francisco and began training. Gardner sent word that he would be along just as soon as he [illegible] Gardner [illegible] Gans [illegible] San Francisco [illegible]

"Boy Manager" Out.

Battling Nelson and Teddy Murphy, [illegible] "boy manager," have parted company for good. It is felt that [illegible] Dane made up his mind to [illegible] from the friend of his [illegible] Murphy was intercepted from his [illegible] trip to Chicago and brought back to San Francisco to render an account of his stewardship. People hereabouts were inclined to credit the descendant of the Vikings with a lack of business ideas, but he was shrewd enough to conceal his intentions in regard to a separation until he had received a full and ample settlement from Murphy. Then he told the boy manager he was going boating and wouldn't need a guiding hand for an indefinite period.

Murphy now says "Bat" is an ingrate. He tells how he stuck to the Dane through thick and thin and shared hard knocks with him in the years when a dollar looked as big as a Christmas wreath to the travel-stained, ragged, [illegible]

Murphy's Cmplaints.

"Now I've landed him at the top of the ladder and someone else will grab him," says Murphy, and in saying it he seems to infer somehow that it was [illegible] more than Nelson's [illegible] that boosted the Dane [illegible] pre-eminence in the world of fists.

This is wrong surely. It is [illegible] that the boy manager should be [illegible] at the turn affairs have taken, but unless he can show that he was the Dane's private boxing tutor and that [illegible] to teaching Nelson how to [illegible] him through a course of [illegible] made him as tough as whalebone, it will be a difficult thing for him to prove that he had much to do with [illegible] success.

TECH FENCERS TO HAVE BUSY SEASON

Will Compete in Triangular Meet with Harvard and Pennsylvania.

The Tech fencing team, which was refused admission to the Intercollegiate Association in December, has arranged one of the hardest schedules of bouts for the season of any college, the idea in this being to show that, although not admitted to the association, Tech can cope with all its members. Annapolis alone has refused to meet Tech, all the other colleges being willing [illegible] bouts.

Fencing is one of the most successful athletic events in the Institute of Technology, and last year's team attracted much attention by defeating Harvard, Yale and Holy Cross in the [illegible]. Captain Jorge Lage, with his aggregation of crack fencers, forms a most formidable combination.

Besides Jorge Lage, who is an expert fencer, there is Mr. Leh, [illegible] noted for his perfect poise and skill, and Mr. Henry, who was the intercollegiate champion in 1902. Mr. Henry is one of the best foils [illegible] with only a few exceptions, and his fencing has attracted the attention of everyone. Boothman is also another crack fencer of Tech, as is also Gatewood. These men are all veterans with the foils, and should make an excellent showing this season.

Bouts have been arranged with West Point, Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Cornell and Pennsylvania.

A triangular meet has been arranged between the University of Pennsylvania, Harvard and Tech. Also a quadrangular meet will be held with Harvard, Yale, Cornell and Tech. Columbia and Tech will hold a dual meet on March 3, and also another on March 18 in New York.

The Tech team will also compete for the Morris medal at the New York Athletic Association's meet on March 11.

WILL AID THE STRIKERS.

PAWTUCKET, Jan. 7.—Under the auspices of the Pawtucket A. C. a first-class athletic entertainment will be held Tuesday night for the benefit of the Fall River strikers. There will be three boxing bouts, wrestling and a general vaudeville show. Martin Canole will be master of ceremonies.

HOLY CROSS WILL HAVE STRONG FIVE

Special to the Sunday American.

Worcester, [illegible] started in with a rush at Holy Cross, and in a week's time the first [illegible] that with the University of Pennsylvania, will be played in Mechanics Hall.

The meeting of the teams marks the resuming by the two colleges of athletic relations, which have been severed for several years past.

Thus far two games have been played and won in easy fashion. The contests served to try out the squad and showed clearly who will don the purple and white during the rest of the season.

FIRST BIG CUBAN AUTO CARNIVAL OPENS FEB. 8.

International Automobile Racing Association Arranges Interesting Program, Including Road Race, for Its Initial Affair

The International Automobile Racing Association of Cuba, which was organized about a year ago, has decided to give their first annual road race and carnival commencing February 8. The races will include short races in heats and three motor boat races, a night float parade on the famous Prado [illegible] which will be known as the Battle of flowers, for which event the Prado will be brilliantly illuminated, and it is expected the famous flower parade of Nice will be duplicated by the Cubans, as they intend to provide carloads of flowers for decorative and pelting purposes. The best decorated machines will be awarded prizes.

A great road race will be given from Havana to San Cristobal and return, a distance of over 100 miles over a splendid government built road. The entire road is marked by kilometre posts.

The officers of the International Racing Association of Cuba are Enrique J. Conill, president; [illegible] G. Rafael, treasurer; J. B. [illegible] assistant treasurer; J. F. Toraya [illegible] engineer; J. de Arms, [illegible] agent; R. [illegible] Mendoza, secretary; Honore Laine [illegible] secretary, and R. Bernous [illegible] secretary, and W. J. Morgan, 116 Nassau street, New York, tournament representative, who will have the tournament and tests in charge in the United States.

Conill a Well-Known Cuban.

Mr. Conill is a well known Cuban and one of the wealthiest young men of the island, being the Standard Oil representative. Most of the other young men who act as officers of the association figured in the Cuban-Spanish war, Messrs. Conill and Laine being on the staff of Gomez. Mr. Laine being captured by General Weyler while carrying a message to Havana [illegible] was ordered shot, but through the intervention of France, which country [illegible] him as a citizen, his life was spared, although he was sent to Morro [illegible]

W. J. Morgan became interested in the [illegible] last Summer, and after [illegible] meetings with President Conill [illegible] advised him to go to Cuba and [illegible] President Palma [illegible] the way of getting [illegible] government for the races. It [illegible] Minister of Education was [illegible] the Cubans to give the new speedmaker a too warm reception and that it would [illegible] Mr. Morgan was accompanied by S. A. Miles, general manager of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers, and both were received by President Palma with the utmost cordiality.

Superior Road for Racing.

After a conference the concession was granted to the International Automobile Racing Association of Cuba, and the way was made smooth for a tournament over a road which Messrs. Miles and Morgan declared to be the superior of any road in the world for automobile racing. The road lies through the village of Marianao, which is just outside of Camp Columbia, a few miles from Havana, to the village of San Cristobal. The road is a perfect race course, being constructed [illegible] width is the [illegible] twenty to thirty feet wide in most places. A speed of sixty-five miles per [illegible] is easily possible on [illegible] very little [illegible] years. The road is lined with royal palms, banana and pineapple groves and tobacco plantations, and it is doubtful if there is any road in the world that offers a scenic display as this road does.

The municipal authorities of the city of Havana will offer a $1,000 cup annually for a road race, and President Palma told Morgan that he was heartily in sympathy with the idea of his people inviting to Cuba representative sportsmen.

The American ambassador, H. G. Squires, gave valuable aid to the American visitors [illegible] President Palma [illegible] Squires is an enthusiastic automobilist and owns three machines.

Will Take Charge of Tourney.

The minister of public works, Secretary Diaz, spoke of the $4,000,000 appropriation by the government for good roads in Cuba, and he said he thought that a large [illegible] Congress for the [illegible] good roads. Diaz speaks English fluently, and assured Morgan [illegible] Secretaries Mendoza and Laine with President Conill, will take charge of the Cuban tournament and will ask the American ambassador to act as referee. Entry blanks will be out in a few days for the Cuban tournament and can be obtained from W. J. Morgan, No. 116 Liberty street, New York.

RHEUMATISM

IS NOT A SKIN DISEASE.

Several years ago I was afflicted with what the doctors called Sciatic Rheumatism, or Lumbago, suffering the most intense agony at times, and being confined to my bed about a year, although four of the best physicians (one of whom was my father) attended me during my illness. They could give me only temporary relief, and I think they tried about all the remedies known to medical science, dosing me with strong medicine until my stomach got into such a condition that I could digest nothing, and neither myself nor my friends had any hope of my recovery. I was persuaded to try S. S. S., and before finishing the first bottle I found that I had the right remedy. I continued to take it until it cured me perfectly. This was about nine years ago, and I have been in splendid health ever since.

Murfreesboro, Tenn. J. D. MANSON.

I was terribly afflicted with Rheumatism for eighteen months, and during my sickness tried the skill of many good physicians, all of whom pronounced my case hopeless. I was for a year in such a helpless condition that I was unable to dress or feed myself. I had filled at different times 52 prescriptions [illegible] suggested by friends, none of them [illegible] me any relief. I finally decided to try S. S. S. [illegible] the first dose while hobbling about on crutches. After [illegible] two bottles I found so much relief [illegible] the use of one crutch, and a faithful continuance of the medicine relieved me of the other crutch, and shortly afterwards enabled me to go to my work. I have had no return of Rheumatism, although this was five years ago. J. O'MALLEY,

2135 N. Senate Ave. Indianapolis, Ind

Fiery liniments, drawing plasters and penetrating oils never cured a case of Rheumatism; because it is not a local or skin disease, but a disease of the blood caused by a sour, acid condition of that vital fluid. The kidneys and bowels get weak, the liver torpid, and the poisonous accumulations that should pass off through the usual channels of nature are absorbed by the blood and distributed into the muscles, joints and nerves through the circulation, producing inflammation and swelling of these parts, excitement of the nerves and other painful and disagreeable symptoms of the disease. Rheumatism sufferers look with dread upon the winter season with its damp, cold, changing weather, for the first slight exposure is liable to bring on an attack, and the sharp, cutting pains and feverish, swollen joints and muscles make life miserable with almost unbearable torture. Local applications will often give relief for a little while, but can do no permanent good, because the trouble is not within their reach; and even while the symptoms are being relieved by such treatment the blood is becoming more heavily charged with the uric acid poison, and the next attack will be more severe. S. S. S. cures this disease by arousing to proper action all the sluggish organs and going into the blood, driving out all the acid and poisonous matter, renewing and strengthening it, and toning up the entire system by its fine tonic effect. It contains no Potash or other harmful minerals, but is purely vegetable and is recognized everywhere as the surest and safest blood purifier. Our book on Rheumatism will be mailed free, and our physicians will give medical advice to all sufferers, without charge.

THE WORLD'S SKIN CURE

Cuticura

Sold Wherever Civilization Has Penetrated

From a small beginning in the simplest form, Cuticura Remedies have become the greatest curatives of their time, and, in fact, of all time, for nowhere in the history of medicine is to be found another approaching them in popularity and sale.

In every clime and with every people Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills have met with the same reception. They have conquered the world. By rail and sail, by caravan, by saddle, and on the backs of human beings, they have made their way to the farthermost parts of the earth.

There seems to be something about Cuticura Remedies which invites the confidence of mankind. National peculiarities, European, Eastern, and Asiatic teachings and traditions seem to have no adverse influence upon them. Hence they are to be found in every part of the world, and the sight of them in the bazaars and native shops of foreign lands has inspired the American traveller with patriotic emotions second only to those produced by the contemplation of his country's flag.

Send your name to-day; you will get by return mail postpaid FREE To Try a pair of Magic Foot Drafts, the great Michigan Discovery, which has proven such a remarkably safe and sure cure for rheumatism of all kinds that they are now being extensively imitated abroad as well as in this country. In England infringement against Magic Foot Drafts has recently been enjoined by the courts, thus protecting rheumatic sufferers against imitations liable to be injurious.

Magic Foot Drafts are worn inside the stocking (without the least inconvenience), and they cure rheumatism, chronic or acute, in every part of the body by absorbing uric acid and other impurities from the blood through the large foot pores. Thousands of letters from cured rheumatics—some of them the toughest old chronics in the country—can be seen by anyone calling at our offices. If the Drafts cure all these people, why shouldn't they cure you? Write to-day to Magic Foot Draft Co., [illegible] Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich. You will get the Drafts by return mail. If you are satisfied with the relief they give, send us one dollar. If not, send nothing. You Decide. A valuable book (in colors) on rheumatism comes free with the Drafts. Send no money, only your name.

PRESIDENT HAD A CONFERENCE ON DEFICIT.

Failure of Secretary Shaw's Theories Results in Drop of Millions of Expected Funds—Leaders Are Anxious

INTERSTATE TRAFFIC WAS ALSO DISCUSSED

Senators Are Known to Be Opposing the Administration, and Plans Are Being Made by Them to Defeat Its Projects

Special to the Sunday American.

Washington, Jan. 7.—"The President says that at the conference held with the leaders of the House and Senate to-day he discussed with them various matters of policy. He discussed the tariff and interstate commerce matters. There will be other conferences."

This is the official announcement of the doings of the big conference at the White House, called for 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Neither Senator Elkins nor Senator Foraker, of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, was at the conclave, but both of them knew what was uppermost in the President's mind as proved by the direct question put to Senator Elkins when talking over the question of regulating railroad rates.

Senator Foraker to Senator Elkins: "What about these bills to fix rates and regulate railway traffic?"

Senator Elkins: "We propose to take up all the bills next Friday at the regular meeting of the Senate committee."

Conference on Treasury.

The President, it appears, really called the conference because of the condition of the treasury and the failure of the theories of Secretary Shaw and the experts to account for the deficit of $72,000,000 in January. An equally strong reason was that he knew that some of the Senators, powerful in influence, had been ignoring his recommendations for legislation affecting the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the regulation of railway rates, as for instance in the Hearst bill. It will be recalled that when the deficit was $14,000,000, exclusive of the $50,000,000 for the Panama Canal, last July, Secretary Shaw and the other experts said:

"Oh, well, the receipts always fall off at this time of the year, but they improve greatly in the Fall and Winter."

The Fall came and much of the Winter has gone, and the deficit is said to be $72,000,000, an increase of $8,000,000. The President talked all this over to-day with Speaker Cannon, Representative Grosvenor, Senator Allison, Representatives Tawney and Payne, Senators Spooner and Platt of Connecticut, and others.

Tawney "Whip" of the House.

Representative Tawney is the whip of the House. Senator Allison is the chairman of the steering committee of the Senate, and these two gentlemen usually know the temper of their houses respectively on any proposed legislation. Senator Allison is an expert on tariff and representative Payne of the ways and means committee is another expert on the tariff and expenditures.

According to the official statement therefore the President had with him the gentlemen who could tell him about legislation on railroads and all about deficits and the way to meet them.

It is said that the conference was not harmonious in the sense that there was not an absolute agreement with the Presidential view of pushing legislation he had recommended in his message.

HEARST COAL SUIT ARGUMENTS ON FEBRUARY 7.

Final Hearing in Proceeding Against Trust Set on That Date at the Request of the Attorneys for the Defendants

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Arguments in the case of Representative William Randolph Hearst against the Coal Trust will be heard by the Interstate Commerce Commission February 7 at Washington. The committee postponed the final hearing, which was set for January 6 at the request of the attorneys for the coal roads.

Two other important interstate questions are also set for final argument in the near future. The differential case, involving contentions between New York and Boston shippers and railroads, comes up January 25 for argument, and the closing presentations in the uniform bill of lading case will be made January 31.

WORCESTER GETS NEW ENGLAND FAIR

Worcester, Jan. 7.—At the annual meeting of the trustees of the Agricultural Society, held to-day, it was decided to hold a fair some time during the coming year, the date to be decided later. It was also decided to again hold the fair in conjunction with the New England Society, if arrangements can be made. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for both fairs.

DEWEY FOR YOUNG MEN IN THE NAVY

Washington, Jan. 7.—"It is imperative," writes Admiral Dewey to Secretary of the Navy Morton, "that steps be taken to promote the younger officers in the navy to command and flag ranks, thereby prolonging their tenure of responsible commands and ensuring in the highest ranks officers who have had experience in other than subordinate duties."

PRESIDENT NAMES HIS FORMER RIVAL

Washington, Jan. 7.—John B. Robinson, whom the President has named to be United States judge for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, a life position, worth $7,500 a year, was an active candidate against Mr. Roosevelt for the assistant secretaryship of the navy in 1897.

GENERAL MILES TELLS WHAT HIS POSITION IN THE STATE WILL BE

By Boston American Staff Photographer.

Gov. Douglas' Staff and New Photograph of Gen. Miles.

This remarkable picture was taken immediately after the inauguration of Governor Douglas and is the first photograph of his new staff in full uniform. Reading from left to right the men are:

Front row—Adjutant-General William Stopford, Surgeon-General William H. Devine, Judge Advocate-General Charles W. Bartlett, Commissary-General William B. Emery, Assistant Adjutant-General William C. Capelle, Assistant Quartermaster-General Emil Zaider.

Rear row—Inspector-General of Rifle Practice Charles H. Cole, Jr., Assistant Inspector-Generals Henry L. Kincaide and Winthrop M. Merrill, Aides-de-Camp Robert J. Crowley, Daniel W. Packard, William L. Mitchell and Patrick F. O'Keefe.

General Miles, Military Advisor of the Governor, Will Work for Improvement of Militia.

Governor Douglas expects to receive from the War Department to-morrow a letter in response to his official request, detailing Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles to report to him for duty in this State. Immediately upon receipt of the letter he will designate General Miles as acting inspector-general of his staff.

There have been many conflicting stories relative to the position General Miles will occupy and the work he will do for Governor Douglas. The following statement from the General himself, dictated to a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, shows just what he will do and what he hopes to accomplish:

By General Miles.

"I shall come here on detail from the War Department, and shall be the representative of that department. I shall come on my rank, and as Lieutenant General of the United States Army, on duty. I shall not be chief of Governor Douglas's staff. There seems to be considerable misunderstanding about that title. The State law says that the Adjutant General shall be the chief of staff, and, therefore, the chief of staff must be Adjutant-General. The Governor wished me to take the position of Adjutant-General, but I could not accept it on account of other engagements.

"I shall be ranking officer on duty for the Governor, and, upon occasions of public appearance, it would be proper for me to take precedence over the other staff officers.

Staff to Be "Happy Family."

"But I do not anticipate any trouble on that score. I think the staff will be a 'happy family.' My position is to be that of military adviser to the Governor. You will note that the Governor says in his message:

"'It is my intention to have General Miles at once make a thorough inspection of the organized militia of the State. He will report in writing what changes in our militia laws and methods of administration are, in his judgment, desirable to promote its efficiency as a part of the national guard, and to obtain the benefits of national co-operation and assistance.'

"I shall begin this work of inspection very soon. It will be thorough, and I shall not only look into the matters pertaining to the staff, but also to regiments and companies.

To Investigate Thoroughly.

"I shall look into conditions in the storehouses, armories and arsenals; inspect clothing, equipment and all military property of the State. A report of findings will go to the Governor, accompanied by recommendations for such reforms as in my judgment seem necessary or desirable.

"It may be decided to mobilize the State militia, and, in that event, I would command. It is my intention to attend brigade encampments and carefully note the manner in which they are handled."

COURT SAYS ABEEL MUST SERVE SENTENCE

Decision Against Young Man Who Won Girl's Love by Representing Himself as a Member of the Goelet Family

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Jan. 7.—James Neilson Abeel, under sentence to the Elmira Reformatory for forgery in connection with his efforts to establish a fictitious identity as "J. Ogden Goelet, Jr.," a supposed member of the Goelet family, and as such to win the affections of Eleanor Anderson, a beautiful young woman who was telegraph operator in the Grand Hotel, must serve his sentence, according to a decision handed down by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. The sentence was for an indeterminate term.

The charge of forgery against Abeel, who is the son of a wealthy Texan, was based upon the fraudulent signature of James B. Van Every, vice-president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, to a note commending "J. Ogden Goelet" to the courtesy of all employes as a friend of the management of the company. Through this note and his claims of friendship with Reginald Vanderbilt and other wealthy young men, Abeel became acquainted with Miss Anderson and won her promise to marry him.

83 YEARS OLD AND FAITHFUL TO HER EARLY LOVE.

Miss Sylvia Goddard, of Worcester, Never Married, Holding Dear the Memory of Dead Sweetheart of Her Girlhood

Worcester, Jan. 7.—A story of life-long fidelity to the man she loved in her young womanhood has been brought to light here in the death of Miss Sylvia Goddard. Miss Goddard was 83 years 8 months and 23 days old, and through all the years she remained faithful to the man she loved when a mere girl, and who died while he was still a young man.

The heart interest of Miss Goddard's story was never known until March 12, 1904, when she celebrated her eighty-third anniversary. At that time she was asked why she had never married, and after much deliberation she replied:

"I never told any one before why I did not marry, but the reason is the man to whom I was engaged died before we could wed. He was a good man, with a promising future, and we loved each other devotedly.

"It was simply not to be. He was called away—my lover, my heart and soul's mate. There never could be another man like him. I thought so then and I do yet. He is waiting for me, and when my usefulness here is ended I will go to the home he has prepared."

Since her last illness Miss Goddard has been waiting patiently for the time when God would call on her to join her lover of the olden days. Her life has been an exemplification of the consistency of true woman's love and of faith that never dies.

TO FOLLOW PEARY WITH WIRELESS

New York, Jan. 7.—Work on a wireless telegraph station in the Brooklyn Navy Yard will soon be begun, to enable Commander Robert E. Peary to keep in touch with civilization during his next attempt to plant the flag at the North Pole. At the navy yard it is said Commander Peary will erect wireless stations after he leaves the Labrador coast, to keep in touch with the nearest station on the mainland as he proceeds northward.

VATICAN TO PROBE HAVANA TROUBLE

Rome, Jan. 7.—The Vatican has decided to send an apostolic visitor to the diocese of Havana in connection with the trouble between Mgr. Chappelle, Archbishop of New Orleans and former papal delegate to Cuba, and Mgr. Brodrick, former auxiliary Bishop of Havana.

COURT SUSTAINS BRIGHAM WILL

By a decision of the full bench of the Supreme Court yesterday, the validity of the gift made by Peter Bent Brigham for the founding of a hospital for sick persons in indigent circumstances was sustained. The fund, which has been accumulating since the death of Mr. Brigham in 1877, now amounts to about $5,000,000.

The present case, which is the last of a long series, was on a petition of Edmund D. Codman and others, trustees under Mr. Brigham's will, asking for instructions to interpret the will. The heirs contended that the gift was void and against the rule relating to perpetuities. The Supreme Court rules, as did the Federal Courts, that the gift does not offend the rule. The case will be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States.

WAR VETERAN DEAD.

Milford, N. H., Jan. 7.—Captain John M. Stanyan, well known in Grand Army circles, is dead, in his seventy-sixth year, of old age.

HASTINGS TO TAKE LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Special to the Sunday American.

Salem, Jan. 8.—Joseph Hastings, known as Edward Sullivan, under indictment by the Essex County Grand Jury for the murder of Mrs. Dora E. Trask in Beverly on March 3, last, will not have to face a jury in the Superior Criminal Court here to-morrow and stand trial for his life. His counsel A. P. White and Edward J. Carney, have offered to have him plead guilty to murder in the second degree, and District Attorney W. Scott Peters has accepted the plea. He will be sentenced to State Prison for life.

FILIPINO PARDONED.

Washington, Jan. 7.—The President has pardoned Juan Gutierrez, a native Filipino who was convicted by a military commission of having killed prisoners, and first sentenced to death, and then to life imprisonment.

The President's action is based upon information that the testimony upon which Gutierrez was convicted was unreliable, being alleged part of a conspiracy to get him out of the way; and also because of the subsequent service rendered the government of the United States in the suppression of the Philippine insurrection.

DEATH IN VAT.

Keene, N. H., Jan. 7.—As a result of falling into a scalding vat of lye, Philip Gaudette, an employe of the Boston & Maine R. R., died to-day. He is survived by a widow and four children.

OVERDOSE FATAL.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 7.—Dr. Alfred Tygesson, for five years a physician of Boston, is dead here from an overdose of morphine.

GOVERNOR AMONG CLAFLIN MOURNERS

The public funeral of ex-Governor William Claflin, who died on Thursday, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the Newtonville Methodist Episcopal Church. The burial will be in the Claflin tomb in Newton Cemetery, and will be private.

There will be no pallbearers. Governor W. L. Douglas, Lieutenant Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., ex-Governors Bates, Long, Brackett, Boutwell and Crane are expected to attend the services at the church. Committees from both branches of the Legislature will attend the funeral.

VITAL STATISTICS ESCAPE THE BLAZE

Springfield, Jan. 7.—The vaults in the offices of the city clerk, city treasurer and tax collector in the city hall building, which was gutted by fire yesterday, were examined to-day, and it is believed that the city records and other valuable documents are safe.

The door of the assessors' vault was left open and all the records and papers of this department were destroyed.

CORTELYOU SAILS ON THE CANOPIC

Chairman George B. Cortelyou of the Republican National Committee sailed from Boston for the Mediterranean yesterday on the White Star liner Canopic. Mr. Cortelyou said that he was going abroad for a rest and he refused to discuss the question whether he had been offered a place in the Cabinet. He will remain abroad about two months. Charles Francis Adams was a passenger also.

CURLEY NOT TO RUN FOR THE HOUSE AGAIN.

Tammany Club Leader Says Former Representative Good Will Be Nominated for the Vacancy by Ward 17 Democrats

Thomas F. Curley will not be a candidate for re-election to the seat in the House of Representatives from which he was ousted by that body on the eve of his release from Charles street jail. This announcement was made to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter by one of the Tammany Club leaders, who said:

"Former Representative Jeremiah J. Good will be the Democratic candidate to succeed Thomas F. Curley in the Legislature from Ward 17.

Good is a leading lieutenant of the Curleys in the ward. A Democratic nomination there is the equivalent of election. Curley's friends say he could be renominated and re-elected, but that the Legislature would again unseat him.

The feeling at the State House is indicated by the petition of William J. Tyler and others, filed by Representative Thayer, of Boston, asking for a law which will bar from elective office any man who has served, within five years, in the State prison, house of correction, county or city jail, any term for criminality. If such a law is passed before February 14, when the special election to choose a Representative to fill the vacant seat will be held, it would bar Curley from the Legislature without any further action by the House.

The Tammany Club will meet to-night to select a candidate to succeed Leader Curley.

GOVERNOR DOUGLAS IS IN CHARGE AT STATE'S HELM.

New Executive Has Taken Hold of Duties With His Usual Vigor, and Already He Has Systematized His Work

The new administration, with Governor Douglas in command, is now in full swing at the State House. In State House circles the Governor's message is still the principal topic of discussion. It is the consensus of opinion that it is a State paper of strong and positive character, replete with evidence of virile and up-to-date statesmanship. It is called a departure from the old lines, inasmuch as it handled new subjects in a forcible manner and tackled the old problems with a vigor that indicates a disposition to settle them, if possible.

The Governor has taken up his new duties with his accustomed vigor. He will be in his office from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. daily, with the exception of Saturday and Sunday. Saturday he will devote to his private business and Sunday he will spend at home.

WILL MANAGE THE BROWN SENIOR BALL

Providence, R. I., Jan. 7.—President C. H. Kingman of the senior class, Brown University, announced to-day the names of the committee which will have charge of the ball to be given by the class, June 19, as follows:

Newton P. Hutchison, chairman; Chester C. Waters, George B. Bullock, Samuel T. Bartlett, Colgate Hoyt, Jr., A. N. Stonegrave, H. S. Steadman, Frank S. Cook, Edgar A. Beatty, Frank E. Marble.

$1000 FOR BURGLARS IN POSTOFFICE LOOT

Portland, Me., Jan. 7.—Burglars entered the postoffice at Freeport early to-day, blew open the safe and obtained $800 in stamps, $150 in money and a check for $50.

GIBRALTAR SHAKEN.

Gibraltar, Jan. 7.—An earthquake shock, which lasted for a few seconds, was felt at 4:55 this morning.

BIG BUSINESS IN REAL ESTATE PROMISED.

Heavy Aggregate of Transactions for the Initial Week of the Year, With a Number of Unusually Important Deals

EDISON COMPANY IS A HEAVY PURCHASER

Buys the Property Which It Now Occupies, in Head Place, Valued at $200,000. Extensive Winthrop Sales

In the real estate market the new year opened with promise of big business, backed up by a heavy aggregate for the initial week. Already there have been several important transactions within the city limits, one the transfer of property to the Wyzansky Trust, so-called, and listed by the assessors at $103,700, located in the South End; another, the sale to the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of the property now occupied by it in Head place, and valued at $200,000. New ownership is announced for a group of buildings valued at $66,000 on St. Botolph street. In Winthrop, 1,500,000 square feet of land, 2,250,000 square feet of flats, together with seven buildings, assessed at $123,000, have been sold for something like $300,000.

No. 14 East Springfield street has been sold by George E. Mackintire to James Walker. This property consists of a brick dwelling and 1,190 square feet of land, all assessed on a valuation of $5,300. The price paid was slightly in excess of the assessors' figures.

South Boston Transfer.

Two properties, numbered respectively 575 Tremont street and 24 Montgomery street, owned by George E. Mackintire, have also changed hands.

To William E. Martin has been conveyed an interest in the estate of Martin J. Field, the grantor being Margaret Staines. A part of this property is located in the South End, being numbered 26 and 28 West Canton street, the parcel having a valuation of $8,000.

A South Boston transaction of size is the transfer to the Union Scale Company by Walter S. Heilborn of a large brick and frame building on 39,250 square feet of land, bounded by I street, East First and East Second street, valued at $33,800. It is understood that the price paid was in excess of this amount.

William A. Packard and James G. Pine have sold the property numbered 21 Vine street, Roxbury, for Henry Gurtha. The parcel has an assessed valuation of $13,200.

Another transfer effected through the same office for the same person was the sale of No. 23 Dundee street to James Walker. The assessed valuation is $5,200.

Recent Transactions.

Mr. Walker has also purchased the property numbered 81 Mountain avenue, Dorchester, valued at $3,100.

The books of the Real Estate Exchange yesterday contained records of the following transactions:

OBJECT TO TAX FOR MAIN STREET WORK

Special to the Sunday American.

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 7.—There are rumblings of dissatisfaction over the method by which it is proposed to pay for the widening of Main street in this city. The commission has decided that the work shall be done under the so-called betterment act, and an assessment zone has been fixed, which takes in a lot of property, some of which is located fully a quarter of a mile from Main street.

Some of the owners of this property say that they are not especially benefited by the work, and contend that if they are to be taxed for it it would be only fair to tax the property of the entire city.

FATHER TO BRING PARSONS HOME

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Percy G. Parsons, a lawyer of Boston, who jumped from the ferryboat Montclair while crossing the Hudson river Wednesday afternoon last, and who has been in Bellevue Hospital since, was arraigned before Magistrate Crane, in the Centre Street Police Court to-day, charged with attempted suicide. He was released in the custody of his father, L. G. Parsons, of No. 20 Kilby street, Boston. He was taken to Boston by his father.

BOURNE COLONY

Overlooking Buzzards Bay.

This colony is in the heart of civilization, in the State that has more cities than any other state in the Union. Hundreds of families have secured homes and made themselves independent for life by joining our colony. We had 2,500 acres of the best land in Mass., close to village, electrics, steam cars and salt water. There are 1,500 acres left. Those who wish to join the colony pay $1 down and $1 per week for 99 weeks, then they receive a deed of ten acres of land. In the meantime, they can make a good living on the land, if they wish. A house can be built for $50 upward. G. W. BARTLETT, 89 Court st.

The Edgar S. Gray Schools
Of 63 Court Street,
PRESENT A PRACTICAL
Automobile Course

Now is the time to enroll in order to be ready for a position in the early Spring. Our auto car was out on the road, regardless of the recent snow storm. This goes to show that the automobile can be used at times when the horse and team are disabled. All who enroll now may place their names at the head of the list in the employment department. Therefore, there will be no delay in securing a position immediately after graduating. Make all applications to Dept. D, 63 Court st., room 4. Open 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. daily.

The Edgar S. Gray Schools
Of 61 Court Street
PRESENT AN Electrical Engineering Course

For young men of intelligence and application. Our newly furnished rooms at 61 Court st. cannot be equalled as far as equipment is concerned. Students who enroll now will be placed in positions with either the Edison Electric Light Co., New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., Boston Elevated Railway, Boston & Northern Street Railway, Boston & Worcester Street Railway, General Electric Company or some other electrical concern. Day and evening sessions. Positions secured; salary $14 to $25 weekly. Make application to Dept. E, 61 Court st., days, and at 63 Court st., evenings.

The Edgar S. Gray Schools
Of 17 Hollis Street,
Present a Shop and Road Practise
Automobile Course

For young men of limited education, who do not care for the theory, but simply the practise. The care, management, operation and repairs of electric, steam and gasolene automobiles are taught day or evening. Make application to 17 Hollis st., or Dept. H, 63 Court st., room 4. Positions are secured to graduates of this department, but the salary depends upon the ability of the person taking this course.

SHORTHAND, typewriting, bookkeeping, etc., individual instruction, day and evening; none too old to learn; call or send for circular. BOSTON COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, 372 Boylston st.

FEAR THAT NAN PATTERSON, DENIED BAIL, MAY GO INSANE

Snapshots taken especially for the Boston American.

Nan Patterson, during her brief period of freedom from her cell in the Tombs, on her way to court.

SEES ELECTRIC CHAIR IN HER DREAMS.

Close Watch Being Kept in the Tombs on Actress Awaiting Third Trial on Charge of Murdering "Caesar" Young

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Jan. 7.—In her dreams Nan Patterson, lying in the Tombs, accused of the murder of Bookmaker "Caesar" Young, her despondency accentuated by the refusal of Justice Greenbaum of the Supreme Court to permit her to be admitted to bail, has seen the electric chair.

After her counsel, Abraham Levy, had visited her with the news that she would not be admitted to bail, the girl paced her cell for hours. At last she retired and, after tossing restlessly for a long time, sank into a troubled sleep.

Suddenly she awoke with a great start, and the watcher Warden Flynn had placed at her cell door, for fear that her mind would give way under the strain, heard her cry piteously:

"Take it away! I don't want to see it! Take it away!"

The watcher sent for the matron, and when she arrived Nan was still pleading: "Take it away!"

"Take what away?" asked the matron.

"The electric chair," Nan gasped, and fell back unconscious.

Started Again in Terror.

The matron soothed and comforted her and again she went to sleep, only to start again in terror and cry out, amid hysterical sobs:

"I see Rand! He is crushing me! Spare me! Spare me! Don't be so cruel!"

All night long the hysterical fit lasted, and in the morning the girl was so exhausted and so listless and her face was so expressionless that Warden Flynn is afraid that, in spite of all precautions, her mind will give way from sheer despair.

The refusal to admit her to bail was an awful blow to the girl. She had expected confidently that she would be freed until the time arrived for her next trial.

She had been under a terrible strain during the two trials, the first of which was ended by the sudden illness of a juror and the second by a disagreement, and only the hope and expectation that her application to be admitted to bail would be granted kept her up.

May Go to Higher Courts.

Her counsel, Mr. Levy, was bitterly disappointed also. He said that he had thought that the court would consider the seven months that Nan already had passed in jail as sufficient reason for admitting her to bail now.

"The community cannot suffer if the poor girl gets out," said Mr. Levy. "All I can say now is that I shall make a move in another direction."

What this new move will be Mr. Levy declined to say, but it is probable that he will apply to the Supreme Court outside of New York county or to the Federal courts for her release under habeas corpus proceedings.

In his decision refusing to admit Nan to bail, Justice Greenbaum said:

"I do not presume upon this application to pass upon the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, but I am of the opinion that the situation, so far as bail is concerned, is the same as though no trial had as yet been had, and as no reasons have been submitted which would justify me in departing from the well-recognized practice, to refuse to admit to bail in capital cases, the application must be denied and the prisoner remanded to the custody of the warden of the City Prison."

SUNDAY CONCERTS AT THE SOMERSET

Beginning to-night a series of high class Sunday night concerts will be given at the Hotel Somerset throughout the season, Alfred S. Ameer, manager of the hotel announces. Carl Behr, one of the best known of Boston's musicians, and his excellent orchestra will furnish the instrumental portion of the concerts.

To-night Miss Sarah Belle Huff, contralto, will sing, and a concert of the utmost charm is assured. Miss Huff's selections will include an aria by Mercadante and folk songs. Mr. Behr will play several zither solos.

CROSSING TENDER DIES IN SHANTY

Providence, R. I., Jan. 7.—John Donahue, aged thirty-nine, a crossing tender, known as "Big Jack," was found dead today sitting in a chair in his shanty at the Hartford avenue crossing of the Consolidated road in Olneyville. Death was due to heart failure.

KNIFE IS ONLY SURE REMEDY FOR CANCER.

Dread Disease Non-Contagious and Is Not Hereditary, Says Report of Harvard Cancer Commission, Now Prepared

Cancer is not contagious nor hereditary and can be best cured by the knife, according to the conclusions arrived at by the Cancer Commission of Harvard Medical College, composed of seven physicians who have been experimenting on the disease for the past four years and whose report is now in the hands of the printer. There is no other known cure except in the mildest cases, when the X-ray sometimes succeeds.

The research has been made with a fund of $100,000, left by Mrs. Caroline Brewer Croft to Harvard for this specific purpose. Some member of her family died of cancer and this caused her to leave money, hoping to benefit mankind by having a corps of experts thoroughly investigate the subject.

Those who form the commission are Dr. E. H. Nichols, Marlboro street; Dr. F. B. Mallory, Newbury street; Dr. Edwin A. Locke, Beacon street; Dr. Charles J. White, Marlboro street; Dr. W. H. Robey, Jr., Warren street, Roxbury; Dr. Tyzzer and Dr. Wels, now of New Orleans.

Dr. Nichols, who had charge of the laboratory work, which was done at Harvard Medical College and Massachusetts General Hospital, said to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter:

"Our work thus far has been to find the cause or origin of cancer, and we have been unable to do so, although we have exploded popular theories. When we know what life is, I think we will then know what cancer is. No more is known about its origin now than at the beginning of the Christian era. It is a supreme mystery. On present lines of investigation the cause of true cancer will never be learned. Our only hope is in some new method. No discovery has been made which offers any hope of cure of cancer which begins to compare with the surgeon's knife.

"Juts one thing can be done for cancer, and I wish it could be impressed on the public, for it would save thousands of lives; that is, get it out early and quickly. Cancer can be completely cured if the patient is operated on early and completely. Drugs have never cured cancer.

"Certain superficial cancers can be cured by the X-ray, but for deep cancers this method is of no value whatever.

"About fifteen years ago when it was discovered that many diseases were caused by bacteria some physicians believed that cancer might by caused by protozoa, an animal parasite. This opinion was a popular one and was formed because certain physicians found cancer bodies in cancer cells resembling very low forms of animal life.

"We have learned that these cancer bodies are excretions and have therefore exploded that theory. Others asserted that the cancer bodies were yeasts or vegetable parasites and were the direct cause of cancer, but our experiments prove that theory wrong. A third idea is that cancer is due to errors of development, and a great many facts make that probable."

SUPERIOR COURT CAN REVISE SENTENCE

That the Superior Court has power to revise a sentence was held by the full bench of the Supreme Court yesterday in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Afein Lobel.

The defendant was accused of libel, and was sentenced to a year. He took exceptions, but subsequently waived them, and it was arranged that he should be fined. Judge Bond ruled that he had no right to revise sentence, and the Supreme Court sustained the exception to the ruling taken by Lobel.

16 ARE INJURED IN TROLLEY WRECK

New York, Jan. 7.—A trolley car of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, carrying forty members of Adirondack Council of the Royal Arcanum, jumped the track on a curve at the foot of a steep hill in Douglass street, Brooklyn, early to-day, and was smashed, injuring sixteen of the occupants.

DEMOCRATIC JUDGE FOR RHODE ISLAND

Providence, R. I., Jan. 7.—The Superior Court of the State, which is to be reconstructed at the present session of the General Assembly, will contain at least one Democrat, Hon. Nathan W. Littlefield, of Pawtucket.

Justice Sweetland, of the Providence District Court, ex-Attorney General Stearns and William A. Morgan will be chosen, with two others not yet decided.

THINKS SUSPECTED ASSAILANT DROWNED

Taunton, Jan. 7.—State Detective Alfred B. Hodges to-day announced that he is convinced that Joseph Labrie, being sought as the possible assailant of Dr. Charles N. Raymond a week ago, was drowned not far from the scene of the assault. The man hunt will not be prosecuted further.

AGED 106, WALKS A MILE IN DEEP SNOW

Bangor, Me., Jan. 7.—Mrs. Lavina Cox, of Harrington, the oldest person in Maine, who will on January 12 celebrate the 106th anniversary of her birth, walked a mile last Friday, in cold weather, on a road a foot deep in snow, to visit her grandchildren, J. C. Shaw and Mrs. John Grover.

PETITION OF PARDON FOR BANKER JEWETT

Special to the Sunday American.

Lawrence, Jan. 7.—Friends of ex-President William S. Jewett have filed a petition with President Roosevelt praying for the release of Jewett from the Lawrence jail, where he has served the greater part of a seven-year sentence imposed by Judge Lowell in the United States Court. Jewett was the president of the Lake National Bank in Wolfboro, N. H., of the National Pemberton Bank of Lawrence and president of the Essex National Bank of Haverhill. He was found guilty in the United States Court of misapplying funds of the Lake National Bank of Wolfboro, New Hampshire, to the extent of $34,000, and on Oct. 31, 1899, began to serve his sentence. Jewett is ill and not expected to live out his term.

BATES DECLINES A BANQUET OF HONOR

Ex-Governor John L. Bates has declined the public dinner in his honor to which he was invited last week by 175 of the most honored citizens of Massachusetts.

In his letter of declination to Hon. John D. Long and others, which was his last official action as Governor, he says:

"This testimonial of regard is most gratifying and I desire through you to express my thanks. The sentiments to which they have subscribed say those things to me and of me which I esteem as conferring the highest honor that can be accorded to me.

"I entertain the deepest feelings of appreciation of this generous tribute, though I feel obliged to decline the further honor of the dinner so cordially suggested."

NEW YARN MILL FOR NORTH ATTLEBORO

North Attleboro, Jan. 7.—Preparations for the operation of the Spencer Yarn Company, which has just been formed, will begin to-morrow. The company will occupy the old mill at Adamsdale. The company is chartered under the laws of Rhode Island, and is capitalized at $50,000. Five hundred hands will be employed.

TO TRY MARYLAND ON MAINE COURSE

Washington, Jan. 7.—The Navy Department has decided to hold the speed trial of the armored cruiser Maryland over the new trial course off the coast of Maine on January 25. This will be the first time this course has been used. The contract calls for an average speed of twenty-two knots per hour.

WASHINGTON PASTOR ARRAIGNS NEW YORK SOCIETY.

The Rev. Dr. McConnell Says That the People of the City Have Worse Manners Than Any Others in the World

Washington, Jan. 7.—The Rev. Dr. S. D. McConnell, pastor of All Souls' Church, Sixty-sixth street and Madison avenue, New York, in an interview here, arraigns society in New York scathingly. He said the people of Manhattan Island are suffering from a dangerous disease that he calls "New Yorkitis." He said New Yorkers have worse manners than are to be found elsewhere in the world.

"Nobody with eyes trained to observe their surroundings can fail to note the deplorable decadence of public manners in this community," began Dr. McConnell, "and by that I mean New Yorkers in general, are living amid conditions which make the courtesies and kindnesses of life so difficult, as to be almost impossible of general observation.

"Of course, the conditions are occasioned largely by our congested population, and also by the physical characteristics of the city itself. Everybody and everything seems to move in the same direction at once—north or south and over Long Island.

"Hence, New Yorkers hardly go anywhere without pushing and crowding or even fighting as though negotiating a flying wedge in a football game."

ELECTORS TO CAST STATE'S VOTE TOMORROW.

Organize With Hon. W. W. Crapo, of New Bedford, as President, but Take No Action on the Choice of Messenger

The Massachusetts members of the Electoral College met at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the State House, but adjourned until to-morrow afternoon, when they will cast the sixteen votes of Massachusetts for Theodore Roosevelt and Charles W. Fairbanks for President and Vice-President, respectively, of the United States.

No action was taken on the choice of a messenger to carry the State's vote to Washington, on account of the absence of Elector W. A. Nye, of Bourne, who is unable to attend the meetings. The vacancy will be filled by Robert A. Hammond of Sandwich, who was suggested as Mr. Nye's substitute by William W. Crapo.

Promptly at 3 o'clock Secretary of State Olin called the college to order. Lieutenant-Governor Guild administered the oath to the members.

The Hon. W. W. Crapo of New Bedford was elected president of the college. Thomas Sherwin of Boston was elected clerk.

At 3:40 the college adjourned to Monday at 10:30 o'clock. Governor Douglas, through Secretary Olin, invited the college to visit him Monday, and the invitation was accepted.
